FRENCH PUT WATCH ON EBERT

FOREIGN OWNED ISLANDS PERIL TO U. S. DEFENSE

Trade Routes Also Are in Danger.

(This, the first of a series, gives reasons why the acquisition of island possessions, off the coasts of the United States, but now held by other powers, would be of advantage to the United States. If held by other powers, during war, these islands would be of great disadvantage to the United States. Their effect on trade and trade routes is discussed by a naval expert. His discussion will be continued tomorrow.)

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—American possession of the West Indies Islands, now owned by European nations, is regarded by the foremost strategists of the navy as of the utmost importance to our national security.

America, they hold, ought to control this natural outer barrier of defense to establish powerful naval bases in that region as a protection of the Panama canal and of continental United States and its trade routes, to prevent the islands from being employed as bases by an enemy.

Naval Bases Are Vital.

The attitude of the navy gives point to the movement, inaugurated by THE TRIBUNE, to purchase these valuable outposts from Great Britain and France. So long as they remain in foreign hands the United States cannot establish thereon the capital ship, submarine, and aircraft bases which would be vital to our adequate defense.

As long as they remain alien there can be no assurance that by some unforeseen contingency they would not pass into the hands of an enemy.

So vital is the matter deemed by the general board of the navy that the government is now seeking to acquire the best site obtainable under the circumstances for a naval base in the eastern West Indies. Proposed sites on islands not owned by Great Britain or France are to be inspected by Secretary of the Navy Denby and the naval strategists next spring.

Laid Mine Barrage.

The strategic importance of the West Indies to the United States was set forth in detail today in an interview accorded me by Capt. Sinclair Gannon, head of the plans division of the navy department and of the joint army and navy planning committee. He is the resourceful and intrepid officer who was awarded the distinguished service medal for laying the North sea mine barrage during the world war. I asked Capt. Gannon if he would answer certain questions and he replied:

"Fire!"

I asked him first why naval positions in the West Indies possess strategic importance.

"According to America's most eminent naval writer, Admiral Mahan, 'naval strategy has for its end to found, support and increase, as well in peace as in war, the sea power of a country,'" Capt. Gannon said.

Gives the British View.

"Sea power as here used embraces not only a nation's naval strength, but also a nation's ability to carry commerce on the high seas. Corbett, a noted British writer on naval subjects, tells us that naval strategy has for its purpose 'the employment of effective means against a maritime nation to deny it the resources of its sea borne trade,' and further, that the prime objective of naval strategy is 'to control communications,' that is, sea trade routes.

"The many trade routes which traverse the waters of the West Indies give to those islands strategic importance of vast proportions. And these trade routes are of paramount importance to the country having the most vital sea interests involved. A cursory study of a large scale map of the West Indies region shows the United States to be the country possessing the preponderance of interest in these waters.

U. S. Has Chief Interest.

"Of the five principal sea trade routes passing through and near the West Indies, four of them carry trade in which the United States has chief, if not exclusive interests, as distinguished from European interests."

The captain called me to a wall map of the Caribbean region and pointed out these trade routes, enumerating at the same time the vital necessities we obtain over them:

First route. Between the New England and middle Atlantic states and the east coast ports of South America. Over this route vessels bound directly to South America pass within a few hundred

DEFECTIVE RAIL WRECKS FLYER; NO ONE INJURED

A defective rail caused the wrecking of the Northwestern Limited crack train of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad between Chicago and St. Paul, Minn., between the Clybourn Junction and the Deering station early last night. No passengers were injured.

The express had slowed up in passing the Clybourn station and was making about twenty miles an hour when the defective rail caused the derailment of two sleeping cars and the diner on the rear end. The diner tilted over against the steel wall of a street viaduct, but neither of the other cars were overturned. Sleeping cars were sent out from Chicago and the passengers were transferred. The wreck caused no delay in traffic.

GANNA WALSKA DUE IN CHICAGO TODAY, REPORT

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Ganna Walska, wife of Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the board of directors of the International Harvester company, left for Chicago this afternoon, according to information obtained early tonight. Some of the servants at Mme. Walska's house at 101 East 94th street have also departed for Chicago, it is said.

It was reported in local musical circles today that Mme. Walska would make at least two appearances with the Russian opera singers, now in Chicago, singing the title rolé of "The Snow Maiden," and Philina in "Mignon." These statements were attributed to S. Hurok, manager of the Russian troupe of singers.

Most of the shades were drawn this afternoon in Mme. Walska's East 94th street dwelling. No information could be obtained there but the statement that Mme. Walska was not in.

J. A. HEMENWAY, EX-INDIANA U. S. SENATOR, DIES

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 10.—James A. Hemenway, former United States senator from Indiana, died tonight, according to word received here from Miami, Fla. Mr. Hemenway, who was 62 years old, had been in poor health for several years.

Mr. Hemenway and his family, accompanied by a personal physician, went to Miami last week. The trip was made in the hope that the climate might benefit Mr. Hemenway, but shortly after his arrival he suffered a relapse and his condition became serious. His wife, a son and daughter were with him when he died.

69th Victim of Chicago Speed Mania Is Dead

Clarence Steele, 37 years old, Chicago's sixty-ninth victim of the speed mania, died yesterday at the Illinois Central hospital from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile driven by Fred Messerschmidt, 1453 66th place, while crossing 63rd street at Dorchester avenue. Messerschmidt was not held.

WIFE IN VAIN PLEA TO BAIL BANKER

Her Word Jailed Him; Fights to Free Him.

Striving to atone for the one weak moment when, pressed for hours by the authorities, she had confessed the hiding place of her fugitive husband, Mrs. Anna Braslawsky spent most of last night out in the snowstorm in a feverish canvass of friends to obtain bonds for Eugene E. Braslawsky, indicted president of the defunct International State bank, who was brought back yesterday from New Orleans to face trial.

Mrs. Braslawsky, who on Feb. 3 attempted to end her life by slashing her throat with a safety razor blade when she realized that her confession meant her husband's imprisonment, was waiting at the Park row station when the Panama limited rolled under the shed yesterday noon.

Would He Forgive Her?

Would he forgive her? She paced nervously up and down the platform.

The train came to a stop and Detective Sergeants William Lang and Ray Gilso of the state's attorney's office swung from a coach with the banker, pale, and heavy eyed, wearily following them. Mrs. Braslawsky rushed to meet them.

"Gene!"

She became hysterical and kissed him again and again, sobbing with joy. She tore herself away and in her hysteria flung herself upon Sergt. Lang. Before that officer knew what was coming she had thrown her arms about his neck and kissed him.

Banker to Tell All Later.

All the way to the Criminal court building she clung to her husband's arm, dabbing the tears from her eyes and babbling questions as to his health and happiness. Questioned by Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas on the charge of embezzlement, Braslawsky admitted having dissipated $40,000 of the bank's funds.

"I will say no more now," he said. "When the time comes I will tell what I know. If there is anything wrong with the affairs of the bank it is due to bad investments and poor advice from the attorney in charge of the legal end of the business. I am in ill health. I need rest. I am in no condition to talk now."

While the former banker was closeted with Mr. Jonas, his wife flew up to the court of Chief Justice McKinley.

"Please let him come home, your honor," she pleaded. "He looks so ill. He needs my care. I sent him away and I was responsible for bringing him back. If you'll only let him come home I will guarantee to produce him when he is wanted.

"We have no money," sobbed the pleading wife, "but I will offer my life as security. Let me go to jail instead."

Remembering her attempt at suicide while in the custody of a police woman and fearing the excitement might reopen the wound in her throat, Judge McKinley summoned Mr. Jonas and directed him to see that every effort was made to obtain bond.

When Braslawsky's counsel, John M. Lowery, was unable after repeated efforts to post the required bond the banker was committed to the county jail.

Renews Her Efforts.

Attorney Lowery led Mrs. Braslawsky, weeping, from the building, but she refused to wait until morning to renew her efforts at gaining her husband's freedom.

Although the bank's shortage is placed at nearly $100,000, Braslawsky was indicted for the embezzlement of only $1,200. Orders have been issued for the arrest of E. T. Noonan, counsel for the bank, and other indictments are expected to be voted.

Real estate news will be found on pages 10 and 11 of part 2.

HARDING SKIDS PORK BARREL OUT OF REACH

Orders Army to Keep Within Budget.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, Dec. Feb. 10.—[Special.]—President Harding has outwitted the congressional pork brigade.

Congress learned today that he has informed Secretary of War Weeks to hold expenditures for rivers and harbors down to $27,000,000, the budget figure, during the next fiscal year, notwithstanding the fact that both houses have given their approval to a pork barrel of $56,000,000—just double the recommendation of the budget bureau.

Secretary Weeks, it is expected, will notify the army engineers to scale down rivers and harbors expenditures in such a way as to conform to the budget figures. The money remaining unexpended under the amount appropriated by congress will be turned back into the treasury to be disposed of as congress sees fit next year.

Acts to Save Army Bill.

The President, it is understood, has adopted this course because he is fearful that exercise of his veto power might bring unfortunate results. The rivers and harbors appropriation is incorporated in the army appropriation bill and in order to veto the pork barrel it would be necessary for him to veto the whole army bill. There is danger that such action would prevent the final passage of the army bill at the present session of congress.

Mr. Harding's move to block the heretofore invincible pork barrel is one of the most anomalous proceedings on record. In the past "treasury watchdogs" in congress have exerted their lung power to the nth degree in exhorting the executive branch of the government to practice economy. Now the shoe is on the other foot and the capitol may soon be treated to the interesting spectacle of congress denouncing the President and his subordinates for refusing to spend as much as it appropriates.

This unexpected development may raise an important constitutional issue, but it is generally believed that congress will find it difficult to compel Mr. Harding to spend money which he wants to save.

The Lure of Pork.

Careful analysis of the geographical distribution of pork as outlined by the army engineers sheds some interesting light on the lineup of the senate in the vote Thursday on the rivers and harbors section of the army bill. It demonstrates anew the irresistible lure of the pork barrel as a magnet for votes and furnishes some rather convincing evidence that log rolling is not a lost art. Only a few senators were able to resist the tempting baits dangled before them and some with a natural distaste for pork were forced to help shove along the barrel in order to gain approval for meritorious measures.

According to Gen. Taylor, chief of engineers, the $56,000,000 would be split up as follows:

For principal sea coast harbors, $20,244,760 for improvements; $7,757,500 for maintenance; for secondary harbors and coastwise channels, $7,299,550 for improvements; $1,127,500 for maintenance; for lake harbors and channels, $1,726,000 for improvements; $1,045,800 for maintenance; for the Mississippi river, $1,625,000 for improvement; $525,000 for maintenance; for the Ohio river, $7,000,000 for improvement; $526,000 for maintenance; for all other rivers, $5,217,820 for improvement; $2,089,480 for maintenance.

It is a noteworthy fact that approximately $22,000,000 of the $56,000,000 would be spent in the south, with the Mason and Dixon line and the Ohio river as the dividing line. This may account for the fact that the Dixie senators voted solidly for the $56,000,000 barrel.

How the East Stood.

The eastern seaboard, which received a big chunk of the appropriation, contributed only five votes—cast by Senator Lodge [Rep., Mass.], Senator Keyes [Rep., N. H.], Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], Senator Wadsworth [Rep., N. Y.], and Senator Weller [Rep., Md.]—against the barrel. The Pacific coast, which is also well taken care of in the appropriation, furnished one vote against it, that of Senator Poindexter [Rep., Wash.].

The middle west had a creditable record. Senators from this section ran the risk of sacrificing appropriations for meritorious projects in the great lakes and the Mississippi valley, but with only two exceptions they voted against the Underwood motion, designed to trim the barrel to budget size. The two exceptions were Senator Nelson [Rep., Minn.] and Senator Pomerene [Dem., Ohio].

Mother Glad Son Escapes Peggy's Toils

Boston, Mass., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—For the first time in forty-eight hours, Mrs. Mary Evans Spaulding, Boston society and club woman, is breathing easily.

Her good looking young captain of marines son, Evans Spaulding, Harvard, '15, is, temporarily at least, out of the toils of "that boa-constrictor."

That "boa-constrictor" is none other than Peggy Hopkins Joyce, thrice divorced star of the stage, whose sudden visit to Boston nearly brought collapse to Mrs. Spaulding.

"I hope that terrible-tempered, wilful woman doesn't pursue my boy to London," Mrs. Spaulding said tonight, at her home in Manchester-by-the-Sea. "Her visit to Boston was entirely of her own volition. She was not invited by me or by my son. She invited herself to our suite at the Copley-Plaza.

Invites Peggy to Suite.

"The first we knew of it was when the telephone rang and Evans answered. I nearly had heart failure when I heard him say: 'O, hello, Peggy. Yes, sure come right up.'

"I thought I had seen the last of her in New York some years back, when she had my son in her toils, and when her husband, Mr. Joyce, was having me shadowed in an effort to drag me and my boy into the disgraceful divorce proceedings.

"I asked Evans what on earth he meant by inviting her to our suite. He said: 'Well, mother, it's too bad and all that, but you know what Peggy is. If we don't ask her up she'll wreck the hotel. Peggy is rather difficult to handle when you cross her.'

"I couldn't for the life of me understand the purpose of her visit. When she first met Evans in New York she was married to Joyce. I heard that my son was her escort in various dancing places along Broadway. Stories began to reach home.

Attracted by Evans' Good Looks.

"I made a special trip to New York. I suspected that she was interested in Evans largely because he was so good looking and because he could dance so well.

"When I got to New York, I summoned Peggy. I asked her what she meant by going around with my son at a time when her divorce was the talk of the town. She told me frankly enough that she wasn't interested in Evans from a matrimonial viewpoint—he didn't have money enough.

"I asked her please to show more consideration for both of us, and she flew into a dreadful temper and frightened me out of my wits."

Was World War Hero.

During the war young Spaulding was a captain in the famous 6th regiment of marines. He enlisted as a private on the day America entered the war, went over to France as a first lieutenant, and came back a captain, with two citations for gallant conduct at Soissons and Belleau Wood.

While he was in New York he maintained bachelor apartments in East 59th street. Nightly he was a familiar figure in Broadway's jazzeries and almost every night was accompanied by the beauteous Peggy.

Evans sailed for London today. He is to represent Walker & Co. of Boston in that city. Before he got aboard the steamship Andania he denied he was to be the next husband of Peggy.

COAL MAN SHOT WHEN STRANGER INVADES HOME

Michael Kenny, 46 years old, 326 Wendell street, coal dealer, was shot and seriously wounded by a mysterious stranger who invaded his home last night. Police are puzzled by the shooting, since no attempt at robbery was discovered.

The wounded man was discovered lying on the kitchen floor, when his daughter, Sadie, and a girl chum, Miss Helen O'Malley, 358 West Oak street, returned to the home after attending a neighborhood motion picture house.

At the Henrotin Memorial hospital it was found that he had been shot through the right arm and the left side.

FEAR GERMAN PRESIDENT'S TRIP TO BADEN

Seize 2 More Towns; Nab Krupps' Chief.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Following the announcement that President Ebert will arrive in Karlsruhe Monday to consult with officials of the duchy of Baden about the seizure of Offenburg and Appenweier, the French are preparing extreme precautions to prevent the German president from entering the occupied territory and inciting trouble, as Chancellor Cuno did at Essen.

PRESIDENT EBERT.

The French garrison at Lauterburg, on the Rhine, has been instructed to watch President Ebert and take necessary measures to prevent him fomenting the population.

The French and Belgians agreed today to bar all German cabinet ministers from the Ruhr.

SEIZE TWO TOWNS

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ESSEN, Feb. 10.—The population of Elberfeld and Barmen tonight are within range of French artillery, which is stationed at Wulfrath, seven kilometers away. French infantry are now occupying in full force the important railway junction of Vohwinkel and the town of Lennep. Detachments today seized the villages of Dieringhausen and Osberghausen.

At Lennep at noon three platoons of infantry went through the manual of arms in the town square, but there were few onlookers. The military ceremony, staged to impress the townspeople, did not disturb the children from skipping rope, rolling hoops and playing hop scotch on the sidewalks, which they had marked out with chalk. In a resaurant I overheard a 5 year old asserting that the French were bringing war, and the father replied, "I hope not—not yet."

Every church bell in Lennep tolled as the soldiers left the square.

Dig Stumps for Fire.

In the new portion of the occupied territory I observed stumps in the woods blazed by a very recent chopping for fuel; as the French customs are in charge of the forests the people are forced to dig up stumps. Never before were such measures necessary here to obtain fuel.

No coal is going to Germany, but the French are reported to have delivered at the junction of Weddau, near Dusseldorf, twelve trains of coal, manned by a French railway corps. They will try later to send this up the Rhine, where railway workers at present are on strike because of the presence of French railway troops in the signal towers who are trying to learn the electric system.

Expel Krupps' Chief.

The superintendents of the Ahrenburg Phosphor mines were expelled today for their refusal to obey the general orders of Gen. Degoutte. The miners at the Phosphor mines, owned by Krupps, went on strike.

Two additional officials of the Essen postal and telegraph service were expelled, charged with sabotage. Essen telephones are still silent and wire messages are much delayed.

The Germans assert that a serious milk shortage has resulted from the transportation tangle, the Essen supply shrinking from 30,000 to 5,820 litres daily for 20,000 children under 1 year of age. The French are not stopping incoming food, but the seizure of certain lines and the occupation of some stations, where the yardmen struck immediately, has disorganized the railway system.

A crowd smashed the windows of the Adler restaurant at Recklinghausen, alleging that the proprietor was friendly with the French. The population is in an ugly mood. Tanks are patrolling the streets, as the entire city is on "strike."

FOOD ENTERS RUHR

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUESSELDORF, Feb. 10.—About 2,800 carloads of general merchandise and food supplies entered the Ruhr yesterday. About 1,800 cars of manufactured cars and manufactured articles were exported from the Ruhr yesterday.

The French are preparing to blacklist all persons caught in the act of sabotage. Thus, offenders who live in the Ruhr will be run out of the occupied area, while those residing in unoccupied Germany will not be permitted to pass the French outposts.

The first lumber seized by the French under the forest sanctions, totalling 5,500,000 board feet, has been brought to Aix La Chapelle, where it will be sold at auction. The forests seized by the French total 2,250,000 acres, of which they plan to exploit 1,000,000 acres. The French expect to obtain a revenue of 10,00,000 gold marks (about $2,500,000) from these forests.

Oppose French Soup Kitchens.

Rumors of American intervention if the food situation becomes difficult has caused a change in the German attitude tward French soup kitchens in the last twenty-four hours. It is reported here that food relief similar to that in Belgium during the war may be undertaken by American organizations in the Ruhr if needed.

The burgomaster of Bochum today informed the French that their soup kitchens no longer were needed and determined efforts are being made to prevent the destitute in the area from patronizing the French relief depots. Yesterday and today only a few children and Polish miners, thrown out of work by strikes, appeared to draw rations of soup.

The rumor of American intervention is causing much adverse comment in French circles. The French point out that they are doing their utmost to take care of the abnormal requirements as they have done in the Rhineland since 1919. American food relief at this time would only increase the number of strikers and greatly handicap the French operations, it is said.

Kill French Soldier.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—[By United Press.]—Dispatches from Bochum said two French soldiers alleged to have insulted German pedestrians were disarmed by crowds and one of them was stabbed to death.

Young Germans who attacked a Herne café which served food to French officers were driven off by French troops.

Essen dispatches announced that the French had issued orders requisitioning housing accommodations for an entire troop division which will arrive shortly.

Temper of crowds in Berlin streets was aroused by the death at Heidelberg of a German official named Stamminger who was expelled from the occupied zone despite a plea of illness.

Airplanes Watch Mines.

DUSSELDORF, Feb. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Air patrols began flying over the Ruhr today, watching the various coke and coal control posts and the movement of trains in the direction of the frontiers.

OPEN MONEY ATTACK

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—Great excitement has been caused in Germany's financial circles over tremendous financial manipulations involving billions of marks, which are affecting the nation's financial and economic standing.

It was confirmed today that the Reichsbank is selling large quantities of foreign money to stabilize or bolster up the paper mark. About £250,000 (about $1,170,000) were sold today and had the effect of bringing the dollar to 30,000 marks, which is only a slight change from yesterday.

It is reported that the Reichsbank will unload all its 60,000,000 gold marks (about $15,000,000) worth of foreign exchanges within a few days, this money having been prepared for the payment of reparations which were halted when the French invaded the Ruhr.

Plan to Buy Grain Here.

In financial circles this latest attempt of the government through the Reichsbank to stabilize the currency is analysed as follows:

Germany's paper money circulation is about 2,000,000,000,000 marks, while the government has about 1,000,000,000 gold marks in its vaults. This 1,000,000,000 gold marks at present are worth 10,000,000,000,000 paper marks, or five times the paper floating upon it. With no reparations to pay or any foreign exchange to buy except a small amount to meet Belgian bills an opportunity has presented itself to Germany to perform the world astounding stunt of buying back its paper money for almost a song and at the same time stabilize its money.

This stabilization, it is hoped, will result in Germany having a chance within the coming months to buy Chicago grain and British coal and other raw materials which must be purchased from foreign countries with foreign exchange, which will be purchased not at 50,000 marks to a dollar, but at 25,000 or 30,000 marks to a dollar. The purchases benefit both the government and private consumers of foreign raw materials all the way from industrialists to workmen, who want cheap bread.

So far the government's transactions are regarded optimistically in financial circles, which also argue that they are carrying on war with the French franc and at the same time stabilizing the mark.

FRENCH PUSH PLANS FOR NEW RHINE STATE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The Left Bank of the Rhine committee today decided to make every effort to strengthen the separatist movement in the Rhine provinces during the Ruhr occupation, hoping to create a buffer state between France and Germany before the occupied zone is evacuated.

Paul Hocquel, a supporter of the movement, and Dr. Dorten, leader of the Rhine autonomists, who came to Paris today to report to Quai d'Orsay on the situation, asserted they were most hopeful of a separation of the Rhine provinces from Germany.

"Only the Prussian government officials are participating in the outbreak against France," they claimed. "The population of the provinces is not protesting at the expulsion of 17,000 Prussians for not obeying the French orders."

FREED OF THEFT CHARGE.

Fred Tyler, 2032 Holly avenue, alleged to have stolen $140 from the house of William Lind, 4817 Nevada street, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Joseph Schulman for lack of prosecution.

TURK AND ALLIES FINGER TRIGGERS; WAR IN BALANCE

Ismet's Report Today to Fix Moslems' Action.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 10.—Although the twenty-four hours added to the Turkish ultimatum which demanded that the allies withdraw from Smyrna expired this afternoon, the French and British cruisers remained in the port. Negotiations have been continuing here the entire day between the allies and Adnan Bey, the Turkish governor, but although the latter asserted that the matter could be settled by diplomacy no solution had been reached when Adnan Bey left for home this afternoon.

Smyrna is reported to be calm but tense. The lighthouse buoys have discontinued functioning and mines have been laid in order to prevent a surprise attack at night. As the entrance to Smyrna is bounded for miles on both sides by high hills, with extensive fortifications, the placing of mines will make the escape of the allied cruisers, if war breaks out, a difficult operation in itself.

The Turks also extinguished the lighthouses on the gulf of Ismid and closed the harbor to foreign ships.

"Want Peace; Ready for War."

The official Angora journal declares: "We are repeating we are not belligerent and until the arrival of Ismet Pasha we will prevent untoward incidents, but we are ready for war if a just peace is not obtainable."

The Turkish ship Huldjelmel has left for Constanza, where it will take on board Ismet Pasha and the Turkish delegation, who are expected in Constantinople tomorrow night. A special train is waiting to rush the delegation to Ismid, where Mustapha Kemal Pasha is waiting to hear the report upon which the Turks will decide whether it will be peace or war.

Talk of U. S. Mediation.

With the return of Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, the American commissioner in the near east, to Constantinople, speculation over the possibilities of American intervention to save the world from another world war has been revived.

It is understood that the Americans are convinced the situation is grave and the slightest irresponsibility on the part of Turk, Greek, or allied soldiers and sailors, who are nervously playing their fingers over rifle triggers or are desultorily aiming their cannons, might precipitate a war which would involve all Europe and possibly America.

It is also acknowledged on all sides that America will not be able to intervene unless requested. There also remains the big question of whether either the Turks or allies would accept mediation. The publication here of America's statement at Lausanne that there are no differences existing between the Turks and the United States which might prevent a treaty of peace and amity is having a favorable effect on the population.

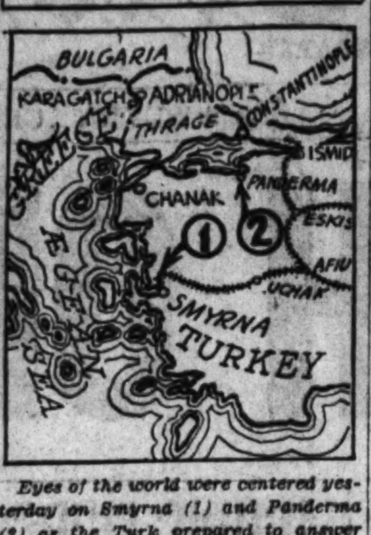
Crane Quells Turk Fears.

The Turks' fear that the visit of Mohammed VI., former sultan, to Mecca, where he was given refuge by King Hussaine of Hedjaz, signified another attempt to disrupt the Moslem world and to embarrass the position of the present caliph, was exploded today by Charles R. Crane of Chicago in a long interview with the Turkish press.

Mr. Crane, who was head of the American delegation to the near east during the Versailles treaty conference, is here following a recent visit with King Hussaine, with whom he has long been on friendly terms.

"I asked King Hussaine the significance of the visit of the former sultan, and he assured me that it had no political significance," Mr. Crane said. "King Hussaine believed that the former sultain would prefer to spend his last days in Moslem territory instead of Malta, so he offered him an asylum in Hedjaz."

What Will Turk Do?



Eyes of the world were centered yesterday on Smyrna (1) and Panderma (2) as the Turk prepared to answer the question: Will there be a new war in the east? At Smyrna, allied ships continued to dodge among Turk mines in the harbor, while the Turk withheld his final decision on his recent ultimatum ordering all allied warships of more than 1,000 tons to leave the port.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha was awaiting Ismet Pasha at Panderma. Upon their conference concerning the failure of the Lausanne peace parley may depend whether Turkey defies the allies, precipitating war, or backs down.

FRENCH ASSERT GERMANY WILL SOON TAKE COUNT

Say Ruhr Coercion Is Winning.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Unoccupied Germany possesses coke and coal to operate its industry three weeks longer. It has sufficient fuel for domestic purposes for three months, if the winter continues mild.

A crisis is expected in the first half of March, when a total lack of coal will paralyze railways, factories, electrical, gas and water works, and tie up all Germany.

The above statements were obtained from the French foreign office by THE TRIBUNE as an answer to opponents of France's policy of occupying the Ruhr and to criticism of France for not obtaining positive results—the seizure of huge amounts of coal and coke.

Says Negative Results Win.

France did not enter the Ruhr expecting to obtain positive results, THE TRIBUNE was informed. Premier Poincare decided to take the step determined to secure negative results. The negative results are not only forcing Germany to its knees but will compel it to agree to execute the treaty and meet its reparations obligations.

The fact that Germany was preparing a revenge war on France in 1925 was the actuating motive, according to Quai d'Orsay, because as long as the French hold the Ruhr munitions works, control the fuel operating other war factories, and remain along the Rhine where chemical works, manufacturing asphyxiating gas, are located, Germany is muzzled.

Wants U. S. to Keep Out.

"The United States must remember the facts before condemning France's policy and acting as Germany's cat's paw by attempting to intervene and mediate in the problem," said a high member of Premier Poincare's cabinet today.

"France signed the Versailles treaty because it expected the Anglo-American-French guarantee pact to be ratified. Since the senate rejected the pact, the British guarantee automatically was invalidated, leaving France with a 37,000,000 population facing 60,000,000 Teutons across the Rhine lusting for revenge.

"Rivers are no longer military obstacles since the advent of improved engineering methods, new pontoons, aviation and long range artillery."

RUHR AND TURK PILE UP TROUBLE FOR BONAR LAW

Expect Stormy Session of Parliament.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.—When Prime Minister Bonaw Law faces parliament on its reassembling Tuesday, he will be met with an insistent demand from all sections of the house of commons to justify his policy of tranquillity, which apparently has led Great Britain deeper into the international morass than when he took over the office from David Lloyd George.

A. BONAR LAW.

The attack on him will fall on three categories—the Ruhr policy, including the retention of British troops on the Rhine; the allied debt policy, including the American settlement; and the policy of remaining in Iraq, which has led to a danger of war with the Turks.

The attack will be led by the Labor party, and will be supported on nearly all points by both wings of the Liberal party and by some Conservatives.

Labor Party Issues Program.

The Labor party today issued a manifesto setting out its constructive policy for the new session, which offers to replace the government policy of inaction. The Labor policy falls under six heads as follows:

1. To denounce the French occupation of the Ruhr as a breach of international law and to demand withdrawal of the British troops from the Rhine.
2. To waive all claims for reparations and arrange a cancellation of the whole or part of the allied debt.
3. To recognize the Russian government and submit the questions of Mosul and Mesopotamia to a new conference.
4. To summon a world conference to coöperate with the league of nations for a reform of the Versailles treaty.
5. To provide the league of nations with a revised Democratic constitution.
6. To initiate a definite proposal for universal disarmament.

Charges German Financial Intrigue.

The Daily Express, which has been a supporter of the government, today joins in the cry for withdrawal from the Rhine, declaring the British are kept there through financial intrigues of Max Warburg, a famous German banker, and his brother, Paul Warburg of New York.

The Express says Herr Warburg has £1,000,000 (about $4,680,000) in England, and many million dollars in the United States, and is using the immense power this gives him to keep the British troops on the Rhine with an idea that they will become enbroiled with the French, thus hastening an end to the entente.

The Express generally is regarded as the mouthpiece of Mr. Bonar Law.

French troops drove the wedge deeper into Germany yesterday by occupying the villages of Dieringhausen and Osberghausen and putting Elberfeld and Barmen, important Westphalian industrial cities, within cannon range by massing artillery at Wulfrath.

RIOT IN CAUCASUS AS BOLSHEVIKS WAR ON RELIGION

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 10.—Disturbances are breaking out in the Caucasus as a result of the bolshevik order to transfer churches into theaters and lounging halls. This action is a part of the young communists' antichurch campaign which was started during Christmas.

At Batum, immediately upon the order being issued three days ago, the communists began dismantling the great cathedral of Sobar, tearing down the crosses and other sacred symbols. Churchgoers addressed a protest to the central government at Moscow, but the cheka is arresting the signers of the petition.

West Orange, N. J., Feb. 10.—Thomas A. Edison, who will celebrate his seventy-seventh birthday tomorrow, expects to work until he is 100 years old. "Judging by my ancestors," he said today, "I am really only a middle aged man now. Judging by my feelings, it comes to about the same thing. My great-grandfather lived to be 104 and my grandfather to be 102, while my father was 94 when he died. I do not expect to lower the average."

POINCARE OR CUNO MUST BACK UP—TCHITCHERIN

"Compromise Necessary to Avoid Ruin."

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—M. Tchitcherin, soviet foreign minister, does not believe Premier Poincare and Chancellor Cuno can remain on their rockbound positions. Sooner or later he believes the noncompromising attitude of each premier will undergo a change and a solution for the Ruhr problem will be found.

M. TCHITCHERIN.
[(C.) U. & U. Photo.]

"It is a most natural thing," M. Tchitcherin said in an interview just before leaving for Moscow tonight, "that France and Germany should come to an agreement. I know both sides stand firmly on their expressed intentions, but they will come to an understanding and so save themselves from ruin."

M. Tchitcherin denied that during his long meetings with the German foreign minister and other leaders he advised any change of attitude in the Ruhr situation. He discussed a commercial treaty, and said Germany and Russia each now have drawn up a full statement upon which a treaty will be based.

"No Military Alliance."

"I must repeat," continued M. Tchitcherin, "that all Russo-German negotiations are purely commercial. No military alliance has been nor is being discussed."

To a question whether participation by Poland on the side of France in forcing payment of reparations, even if peaceful on the eastern front of Germany, such as Polish occupation of the rest of upper Silesia, would affect Russia, M. Tchitcherin replied:

"The situation there is too delicate for me to discuss here."

He gave the same reply to a dozen questions dealing with the Russo-Polish and Polish-German boundary situation.

"Turk Will Stand Pat."

As the final word over the Lausanne conference M. Tchitcherin said:

"Turkey will not sign the treaty. If, however, proper and necessary concessions are given Turkey, such as a withdrawal of capitulations and a guarantee of full independence of Turkey, then an agreement is likely."

LOGAN'S WIDOW PROTESTS CHANGE OF PARK STATUE

Cites St. Gaudens in Plea for Mound.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—A proposal of the south park commissioners of Chicago to move the equestrian statue of Gen. John A. Logan from the mound in Grant park, opposite 9th street, and place it instead upon a pedestal in keeping with other changes planned for the improvement of the park, has been received with grief and indignation by Mrs. Logan, widow of "Black Jack," who has announced her intention to do everything in her power to prevent what she would regard as a desecration of the statue and of Gen. Logan's memory.

Writes to Superintendent.

"It is impossible for me to express my intense grief at the proposition to take down Gen. Logan's statue and put it in on a little pedestal which it was located as it is by the greatest sculptor that America has had, Mr. St. Gaudens," says Mrs. Logan in a letter of protest to the general superintendent.

"St. Gaudens was the author of the idea of erecting the mound upon which the equestrian statue was placed, he saying that a statue on a straight line of observation with the person standing on the ground was a great mistake, and that it should be elevated so that any one looking at the statue would get a correct outline of the figure and the horse. I think that he, being the greatest sculptor and the statue having been pronounced the best in the United States in its execution and location, that it would be outrageous to interfere with it at the suggestion of people assuredly not as well qualified to decide such matters, and I should consider it an indignity to the memory of Gen. Logan if there should be any change in the statue or the mound upon which it is erected or the place where it is located."

Mrs. Logan sees no reason why the plan for the embellishment of the park could not be drawn to include the statue as it stands. In the communication received by her it was stated that the improvement was to be of "a formal architectural character with balustrades, ornamental stairways and fountains."

Says Mound Is Essential.

Mrs. Logan insists that "an insignificant pedestal would in no sense give the statue so imposing an appearance as does the elevation by the mound which St. Gaudens decided was necessary."

She has taken the matter up with Judge John Barton Payne, president of the South Park board, and with members of the Illinois delegation in congress, urging them to protest any change that may be proposed in the location or manner of erection of the Logan statue. Mrs. Logan, also called attention to the fact, that there is a vault in the mound designed as a final resting place for Gen. Logan's body should she desire to have it removed there and for her own after her death.

VICE QUIZ HERE BY LEGISLATURE, SENATOR'S PLAN

Owners Warned to Clear "Immoral" Houses.

Owners, keepers, and protectors of disorderly houses yesterday became aware of a new foe with the announcement that State Senator Daniel Webster will on Tuesday ask the appointment of a legislative commission to investigate the police department and the vice trust.

The churches are already in the fight to stamp out the flourishing industry that derives its huge profits from the degradation of womanhood. Judge McKinley and the grand jury are directing their energies toward learning who permits the houses to operate and why. The state's attorney's office is coöperating with the Juvenile Protective association to prosecute the officials who fail in their sworn duty and take money from the vice elements.

Probes Medical Phase.

Health Commissioner Bundesen is concerning himself mostly with the medical side of the vice problem and is carrying on a campaign of prevention and education as a means of minimizing venereal diseases.

Added to these forces will be the power of the state of Illinois if Senator Webster has his way. He said last night he expects to have his bill passed with little opposition.

His plan is to have a committee make a preliminary investigation and report back to the present assembly on their findings and recommendations. Then a commission consisting of five senators and five representatives will conduct an inquiry similar to the O'Hara vice commission of eight years ago. They will report to the next general assembly.

Vice Reports Arouse Him.

"We have heard so many charges of corruption and cruelty by the police department that we want to know the truth about it, at least I do," said Senator Webster. "I am interested in making Chicago fit to live in, and if any of our police officials are corrupt we ought to know it."

The senator said he had discussed his plan with his colleagues and most of them favored it. Several downstate senators asked that his bill be broadened so that police officials in any city in the state may be investigated. Some had in mind Rock Island and East St. Louis, they informed him.

Before his election as senator Mr. Webster was first assistant city prosecutor and thoroughly familiar with the cases daily heard in the Morals court. He resigned his position and severed his affiliations with the Thompson political faction and is now a Brundage Republican.

At the Churches Today.

The men who are to speak before twenty church gatherings today, afternoon and evening, yesterday received letters from Chief of Police Fitzmorris filled with data on the number of arrests of prostitutes, procurers, panders and keepers of houses of ill fame since he became chief. Prosecutions, fines and sentences were listed. The chief expressed the wish that in their talks on "The Shame of Chicago" that they would mention these activities.

Assistant State's Attorneys John Sbarbaro and Frank Peska yesterday summoned the supposed owners of many houses known to have been of ill fame. Warning was given them that their buildings will be closed for a year under the Kate Adams abatement law if they do not get rid of their immoral tenants.

Take Owners' Testimony.

Statements were taken from those who responded yesterday. This was done in an effort to learn to whom they rent, as it has proved difficult in the past to learn just who the "keepers" are. The Chicago Real Estate Index company furnished the names of the persons listed as owners and the agent who paid the last taxes on the places. Several denied they owned the houses listed as theirs.

FRANK J. GOULD TRIES MARRIAGE FOR THIRD TIME

Ex-San Francisco Girl Is Latest Bride.

[Copyright: 1923: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Frank J. Gould was married this afternoon to Mme. Florence La Caze, to whom he had been reported engaged on numerous occasions since his divorce from his second wife in Paris four years ago.

FRANK J. GOULD.

The witness for Mr. Gould was Charles G. Loeb, American attorney, and for Mme. La Caze, George Duquenne, French composer. Mr. and Mrs. Gould did not leave for a honeymoon, but drove away to his home at Maison Lafitte.

Divorces Edith Kelly.

Mr. Gould's marital affairs have been much discussed since April, 1919, when he obtained at Versailles a divorce from Edith Kelly Gould, former New York show girl, whom he married in 1910. Mrs. Gould immediately began court action contesting the validity of the divorce. She brought counter suits for divorce, in which she denied evidence on which the Versailles decree was granted—namely: that she had been found in an apartment with a young Cuban. She accused Gould of misconduct with a number of women.

Six months after she contested the divorce in a French court, it was decided against her. She lost a two years' fight in New York when the Court of Appeals last week sustained the validity of the French divorce.

Bride Born in U. S.

Mr. Gould is 45 years old. His first wife was Helen Margaret Kelly, whom he married in 1901. In 1910 she obtained a divorce from him and soon after married Ralph H. Thomas. Following his death she became the wife of Prince Vlora of Albania, from whom she is now separated.

Today's bride is a divorcee. Born of French parents in San Francisco about twenty-five years ago, she was reared in France. She returned to America, where she married Mr. Heinemann, but divorced her husband about four years ago. She is a friend of Elsie Janis, the American actress. Mr. Gould is well known in French society and sporting circles.

SHERIDAN ROAD RESIDENTS WAR OVER ZONING PLAN

The Chicago Zoning commission which is now holding public hearings on the tentative zoning ordinance was asked yesterday by former State's Attorney John J. Healy, representing a number of Sheridan road property owners, to zone Sheridan road between Bryn Mawr and Devon avenue in the apartment house and family hotel classification.

JOHN J. HEALY.

It is classed as a residential district in the tentative ordinance, but Mr. Healy said that Sheridan road, because of the increase in automobile and motorbus traffic, could no longer be considered a residential street. He said that he represented considerably more than one-half of the frontage.

F. W. Snider, representing the Sheridan Road Protective league, asked the commission to leave the district in the resident classification. The commission will decide later.

HAROLD LLOYD IS NOW HUSBAND OF MILDRED DAVIS

Comedian and His Aid Married in West.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis were married this afternoon in St. John's Episcopal church. Miss Jane Thompson was bridesmaid, and Gaylord Lloyd, brother of the film comedian, attended the groom. The Rev. George Davidson performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Lloyd has been her husband's leading lady for some time. It is understood, however, that in marrying Harold she has stepped out of a job. It has been said that Lloyd would not permit her to remain in moving pictures.

An element of secrecy attended the romance. When newspaper men heard of the engagement some little while ago and sought confirmation of it, both Lloyd and Miss Davis made vigorous denials. The bride's parents also denied the report.

Finally both were pinned down and made to admit their engagement. But they declared no date had been set for the wedding.

The license was issued today. Both went to the marriage license bureau. Harold gave his age as 29; Mildred said she was 21.

Early this afternoon reporters called up the home in Hollywood. Mrs. Davis, who answered the phone, said the wedding was to be held at the home late this evening.

"And it is to be very private," she added. Half an hour later the ceremony was under way in the church.

Neither of the parents of the bride was present. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd soon after the wedding left on a short honeymoon trip by automobile and intimated that later they might go abroad.

$250,000 BRIBE OFFER CHARGED BY CLUB WOMAN

Federation Head Says Man Made Proposal.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, today charged before the state federation that she had been offered $250,000 to go to Washington and work for "a certain bill."

She has the offer in writing, she says, but she declined to tell who made it or what the bill was about. Besides offering her $250,000, she said today, the unknown individual tried to bribe the whole federation with an offer to finance the erection of a General Federation headquarters building in Washington.

Refuse to Tell Name.

"I shan't tell you who made the offer," she declared. "I'd be a fool if I did."

Mrs. Winter said she had not disclosed the attempt at bribery before cause she did not consider it an "ethical thing to do." The would-be donor, she said, apparently had no idea that there was any irregularity about his offer.

"I spoke out," she added, "because I felt that it was high time the club women were warned against such attempts."

Mrs. Winter volunteered the information that she received the offer early last summer, shortly before the General Federation meeting at Chautauqua, N. Y.

Bill Turned Down.

"I replied that the federation did not support any measure for advantages that might accrue to the organization or its officers, but that we would support only such legislation as we believed to be right.

"I told him that I would take the matter up with my board at the Chautauqua meeting, but that, even if the board voted to support his bill, we could accept no gifts from him.

"The board turned his bill down. After they had done so, I read them his letter. I have it upstairs, in black and white."

Hid Offer in Words.

The letter was subtly worded, Mrs. Winter said, to read so that she understood plainly that she was to have $250,000 if she swung the federation over in favor of the bill, although the writer did not "come right out and say so."

"The day I received his letter," she said, "I sat right down and answered it—ignoring, however, that part of it which affected me personally."

The "certain bill" has not yet been presented to congress, Mrs. Winter says.

Ex-Slave Wills His Cabin Home to Rich N. Y. Man

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Because "Mr. Willie" never failed him when he needed advice or help, William James McAlister of Fayetteville, aged ex-slave, who died early today, made William Fuller of New York, general counsel of the American Tobacco company, sole heir and beneficiary of his estate, consisting of a small cabin and its furnishings, it was learned when McAlister's will was found. The old Negro's death was caused by burns sustained when he fell into an open fireplace.

BATTLE FLEETS IN WAR PRACTICE OFF WEST COAST

BY LINTON WELLS.

ABOARD THE U. S. S. CALIFORNIA, Feb. 10.—[By Naval Radio.]—With the fleet now 264 miles south of Los Angeles and calm weather prevailing after a storm last night, good progress southward to Panama is being made.

This morning, using nine supply ships which the fleet fell in with this morning, nine superdreadnaughts steamed in various formations and speeds while gunners trained and fired the great guns. The afternoon was spent in tactical maneuvers, with the ships using battle formations.

Today also was cleanup day, known in naval parlance as "field day," when from stem to stern and truck to keel every man in the fleet was employed in brightening his part of the ship in preparation for general inspection.

Actual warfare conditions are being approximated tonight. The entire fleet is plowing ahead in darkness, no lights being used except blue ones, which have a low visibility. Although there is but 300 feet between the stern of one ship and the the bow of the next, the possibility of collision is negligible because of the synchronized speed of the vessels.

Business Man Elopes with Widow, Begin Tour

The elopment and marriage of C. H. Chadwick, 5107 Drexel boulevard, wealthy president of the Chicago Towel Supply company, 2518 South Wabash avenue, and Mrs. Audrey Slavell, 2309 Commonwealth avenue, became known last night.

Following a six weeks' honeymoon tour on which they left last night, en route to Florida, the couple will return to Chicago. Their friends confirmed the marriage last night, but were unable to give any details as to where and when the ceremony was performed.

Watchman Fits Gas Pipe in Mouth, Ends His Life

Joseph Stream, 69 years old, watchman employed in a factory at 2009 Fullerton avenue, was found asphyxiated in the plant at 6 o'clock last night by Harry Kruse, a worker. Stream was in a rear room with the end of a gas hose in his mouth.

HAMON'S WIDOW REUNITED WITH WM. L. ROHRER

Discord Over Finances Is Patched Up.

Following action of Judge Walter P. Steffen in vacating the divorce decree recently granted Mrs. Georgia Hamon Rohrer, widow of the slain Oklahoma politician and millionaire oil operator, she has returned to the home of her second husband, William L. Rohrer, capitalist and art connoisseur. The reconciliation was revealed last night by friends.

The same sources confirm the report that the rift was precipitated about a year ago by the refusal of Mrs. Rohrer to mortgage a piece of her property in Dearborn street near Division, when Rohrer was pinched by an unfavorable turn in the market.

Hamon Fortune Vanishes.

Finding that the $10,000,000 estate of Hamon had been swept away by unwise investments, debts and federal income taxes, Mrs. Hamon, her friends say, refused to put up her sole remaining bit of property to rescue her husband. Furthermore, she is said to have deeded it over to her son, Jake Hamon Jr., now in Oklahoma managing his late father's oil interests.

These rumors were substantiated, when, a short time ago, Mrs. Rohrer made a plea for alimony, after having waived all property rights in her husband's estate a year ago. Mrs. Rohrer appeared in Circuit court and said she had "expected to receive enough money from the estate of my late husband to support me, but now I have been informed that the estate is insolvent and that I will have nothing."

Then came the vacation of the divorce.

Accused of Cruelty.

In her suit Mrs. Rohrer testified that life with her second husband, since their marriage a year after the death of Hamon at the hands of Clara Smith Hamon, had been "torture." Mrs. Rohrer painted her husband as a master of the art of jiu jitsu, which he used on her to discourage her requests for "spending money."

The Rohrers were married in Chicago on Dec. 21, 1921, Mr. Rohrer having been divorced in 1915 by Mrs. Fay Hancock Rohrer, who cited his "ungovernable temper."

RAILWAY EMPLOYES TO DANCE.

The Chicago Terminal division of the Woman's aid of the Pennsylvania railroad will give a benefit dance at the Midway Gardens, 60th street and Cottage Grove avenue, tomorrow night.

LUEDER BACKERS SURE OF STRONG PRIMARY SHOWING

Expected to Snow Under His Three Rivals.

BY PARKE BROWN.

With everything set for the fast two weeks' campaign which they contend is all that is necessary to bring out the vote in the Republican primary, campaign managers for Arthur C. Lueder are extremely confident.

"A primary is essentially a test of organization strength as well as public sentiment," said Homer K. Galpin, chairman of the county committee yesterday, "and thus far we have been almost entirely occupied with details of organization.

"Now that work is fairly well disposed of and we can see how the situation lies. I feel that I am conservative in saying that this year we shall have the best and strongest Republication organization there has been in Chicago in twenty years. The party, as a whole, is united behind Lueder."

Crowe Sees Big Victory.

State's Attorney Crowe predicted that Lueder's vote will exceed the combined totals of the other three candidates in the primary. He said those three had found it impossible to "get a real start" in forming a city-wide organization.

This phase of the situation has been watched closely ever since it became known who the other candidates were to be and ward leaders have been making regular reports of the efforts made to pull organization strength into the camps of Edward R. Litsinger, who deserted from the Lueder camp; Municipal Judge Bernard P. Barasa, and Arthur M. Millard, president of the Masonic Bureau of Service and Employment.

The former two are reported to have accepted the support of cogs in the old Lundin-Thompson machine. Barasa is said to have the indorsement of Michael J. Faherty, Thompson's president of the board of local improvements and father of the real estate expert scheme. Fred E. Erickson, one of Gov. Small's appointees on the state tax commission, is said to be with Barasa because of the large Italian vote in his ward, the Thirty-first.

Italian Vote Split.

But that the Italian vote will be split up was indicated by two other incidents. "Diamond Joe" Esposito, a Deneen leader until, because of certain relations he has on the west side, he joined the city hall a month or so ago, is said to have indorsed Litsinger. And Cairoli Gigliotti, editor and publisher of "Il Nuovo Venuto" an Italian newspaper formerly called "Il Cittadino," has come out editorially for Lueder.

"Some people believe we should stand by candidates for this or that race, regardless of their necessary prerequisites of character and ability," reads the editorial. "They are soundly mistaken . . . The selection of candidates for public office is one of the foremost duties of citizenship. It must not be based on friendship and hyphen, but on actual merit . . . Arthur C. Lueder, Republican candidate for mayor, is our choice. We respectfully suggest that our friends join us in this necessary duty."

Millard Workers Mysterious.

Millard workers set up that they are not seeking regular ward organization support. They assert they are building up a complete organization of their own. Some of their statements smack of mystery and secrecy.

Judge William E. Dever, the sole Democratic candidate for the mayoralty, spoke before the Chicago Teachers' federation at the Morrison hotel. A large part of his brief talk was devoted to their compensation. He said he had assisted Margaret Haley, the teachers' business agent, seventeen years ago in an effort to obtain higher salaries for teachers, and since that time always has advocated that they be paid more.

"If I am elected," he said, "I will do all I can to help the teachers obtain something like adequate compensation."

CONGRESSWOMAN OF CALIFORNIA STOPS OVER HERE

MRS. MARY NOLAN.

Mrs. Mary Nolan, congresswoman from California, who passed through Chicago yesterday on her way to Washington, had nothing to say about herself or her new position. She was accompanied by her 9 year old daughter, Corlis, and her sister, Mrs. Theresa Glenn of San Francisco, who acts as her secretary. Both are going to live with her in Washington.

Mrs. Nolan was elected to congress on Jan. 23, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of her husband, John I. Nolan, a few weeks before. She defeated six other candidates and was elected both for the unexpired term of her husband's office and for the next regular term.

Bankers to Dine with Gump Mystery Over Heads

The Bankers' Club of Chicago will stage its midwinter dinner a week from next Saturday evening at the Congress hotel and it will have an element of mystery. The speakers will be Gen. J. G. Harbord will speak on "Communications and Banking," but what Mr. Smith will say or do is not revealed.

MAKES THE DEAF HEAR.

Remarkable Invention Enables the Deaf to Hear All Sounds Clearly.

Every one who is troubled with deafness in any form will be interested in the announcement of the Dictograph Products Corporation, Suite 1301, No. 220 West 42d street, New York, that they have at last perfected a device which will enable every one whose auditory nerve is not entirely destroyed to hear as perfectly as one whose hearing is normal. To test it thoroughly they sent it to a number of people who had been deaf for years and they report most gratifying results. Many state that they hear the slightest sound with perfect ease and that their natural hearing has been greatly improved. The manufacturers are so proud of their achievement and so confident that every deaf person will be amazed and delighted with it that they offer to send it to any one by prepaid parcel post on ten days' free trial. They do not ship C. O. D. nor do they require any deposit, but send it entirely at their own risk and expense, allowing the user ten full days to try it and decide whether he wants to keep it or not. As there is no obligation whatever, every one who is troubled with deafness in any form should take advantage of this liberal free trial offer. Just send them your name and address for descriptive literature and free trial request blank.—Advertisement.

TANNER ENTERS GUBERNATORIAL RACE IN ILLINOIS

Minier Statesman Shows Need of Cleanup.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The first gun of the Illinois gubernatorial campaign of 1924 was fired here tonight at the eighth annual banquet of the Illinois Woodmen Social club with a boom for S. S. Tanner of Minier, member of the Republican state committee from the Sixteenth district.

Mr. Tanner himself carefully laid his hat at the edge of the ring and permitted his friends to push it into the middle. Tanner is president of the Social club and one of the national directors of the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Tanner's formal announcement of his candidacy was all that was left for the future in the way of entering the race for the Republican nomination next year. That announcement was reserved, it was explained, because the banquet was regarded as Tanner's "party" and other potential candidates for governor were among the invited guests.

Other Likely Starters Present.

Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, Republican state committeeman from the Seventeenth district, and a likely starter in the gubernatorial race, is vice president of the Social club. John H. Harrison of Danville, another possible Republican entry, was present.

The Tanner crowd was not exclusive in its sociability, however. Chief Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Illinois Supreme court, who is being groomed by many Democrats as their standard bearer in 1924, was one of the speakers. Other Republicans on the program were Congressman Elect Henry R. Rathbone of Chicago and C. J. Doyle of Springfield, former secretary of state.

Apropos of his candidacy Mr. Tanner said:

"I would not want to be governor of Illinois if I could not bring back to the office a lot of its lost prestige and respect. If I could not command the confidence and the respect of the great percentage of the good citizens of Illinois I would not want to assume the responsibility."

Sees Lincoln as a Progressive.

Congressman Elect Rathbone, whose parents were in the presidential box in Ford's theater when Abraham Lincoln was shot by Booth, characterized the martyred President as a "progressive Republican," who, if living today, would advocate several changes to the constitution, including the McCormick child labor amendment.

"Abraham Lincoln is the supreme type of the balanced character," Mr. Rathbone said. "He was never an extremist. Throughout his public career he was always wisely conservative and sanely progressive. He steadfastly adhered to what was good and as steadfastly strove to change what was evil. fastly strove to change what was evil."

INQUIRY CLOSED IN SUDDEN DEATH OF AGED COUPLE

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow for Peter Sausser, 76 years old, and for his wife, Mrs. Anna Sausser, 79, who were found dead side by side in their home at 4106 North Leavitt street by neighbors Friday morning. At an inquest at Burkhart's morgue, 2157 Irving Park boulevard, yesterday, it was determined the couple died from natural causes. It was impossible to determine which was the first to die.

They are survived by three daughters, Mrs. Margaret Warnier, Mrs. Angela Delles, Mrs. Mary Brandl; and two sons, Lawrence and William Sausser.

LAWYER MIXES WITH ALDERMAN IN BLOODY FIGHT

Taunts Draw Fire; Both Well Mussed Up.

That ability as a boxer is a necessary qualification of any politician with aldermanic aspirations was again demonstrated yesterday when Ald. Sheldon Govier and Attorney Swan Johnson engaged in a rough and tumble fight in the hearing room of the board of election commissioners.

ALD. S. W. GOVIER.

Both were on the floor when police, election commissioners, and spectators jumped in to separate them, and when they had been pulled apart both showed marks of the conflict. This is the second fight in two days as a result of the hearing on aldermanic petition contests, Ald. Robert J. Mulcahy coming off second best in an encounter with William J. Gormley and several of his relatives on Friday. Gormley is opposing Mulcahy for reëlection.

Opposes Two Johnsons.

Govier, who is seeking reëlection from the Ninth ward, appeared before the election board to protest against the petition of former Ald. Charles V. Johnson. Attorney Swan Johnson represented the latter.

During the course of the arguments Govier referred to the Johnson petition as "a dirty rag," said that it was tied with the red ribbon of bolshevism, and that many of the signers were bolshevists. Former Ald. Johnson is a Socialist, and Attorney Johnson represented William Bross Lloyd and his associates in the sedition charges some time ago.

Attorney Johnson said nothing, but when Ald. Govier referred to him directly as a communist he made a dive for him across the table. Govier ducked, and in a minute was on the attorney's back and they were rolling and scuffling on the floor.

Govier Gets Bloody Nose.

Patrolman Patrick Dillon, on duty in the hearing rooms, jumped into the fight and grabbed Govier, while Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki ran down from the bench and caught Johnson. When the men had been separated Govier had a bloody nose, his face was scratched, and his clothing and collar disarranged. Attorney Johnson also had blood on his face and showed other marks of the conflict.

After they had recovered their composure the two men apologized for their conduct, and it was agreed to resume the hearing later. Election Commissioner Czarnecki, however, called up Chief of Police Fitzmorris and asked for an additional detail of eight more policemen.

MERCHANT FLEET PROSPERITY AID, A. D. LASKER SAYS

Per Capita Cost Below What Other Nations Pay.

BY ALBERT D. LASKER,
Chairman, United States Shipping Board.

One of the stock arguments used by those who are opposing government aid for the American merchant marine is that a ship subsidy policy means that all the people of the country will be taxed to make a few ship owners rich. In other words, the country will bear the losses and the shipping men will take all the profits.

Undoubtedly this sounds like a strong argument, and it would be but for the fact that it is not true. The argument implies that the ship owners are to be the sole beneficiaries under the pending bill. The truth is that American ship owners and operators will be put on an even footing with our nearest competitor, Great Britain, whose advantage lies in cheaper cost of ship construction and cheaper labor in operating ships. Beyond this point the American owner and operator will receive no aid whatever.

Merely Protects U. S. Shipping.

The pending bill simply carries out to ocean going vessels the protective principle that we apply to our agricultural and manufactured products. By our tariff laws we see to it that the products of our farms and our factories are protected against the cheaper products from abroad. By the ship subsidy bill we want to protect our merchant marine against ruinous competition by foreign ships. And so far from being an exclusive business, our merchant marine operates for the benefit of the entire country.

We are helping the American ship owner, it is true, but he is not the only one who is being helped, or who will be helped when the ship subsidy bill becomes a law. The opponents of the bill overlook the fact that the subsidy will apply only to vessels of American construction. That means that, in order to obtain the benefits of the subsidy, an American ship owner must buy his ships from American shipyards. It means, therefore, that American shipyards will be kept alive and will employ thousands of American shipyard workers. With the shipyards going activity will be increased in the steel industries and metal trades and mines and the untold thousands of workmen will benefit.

Want Ships Under American Flag.

Furthermore, in considering the case of the ship owner and operator, it should be remembered that before the world war most of our American steamship owners were operating their ships under foreign flags because of the many restrictions laid upon them by our maritime laws. We brought them under the American flag during the war and we want to keep them there.

They operated successfully under the American flag during the war because of abnormal conditions, just as many manufacturers made money during the war who are not making money now. At this time shipping is at a low ebb the world over, but even when normal times return the Americans will still be sadly handicapped unless aid is given, for everything costs more in the shipping business in America than it does in other countries. But the American cannot charge higher passenger and freight rates when he gets on the high seas to make up for his own higher costs at home. On the seas he has to compete with men whose costs are lower.

All Nations Aid Their Fleets.

Opponents of ship subsidy appear to assume that we are the only nation in the world considering the policy of subsidizing our ships. As a matter of fact, every maritime nation gives aid to its ships in one form or another. Members of congress have estimated that the per capita tax to support the ship subsidy policy would not be more than 31 cents. That is to say, with a big American merchant marine running full blast, carrying our passengers and our goods, would cost each American not more than 31 cents a year.

On the other hand, members of congress have pointed out, Australia taxes its citizens 27 cents per capita to support its ocean mail carrying subsidy alone. It is estimated that Canadians pay $2.72 per capita to support their mail subsidies and the losses of their government owned fleet. The mail contract of the Union Castle steamship line costs the South Africans $1.62 per capita. Norway, which carries the largest share of ocean commerce of any nation in proportion to its population, except Great Britain, taxes its people $1.04 each for the support of its merchant marine. Even Italy, which is looked upon as a poor country, pays 73 cents per person for the maintenance of its shipyards and ships. Sweden pays 19 cents per capita and Spain pays 16 cents per capita.

Would Keep Prices Down.

Then we have the old cry that if Europeans can carry our goods cheaper than we can why not let them do it? The answer is that if we have no ships of our own the Europeans can and will charge us just what they feel like charging us. For years British lines dominated the trade to South America. They fixed the rates and services to suit themselves. By putting our shipping board vessels on this South American run we have brought down rates and forced the British to expand.

A striking example of what happens to the producer whose country has no ships is furnished by an experience of the Baldwin Locomotive works several years ago. A South American railroad company asked for bids for locomotives. The Baldwins and several foreign firms offered bids. The Baldwin bid was the lowest and the South Americans were about to accept it when the agents of a British steamship company and the British locomotive firm got together. The price quoted on the locomotives was for delivery at the factory. The British manufacturers and shipping man advised the South Americans to call for bids for delivery at the South American port, stating that they could save money by doing so. The South Americans followed the British suggestion.

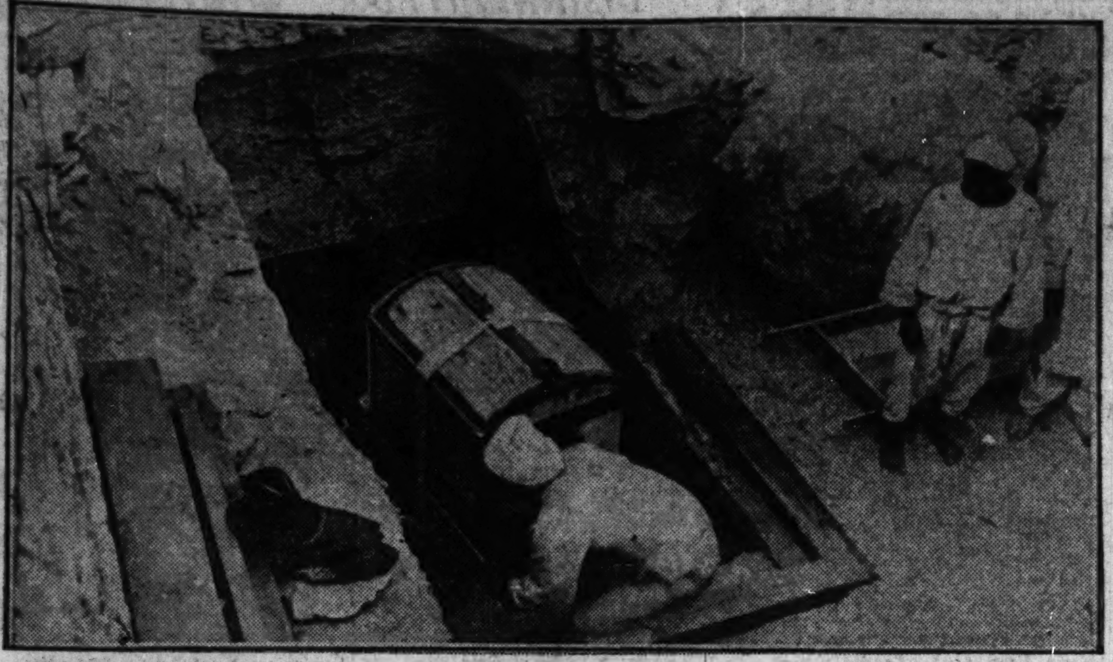
British Firm Gets Business.

Now, the British controlled the only steamship line plying between England and South America and the United States and South America. And, although London is 500 miles further from that particular South American port than New York, they quoted a much lower freight rate on the British locomotives. The result was that the Baldwins, who had to depend upon the British steamship line, could not meet the British locomotive manufacturer's second bid for delivery at the South American port and lost the contract.

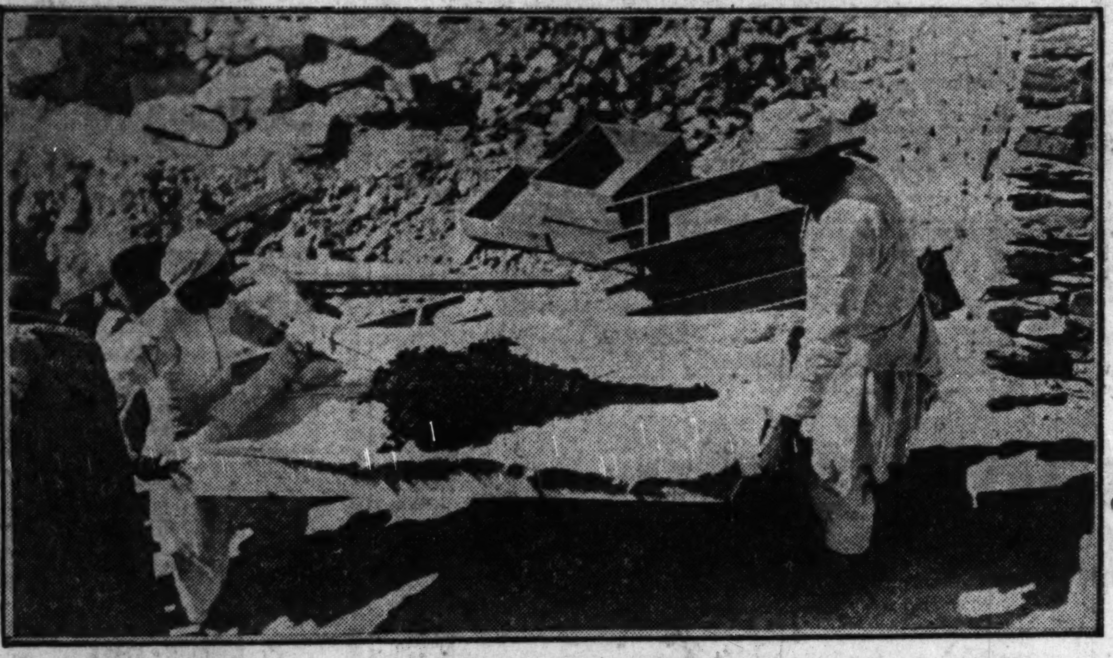
Had there been an American steamship service in operation the Baldwin works would have got the business.

This serves to show not only how steamship companies can help out business men of their own countries in the actual carriage of their products but it also shows that American steamship agents in foreign countries are good business getters. They want cargoes and they are always on the lookout for business opportunities for Americans. An American merchant marine will give us an endless chain of business connections that will inevitably increase our prosperity.

TREASURES FROM TOMB 35 CENTURIES OLD



Bringing white casket from the recently discovered tomb of Tukankhamen, king of Egypt, who ruled Egypt 3,500 years ago. The excavations are being conducted under the direction of Howard Carter, American archæologist, and Lord Carnarvon near Luxor. The casket shown contains valuable fabrics. The relics already found are valued at $15,000,000. The inner chamber is still to be entered, in which it is expected to find the pharaoh's mummy.



Here is a bouquet thirty-five centuries old from the outer chamber of Tukankhamen's tomb. The flowers are wonderfully preserved and are of a dark brown color, probably due to the preservative used. The leaves resemble beech leaves. The bouquet is three feet long.

DEAF COMPOSER JAILED; JUDGES TO ASK FREEDOM

The plight of a prisoner's wife and two baby daughters has moved Judge William Morgan of the Domestic Relations court, Judge Victor Arnold of the Juvenile court, and others to efforts to obtain a parole for C. Leroy Henderson, 1875 Howe street, at present serving a six months sentence in the county jail at Belleville, Ill., for peddling songs without a license. Henderson, a deaf-mute, composed the songs.

Mrs. Henderson yesterday received a letter from her husband, explaining his absence. "Dear Hearts," it read: "Daddy is in an awful fix. He has been sentenced to jail for six months. I didn't even know I was being tried. They gave me no chance to defend myself. But I have hopes and I don't think God will be unkind."

SUBSIDY MAY GET TEST IN SENATE VOTE TOMORROW

Democrats Are Expected to Raise Issue.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—A unanimous consent agreement for the limitation of debate on the ship subsidy bill was proposed in the senate today by Senator Jones [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the committee on commerce. He gave notice that he would seek action on his proposal Monday. Indications were, however, that objections would be made. Senator Brookhart [Rep., Ia.] was on his feet, apparently ready to object if Senator Jones had pressed the agreement today.

Under the proposed agreement debate would be limited to one hour for each senator on the bill and thirty minutes on any amendment, beginning Feb. 16, and it would be further limited to fifteen minutes on the bill and five minutes on any amendment after Feb. 20.

Test Vote Monday.

The first test vote on the subsidy may come on Monday. Democratic leaders were canvassing the situation today with a view to presenting a motion Monday to recommit the bill. Such a motion probably will meet with defeat but it may serve to disclose how most of the senators stand on the issue. A vote on the displacement of the ship subsidy bill in favor of the truth in fabric bill may be deferred.

Senator Fletcher [Dem., Fla.] occupied the floor the greater part of today's session with an attack upon the subsidy bill. He reiterated the various arguments advanced by the opposition.

Would Modify It.

A movement to obtain the consent of the administration for a modification of the bill was launched by a group of senators headed by Senator McNary [Rep., Ore.]. Senator McNary, accompanied by Senators Stanfield [Ore.], Moses [N. H.], Shortridge [Cal.], and Bursum [N. M.], all Republicans, and Ransdell [Dem., La.], went to the White House to discuss the situation with the President.

Senator McNary declared that the bill cannot be passed unless it is amended. He already has offered a series of amendments, among the proposals being a reduction in the rate of compensation for the faster passenger vessel. His theory is that the western agricultural interests will be more ready to approve the bill if it stresses the encouragement of cargo vessels. Under the bill the rate of compensation is much greater proportionately for the faster vessels.

Expect Narrow Margin.

Administration leaders were not disposed to accept these amendments, and seem to feel that the bill can be passed by a narrow margin if it can be brought to a vote. Their one fear is that the opposition by filibuster methods will prevent a vote. With reference to the question of a higher rate of subsidy for fast vessels, the purpose is to encourage the building of this type for carrying mails in peace time and for use as naval auxiliaries in war. Navy department officials have urged this feature.

Senator McNary claims that only forty-three seantors are committed to the subsidy bill, with forty-four against and nine doubtful. This is disputed by friends of the bill, who say a majority of two votes is in sight.

A conference of all trade union legislative representatives in Washington adopted resolutions today condemning the bill as "pernicious legislation." The conference also opposed any attempt to amend the immigration restriction law.

SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE O. K.'S DEBT FUND PLAN

Minor Changes Made in House Bill.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—By a vote of 8 to 3 the senate finance committee today approved the house bill relating to the British debt funding agreement. The bill was reported to the senate by Senator McCumber [Rep., N. D.], chairman of the finance committee, and it is planned to call it up for action as soon as this can be done without interfering with the ship subsidy program.

The bill as approved authorizes the American commission to conclude its tentative agreement for the funding of the British debt and to make settlements with other nations on a similar basis. Only a minor textual change was made in the bill.

One Democrat Agrees.

Those voting for the bill in committee included seven Republicans and one Democrat. The Republicans were Senators McCumber, Smoot, [Utah], Curtis [Kas.], Watson [Ind.], Calder [N. Y.], Dillingham [Vt.], and Frelinghuysen [N. J.]. Senator Williams [Miss.] was the Democrat supporting it.

Those voting against the bill were Senator La Follette [Rep., Wis.] and Senators Walsh [Dem., Mass.] and Gerry [Dem., R. I.].

Undecided About Fight.

Senator La Follette indicated that he had not decided whether he would make a fight against the bill on the floor of the senate. The expectation is that he will not do so, all the La Follette Republicans in the Wisconsin delegation in the house having supported the bill.

The committee before taking action on the bill listened to an explanation of its terms by Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], the senate member of the funding commission. Senator Smoot is reported to have told the committee that before accepting the present agreement the British rejected a proposal of the American commission that an interest rate of 3½ per cent prevail for the entire sixty-two year period. The British accepted the plan only after the rate was cut to 3 per cent for the first ten years.

BULLET PIERCED COP BATTLES ON; WINS HERO PRIZE

Tribune $100 Award Goes to James O'Neil.

THE TRIBUNE's plan of awarding $100 each month for the bravest deed among policemen, firemen, and life savers begins its fourth year today with the designation of a police hero whose deed is unsurpassed in the history of the bravery recognition plan.

The January, 1923, TRIBUNE hero is Patrolman James O'Neil of the Warren avenue station. On New Year's day O'Neil faced death at the point of a robber's pistol. Through a barrage of six bullets, two of which wounded him, one lodging an inch over his heart, O'Neil bore down on the robber, finally beating him into insensibility with a pistol butt.

"More power to THE TRIBUNE," O'Neil burst forth when a reporter told him of the decision. "It means new shoes for me and all the kids."

O'Neil is recovering from the two wounds at his home at 213 North Keystone avenue. He has a wife and six children, the latter all of school age.

Shot but Battles On.

O'Neil did not worry about the wife and six children when F. M. Bohler, 2226 West Van Buren street, ran up to him at 7:20 a. m. on Jan. 1 and informed him that the restaurant at 2323 Van Buren street was being held up.

Drawing his pistol as he entered the door of the restaurant O'Neil saw two men with their hands in the air and a third with a drawn revolver covering the two. On seeing O'Neil, the robber, later identified as John P. Christie, turned the gun on the policeman and began pumping bullets at him.

One bullet hit the policeman over the heart. Another struck him in the right thigh. O'Neil kept coming. He fired once. His aim was good, but the bullet, striking the robber over the left eye, glanced off and the holdup man fled.

Captain Tells of Fight.

O'Neil kept after him. The report of Capt. Thomas J. Pilkington, which caused Chief Fitzmorris to award O'Neil a pay increase of $240, tells the story of the remainder of the battle.

"The holdup man rushed to the rear of the restaurant, jumping through the glass in a rear door, Officer O'Neil pursuing him, and when he got in the yard, the robber again turned his gun on the officer who followed him.

"Staggering from the wounds he had received in the gun fight, O'Neil caught up to this man, struck him on the head with his revolver and in a hand to hand encounter overpowered him, taking his pistol from him and holding him until the wagon arrived. Officer O'Neil was removed to the county hospital and his prisoner was taken to the Bridewell hospital."

Further investigation developed that the robber had held up both the proprietor of the restaurant, Daniel Staley and a milk man named Fred E. Bell, 2119 West Congress street.

Robber Jumps His Bail.

"And it looks like it may have been all in vain," says O'Neil as he awaits his recovery at the Keystone avenue home.

Why? The captain's report tells the story.

"He (the robber) was arraigned in the Des Plaines street court on Jan. 6 and after one continuance was held in bonds of $6,000 by Judge Jacobs, on account of Officer O'Nell being in the hospital. When the case was scheduled to come up on Jan. 19 this man failed to appear for trial. Messages have been sent out and close watch has been kept but up to the present time he has not been apprehended."

And the captain's report ends as follows:

"The courage and endurance displayed by O'Neil is very exceptional, in view of the fact that he had been wounded twice, but with grit and determination, he persisted in the pursuit of this holdup man, pitting his weakened strength against the robber, disarming and capturing him alive, rather than killing him."

Other candidates for the award which went to O'Neil were numerous and worthy. Here is the list of those given honorable mention for the month:

Sergt. Thomas J. Mangan, detective bureau—For the arrest of two men who had robbed two Yellow cab drivers and stolen the cab of one. One of the robbers snapped a loaded revolver at Mangan six times. It failed to fire. Mangan wounded one robber in the gun fight and hit the other over the head with a pistol butt, capturing both.

Patrolman Fred A. Koehler, chauffeur at detective bureau—For killing Thomas Sauches, 217 Alexander street, a poolroom keeper, who had wounded Koehler in a gun battle at La Salle street and Archer avenue, Jan. 1.

Patrolman Arthur Mercer, Cottage Grove avenue station—For his promptness in coming to the defense of Patrolman William Adlam, who was searching a colored man in front of 2609 South Wabash avenue at 8 p. m., Jan. 25. The colored man fired a shot at Adlam, and Mercer, leaping forward, shot the gunman in the abdomen, killing him.

Dodge's $30,000 Dice Game Check Figures in Lawsuit

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—An alias summons was granted today to Nic Frank, president of the Frank Products company, by the county clerk in an effort to serve a notice on John Duval Dodge, son of the late John Dodge, auto manufacturer in a suit for $30,000, in which Dodge and Albert Day are defendants. The suit was filed last May over a check for $30,000 given by Dodge to Day in a dice game. Dodge lost $30,000 and paid the amount by check. The payment was stopped the following morning at the banks before Day could present it. Day later gave the check to Frank for payment of a debt.

MURDERS SOLVED, PLOTS AIRED AS POLICE NAB GANG

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 10.—An organized band of slayers and dynamiters, which operated in at least three states, has been rounded up, according to city, state, and federal officers. The combined forces of law officers today made seventeen arrests of those they accuse of being ringleaders or members of the band.

Six men were arrested in or near Baltimore, nine were seized in Clarksburg and Fairmont, W. Va., and two in Uniontown, Pa.

Seven Murders Known.

The men are charged with being implicated in at least seven murders. They also are accused of many dynamite outrages and numerous extortion plots.

One of the murders—the specific grounds on which the men held here were arrested—was the death of Belle Lemon, whose body was found on the grounds of the Rolling Road Golf club on July 13. The police say this woman was slain by a recruit in the gang at the order of one of the leaders. The leader, they say, condemned the girl to death because she had jilted him.

One Killed in Chicago.

Rosario Dimarco—the "Big Rosie" who was mentioned frequently in the case last July, is dead now. Belle Lemon was his girl and the police declare the gang planned to "wreck" him and to start by taking away his girl, Belle Lemon.

The last they heard from "Big Rosie" was in Chicago. He was not hiding from the police, but from the gang, and three weeks ago, when he had made $15,000 and was building a new kingdom for himself in the Chicago underworld, they got him. He was found dead in Taylor street with six bullets in his body.

The men held at Clarksburg are accused of the murder of Jimmy Papara, alias Jimmy Little, who was killed three weeks ago tonight.

Some Confess Crimes.

According to the Clarksburg police they obtained written statements from a number of the prisoners, clearing up several murders and dynamitings and plots to kill well known residents of Clarksburg and Fairmont, including the chiefs of police of the cities. Crimes mentioned in these statements, the police said, included:

The murder of Belle Lemon.

Shooting of Angelo Cambria.

Murders of John Lacava, Clarksburg taxicab driver; "Big Joe" Cenite of Clarksburg, and Rocco Vergillione of Fairmont.

Among those marked for death, police said, were the Rev. T. E. Gainer and Chiefs of Police Wolfe and L. D. Snyder of Clarksburg and Fairmont.

Writ Too Late to Prevent Armenians' Deportation

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Fifty-one Armenian refugees from Turkey were shipped back to the near east on the steamer Madonna of the Fabre line on Friday afternoon, although a writ of habeas corpus requiring their production in the federal court had been issued before the Madonna had left its dock.

4 DOGS GIVEN $16,000 BY WILL. DISINHERITED

Four dogs, supposed heirs to a $16,000 portion of the estate of Mrs. Margaret Howard, 5037 Cheltenham place, were disinherited yesterday under a ruling by Probate Judge Henry Horner. He refused probation to either of two alleged wills purporting to have been executed by the late Mrs. Howard.

Several other legatees, including Mrs. Tillie Leighton, sister of the dead woman; the Arkansas Children's home at Little Rock, and the Rev. Edward Lawson of Alliance, O., all named as heirs in one or the other of the wills, have agreed to "maintain the canine heirs in the luxury to which they have been accustomed" pending an appeal of the ruling to the Circuit court.

In one will Mrs. Howard's four dogs are named as the beneficiaries of the income from the Cheltenham place property valued at $16,000, while Mrs. Leighton, the sister, is given $500.

Both wills are being contested by Mrs. Leighton, who, as nearest living relative of Mrs. Howard, will inherit the whole estate if Judge Horner's ruling nullifying both alleged wills is upheld by the higher court.

28 FIREMEN, 63 YEARS OLD OR OVER, RETIRED

Assistant Marshal Crapo One of Those Hit.

The retirement of twenty-eight members of the fire department, including Seventh Assistant Fire Marshal James L. Crapo, six battalion chiefs and nine captains were recommended yesterday by Fire Commissioner John F. Cullerton in a letter to Fire Marshal Arthur F. Seyferlich.

The move is another step in Mr. Cullerton's plan to increase the efficiency of the department. [The step is made necessary, he says, by the installation of motor equipment. The entire plan contemplates the retirement on pension of between 300 and 400 firemen who are not physically capable of performing fire fighting duties.

Men 63 Years or Older.

The men recommended for retirement yesterday are in "Group Two," consisting of men 63 years old and older. It is said to be the largest number of officers and men ever recommended for retirement at one time in the history of the department.

"Group Three," consisting of men between 58 and 63 years of age, will be the next group recommended for retirement, according to Mr. Cullerton. The recommendations on these will come within a month or two.

"The retirement program is in line with our efforts to bring the department to its peak in efficiency now that motorization has been completed," said Mr. Cullerton. "The men are being retired under the law which permits the withdrawal from active service of men who have been on the force for twenty years and who are 50 years old."

Battalion Chiefs Hit.

The following are the battalion chiefs included in the commissioner's recommendation: Joseph L. Kenyon, 64 years old, Twelfth battalion; George H. McAllister, 65 years old, Seventeenth battalion; David Mahoney, 65 years old, Tenth battalion; Benjamin A. O'Connor, 63 years old, Thirteenth battalion; Eugene A. Swenie, 63 years old, Twenty-third battalion; and John Evans, 66 years old, Eighteenth battalion.

The captains whose retirements have been recommended are: Michael McKiernan, 64 years old, engine 63; Daniel Murphy, 63 years old, engine 115; John Tiedman, 64 years old, engine 4; Patrick Salvey, 66 years old, engine 86; James J. Healey, 64 years old, engine 102; Patrick J. Healey, 65 years old, engine 59; John Hennessey, 65 years old, engine 101; Capt. John Crotty, 63 years old, engine 122, and Capt. Thomas Elliott, 64 years old, engine 24.

The following is the list of lieutenants whose retirement is requested: Henry Staatz, 63 years old, engine 88; James Tracey, 63 years old, engine 101; Michael Clark, 64 years old, engine 120, and Henry Becker, 59 years old, engine 112.

The firemen listed for retirement in the recommendation are the following: Fred Bruhn, 63 years old, engine 69; Harry Clohesy, 63 years old, engine 168; John J. Farrell, 63 years old, engine 79; Patrick Fleming, 73 years old, shop employé; Michael Prendergast, 64 years old, engine 96; William J. Welch, 64 years old, engine 100; Alonzo J. Francks, 76 years old, engine 97, and Charles J. Tews, 64 years old, engine 17.

department had expected the shake-up, according to Mr. Cullerton.

RICH WOMAN, ILL, ELUDES NURSES, JUMPS TO DEATH

Wife of W. M. Leeds Commits Suicide.

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The body of Mrs. Louise Hartshorne Leeds, wife of Warner M. Leeds, and sister-in-law of Princess Anastasia of Greece, was found on the snow covered sidewalk in front of her home at 11 East 65th street this morning. She had left her bed on the second floor, climbed the stairway to the fifth floor, and jumped from a front window. Death was instantaneous.

Dr. Walter G. Lough, the Leeds' family physician, said that Mrs. Leeds had suffered a nervous breakdown several weeks ago. Feb. 1 her condition became so serious that Dr. Lough sent her to a sanitarium. She returned home Thursday, apparently much improved.

Climbs to Fifth Floor.

There were several trained nurses in the house, two of them attending Mrs. Leeds and two others attending Mr. Leeds, who is ill in a room adjoining that of his wife. Mrs. Leeds waited until the nurses had gone downstairs. Eluding the servants, too, she left her room on the second floor front and ran hurriedly upstairs, clad only in her nightrobe.

Miss Eleanore Walker, a nurse, returned to find Mrs. Leeds' room empty. There was a hurried search throughout the house.

In a front bedroom on the fifth floor Miss Walker saw Mrs. Leeds leaning across the window sill. Before the nurse could reach her or even attract her attention, Mrs. Leeds had thrown herself forward across the snow covered coping and plunged to death on the sidewalk below.

Was Mentally Deranged.

Dr. Lough examined the body and found that death had been instantaneous. He said that Mrs. Leeds was suffering from temporary mental derangement.

Warner M. Leeds is a brother of the late William B. Leeds, whose enterprise in organizing the tin plate branch of the steel industry laid the foundation for a vast fortune and earned for him the title of "tin plate king." Warner M. Leeds formerly was vice president of the American Sheet Steel and Tin Plate company. Sharing with his brother the profits of tin plate merger, Mr. Leeds accumulated a large fortune.

TWO CHICAGOANS STIR EUROPE BY PUZZLE OF LOVE

Fiance Hunts Kidnaped Girl and Italian.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—A general alarm has been sent through Europe for Mrs. Harry Fleming, who was Florence Rewald and is said to have lived in Chicago and Harvey, Ill. She is reported to have been kidnaped.

Her fiancé, Kornel Komornicki, who says he is a wealthy Chicago exporter and a former Polish nobleman, claims she has been carried off by Sig. Bolignini, a tourist guide for a trans-Atlantic steamship company. She met Sig. Bolignini while crossing on the Berengaria. She disappeared in Paris on Feb. 6, the day of her arrival. Mr. Komornicki filed suit for loss of affections and abduction against the steamship company today, holding it responsible for Sig. Bolignini.

Mrs. Fleming came to Paris to get a divorce. She wired Mr. Komornicki, her fiancé, to meet her in Cherbourg.

Threatened to Knife Fiancé.

"I noticed that this dark, handsome Italian had gained a strange influence over the girl," Mr. Komornicki told THE TRIBUNE. "We had a violent quarrel on the train en route to Paris over her. Sig. Bolignini posed as a director of the steamship company and tried to throw me off the train, saying I didn't have the privilege of riding on a special train. I found them together later in the washroom of the train. Sig. Bolignini forced me away, saying it was his duty to protect the company's passengers and she had some things to confide to him."

At the Paris station Sig. Bolignini threatened to knife Mr. Komornicki if the latter followed them, according to the former nobleman. Then the pair suddenly disappeared.

Drugged Into Submission.

"I think she must have been drugged into submission," declared Mr. Komornicki.

Mr. Komornicki, who served as an aviation instructor in Dayton during the war, was seriously injured in a crash. He intended to marry the girl in the spring after she had been granted a divorce. He has employed private detectives all over Europe to trace his fiancée, particularly in Italy.

The steamship company denies knowledge of the whereabouts of Sig. Bolignini since Feb. 6.

POLITICS AND THE ROAD PROBLEM.

Illinois cannot have too many good roads. It is virtually impossible to pay for a good road more than it is worth. But a road should not cost the taxpayers more than is necessary, and we do not believe our program of road building should be framed to advance the fortunes of Gov. Small and any other politicians.

As a persistent advocate of good roads THE TRIBUNE therefore opposes the proposal of Gov. Small for a bond issue of $100,000,000 and favors the bill of Senator Buck for an issue of $30,000,000.

Our opposition to the larger issue is based on the conviction that the smaller sum, together with funds now available, is all that can be properly expended on road building for several years, probably up to 1926. If this is correct there will be time enough to provide for further expenditure, and the taxpayers of the state should not be asked to add an additional and unnecessary sum of $70,000,000 to their present heavy burden.

Another serious evil of premature action is that it would give the governor an opportunity to abuse the power of locating roads, as he has done under the present law. Thus for our huge bond issue we may expect no more road building than under Senator Buck's, but we may be certain of a new distortion of our road system for the political benefit of the Small-Thompson alliance.

Our road situation as it stands today is thus described by Senator Buck: Under the act of 1917 which provided for a bond issue of $60,000,000 for the building of 4,706 miles of road, a mileage of 1,650 has been completed, leaving 3,056 to be completed. Toward this work we have $1,000,000 cash and $43,000,000 unsold bonds. It is estimated that automobile license fees for 1923 and 1924 will bring in $17,000,000, and federal aid $4,000,000. Thus up to Jan. 1, 1926, there will be available a total of $65,000,000.

The original provision of $60,000,000 is conceded to be insufficient owing to increased costs, and it is estimated that at the rate of $30,000 per mile, plus $5,000,000 for special bridges, it will take $96,680,000 to complete the project for about 4,800 miles of roads, which means a present shortage of $31,180,000.

Senator Buck's bill, therefore, calls for an additional bond issue of $30,000,000, which, with $11,000,000 from license fees and federal aid for 1925, would make a total of $41,000,000.

This sum is sufficient to provide for the completion of about 4,800 miles of roads, maintenance, and interest on bonds.

Could we build more roads if we provide for more? In order to complete the 4,800 miles it will be necessary to build 1,000 miles a year in 1923, 1924, and 1925. Senator Buck says this is the maximum that can be built under favorable conditions, and could not be realized if there were serious labor troubles or a tieup of the cement supply.

We believe the people of Illinois expect the legislature to protect them from inordinate demands advanced for political purposes, and will require the governor to show that his proposal for an enormous increase of our road bond issue is justifiable in the public interest and is not a piece of political tactics in the interest of himself and his allies.

At the same time we are confident the people want a sound road building program, to be pushed vigorously with sufficient funds. It would seem Senator Buck's proposal meets our present requirements.

HERE'S A GIFT TO ST. LOUIS.

The trouble with this republic is that its capital is in the wrong place. We don't hesitate to say we want it changed. It is psychologically wrong. We send men from the corn belt and plains to Washington, and they are exposed to the captivations of the east and the graces of the south, and succumb.

Thus we get the policy that what's good for the eastern and southern seaboard is for the good of the republic. Two Atlantic-Pacific canals will make the midwestern seaway unnecessary. It's a genius of fascination which can bring this about.

It has been remarked that Washington is an ideal place for the prevention of radicalism in congress and in government. If Lenin were subjected to its languors he might be joining one of Morgan's clubs. La Follette survives a Washington summer, but we do not know what he would be if congress sat in Chicago or Milwaukee or Duluth.

Congress takes its ease in the southern and congenial exposure and is too relaxed to be violent, and even very active. This is supposed to be favorable to the stability of the republic. Trepidity does not bring about radical upheavals.

We do not know how much trouble Chicago climate would cause by putting pep in the congressmen and bureaucrats, and we'd hate to see the bureaucrats any more active. To prove that we have no selfish motives we'll not ask that the capital be moved to Chicago. We'll be content if we can get a postoffice. The job of prying that out of congress will take considerable activity, and to avoid the issue of a dangerously inspiring climate we'll be willing to give St. Louis the capital.

There the government can find conditions of life just as gracious and soothing as in Washington, and there'll be no greater urge towards thought and action. We do not wholly concede that a dormant government is necessary even in a democracy, but the point is to get the capital moved into the midwest, and we'll not insist on a lively one.

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

The German chancellor asserts that Germany has paid on reparations in gold assets and goods $11,250,000,000. This does not include territorial losses. The French officials and publicists claim that up to last December Germany has paid in cash and property only about $2,000,000,000. The statement of the reparations commission as to payments up to December, 1921, is not comprehensive and leaves out so many important items that it is not of much value. Obviously where such vast discrepancy exists it is the result of a difference in viewpoint rather than valuation, a difference of interpretations of treaty provisions rather than of the worth or character of the property paid, although there are considerable differences as to values also.

Meanwhile, we in America are groping through a tangle of assertions and counter assertions, and we ought to get our feet on firmer ground. The fact that we are not able to take action at once should not obscure the probability that we may find it possible and emphatically desirable to take action at some time in the near future. We ought, therefore, to prepare to act intelligently, and our preparation should begin with acquiring as much information as we can get as to German conditions, social and economic; German production, German resources, and capacity to meet reparation payments.

We cannot form a policy unless we are much better informed, and by this we mean the press and public, not merely the department of state, and possibly the senate. Any affirmative policy involves vital decisions for the nation, and should have unmistakable public opinion back of it. Statecraft evolved in an ivory tower of intellectual and moral self-sufficiency is futile, and even mischievous, as we have learned since the war. Mr. Harding and Mr. Hughes should see that ample information is collected, analyzed, and presented to the American people. On this basis a program of affirmative action at the proper time can be safely formulated and may hope for adequate popular support.

ABOLISH GUN-TOTING.

Senator Dailey has introduced a bill making it an additional offense and a felony to carry a gun in the commission of burglary or other similar crime. We trust the measure will be enacted. It attacks a serious phase of the gun toting evil, and if juries enforce it vigorously the lives of peaceful citizens and especially of police officers will be safer than they are now.

Another attempt to restrict the gun toting evil is Representative Igoe's bill requiring every possessor of a firearm having a barrel less than twelve inches long to obtain a firearms certificate. The certificate shall be issued by the sheriff and in cities of over 100,000 shall be countersigned by the chief of police. Applicants for certificates would be compelled to give residence, occupation, and the reason for possessing the weapon. Dealers would be required to obtain licenses to sell such firearms and pawnbrokers prohibited from lending on unregistered guns. Minors under 16 would be ineligible to certificates.

The bill also makes provision that known gunmen or ex-convicts may be sent to the penitentiary for gun toting alone, but the penalty is reduced from $500 and a year's imprisonment to $300 and six months' maximum. The reduction is proposed on the theory that conviction would be easier.

If this is the best the legislature is ready to do we can only hope it will diminish gun toting, but it is our opinion that such a measure of regulation will prove a disappointment. What is needed is state and federal prohibition of the private manufacture or sale to private persons or dealers of any pistol, revolver, or other firearm easily concealed on the person.

This prohibition is indorsed by experienced police officials and the objections to it, which seem to come chiefly from the trade—that is, manufacturers and dealers in revolvers—are not plausible. The chief objection is that prohibition will disarm the law abiding citizen and not the criminal. Police officials deny this. There would, of course, be a transition period in which the existing stock in the hands of the underworld would have to be cleaned up. But after that, with drastic penalties for crimes committed while armed and enforceable penalties for gun toting, the situation would be corrected.

But waiving that, the argument that the average law abiding citizen finds it necessary or advisable to go armed to defend himself from attack holds very little water. It is violently urged by gentlemen who sell revolvers at a profit, but the common sense of the situation is this: the law abiding citizen who meets a highwayman and expects to get the drop on him doesn't know what he is about. The thug is the one who knows how to draw quick and is ready when the pedestrian is not. He will draw first and shoot quicker in virtually every case than the law abiding citizen, who naturally is neither mentally, morally, nor physically ready to kill. Common sense should teach the citizen to submit to robbery rather than enter upon a duel with an expert under conditions entirely advantageous to the expert. Bank messengers, paymasters, and men or women compelled to carry much money should have a police, or officially armed, escort.

The case of the householder is also raised. He must have defense from the armed marauder. He can have it in spite of the prohibition of revolvers. He is entitled to the possession of a shotgun or repeating rifle, which in his hands is a much more dependable weapon than a revolver and would be much more feared by the burglar.

In short, we have heard no sound, weighty argument against the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of revolvers for private use. The revolver is a man killer and nothing else, and in a civilized society no one who is not lawfully authorized to kill, the policeman, the soldier, should be able to get or carry one. The objections are selfish and come from men and concerns who are making money by distributing man killers and they should not weigh with the legislature. Gun toting is a curse, and state legislatures and the federal congress should lose no time in destroying it where only it can be destroyed, at the roots.

"ENOUGH" IS TOO MUCH.

A Hammond, Ind., father recently was presented with his fifth son. That's enough, he believes, and so names the helpless infant "Enough." No doubt he believes that a merry jest, and is collecting cigars on the strength of his originality instead of dispensing them. We hope he lives to an age sufficiently ripe so that "Enough" may reason with him on the subject without fear of the woodshed.

That boy is in for a lot of trouble. He'll probably turn out to be either a cowed and shrinking citizen or a battling young bucko with a chip always on his shoulder, spreading terror and destruction in his path. He'll get along well enough in these first few years. His mother probably will call him "Enny," or something like that, and he will survive. But when he gets to school the boys will call him "Plenty" or "Too Much" or things which will be even more maddening to a boyish ear. He'll have to submit and take it, or fight. In either event his path will be stormy.

Why cannot parents be reasonable when it comes to naming their children? Why must they always satisfy their own whims in such matters? It is the child, not the parent, who must carry the name through life. Why load him with the burden of a name which is either ridiculous or sentimental and silly? His parents generally impose sufficient burden upon him when they give him life and the heritage of their own characteristics. There is no need to add to such burdens by making him a potential butt of jokes, abuse, and ridicule. A boy is sensitive, and life is hard enough at best. In common decency to their offspring, parents should be reasonable with their names.

IMPROVING FARM LIFE.

A recent issue of the Breeders' Gazette contained an interesting discussion by farmers and farmers' wives, in letters, on "What's Wrong with the Farm?" The women said that the life was unattractive because it was lonely. One woman wrote of the early breakfast, the husband all day in the field and too tired to talk when he got home. The children were lonely.

One farmer said that the lack of bathtubs was a nuisance. He came in from work at night dirty and was too tired to take a sponge bath, and had no other way of getting clean. His wife didn't want him sitting around the house in his dirty clothes.

The objections to farm life were almost entirely on these notes, the lack of society and of recreation, and of the utilities of comfort which the city worker has.

These objections are the ones which are being removed by modern development. The automobile has put the farm in contact with the town. The town has the moving pictures. Two of the most popular diversions are open to the farmers' family. Motor machinery is taking considerable drudgery out of the work. The farmer rides and handles levers instead of plodding and handling lines.

The range of activities is increasing and the tendency is to break down isolation. Rural free delivery establishes another contact with the world outside. Good roads are widening the farm horizon.

The social disadvantages of rural life are being removed, and if they constitute the major ills, as the letters of the farmers and the farmers' wives indicate, there won't be so much wrong with farm life, at least in that direction, in a few years.

A DEFENSE AGAINST FORD.

Seven former members of the United States cabinet, four governors or ex-governors, and various other national officials and national figures comprising the national committee for defense of the federal water power act have protested emphatically to congress against acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals. Theirs is a protest which ought to be heeded. It is nonpartisan and unprejudiced. It comes from men who know what they are talking about. It is disinterested.

Leaving for later comment the buncombe concerning fertilizers with which the Ford protagonists have doped American farmers and won their support, let us consider only the water power feature of the proposals, which have prompted the protest above.

The federal water power act which this committee is defending was passed after years of agitation and consideration. It is thoroughly sound. The committee calls it "the best embodiment of the ideal of conservation of natural resources for the public welfare that has been placed on the national statute books with the possible exception of the national forest laws." And how does this law relate to the Ford proposals?

The law provides that all water power leases be limited to fifty years. Ford has asked for a 100 year lease with provision for indefinite renewals. The law provides for the return of government works to the government at the end of fifty years. Ford seeks indefinite private possession of the government works. The law provides for regulation of price to the private consumer. So far as we know Ford has agreed to no such provision. The law provides that public water power rights taken for profit shall make a return to the public. Instead of doing that Ford would take the water power rights for nothing, paying the government 6 per cent only on the $28,000,000 or thereabouts necessary to complete the water power installation, and in addition giving sufficient power to operate the locks, and paying no taxes. His only immediate cash outlay would be $5,000,000 for the nitrate plants and steam property which cost the government about $85,000,000.

In brief, government acceptance of the Ford proposal would break down the water power act. Clearly the protest is well founded.

Editorial of the Day

IS THERE A SHORTAGE OF COMMON LABOR?
[Free translation from Prosveta (Enlightenment; Slovenian).]

The barons of industry are claiming that there is a lack of common labor and that for this reason a larger number of ordinary workers is to be admitted in America from foreign countries.

From New York comes the news that the city authorities have hired 20,000 laborers to clean the snow from the public streets. Shoveling snow is by no means steady work, not even season work. There does indeed fall snow in the winter, but not throughout the entire winter. The men that are put on to clean off snow will work barely for a few days a month in the winter. If the city officials have been able to get 20,000 men for such a job which lasts only a few days in a month the fact has been established that there is no shortage of common labor.

A small news item will sometimes tell more about the labor situation in America than long wails of manufacturers. The 20,000 men who were glad to get a chance to earn a little money by cleaning off snow for a few days have surely not dropped from the clouds in New York. They must have been there for weeks and perhaps for months, otherwise they would not bother about taking up work which is known to last only for a very brief time and to be very far from well paid. So here we have a good answer to all the talk of the manufacturers who are telling us about the shortage of workers and are trying to show the American labor situation in the wrong light.

BEAUTY FALLACIES.

RECENTLY women were disturbed by certain pronouncements made by a university professor. According to these statements, the use of cold creams, flesh foods, hair tonics, and all such was wholly without virtue. When a woman spends one hour or more each night prior to going to bed in treating her hair with hair tonics, treating her scalp with scalp tonics, treating her face with cold creams, treating her wrinkles with flesh foods, and so on and so forth and so so and something else, she is getting some exercise for her arms and entertaining herself, but she is adding nothing to the length of her hair, nor the stand, nor the gloss, and she is postponing the days of wrinkles not one bit.

Of course, this pronouncement left the women flabbergasted. Now comes another physician into the field. This time it is a woman physician, Dr. M. Trotter.

Dr. Trotter, after a series of experiments made with women, says about the following: "Well, maybe the mere man professor is right, and facial and hair remedies do no good, but, at least, certain of them do no harm." She assiduously rubbed vaseline or petrolatum on the skin of a group of women for a considerable time. She accurately measured the size of the hairs as to breadth, coarseness, length, and rate of growth. This was done at stated intervals and with great care. The conclusion was that greasing the skin with petrolatum or vaseline does not cause fine, downy hairs to become coarser, nor does it increase the rate of growth of either fine or coarse hair. When applied to the eyebrows, it does not thicken them or cause them to overgrow. These conclusions will be reassuring to many women.

She also gives a clean bill of health to shaving. Periodical, habitual shaving does not increase the number of hairs, nor increase their rate of growth, nor coarsen them. Fine, downy hairs are not converted into coarse, stiff hairs by shaving. The bad reputation in these respects which shaving holds is because the habit of shaving is generally begun just at the period of life when, for other reasons, the skin is becoming hairy, and coarse hairs are appearing in certain locations.

The first effect of sunburn was to stimulate the growth of hair, but this stimulation was soon lost, and before long the rate of growth dropped back to normal, in spite of repeated exposure to sunlight. There are certain causes which do stimulate growth of hair. In certain diseases, hair grows profusely over the face. The secretions of certain ductless glands cause this effect. But simple medicaments such as vaseline and simple procedures such as shaving do not.

BRAN IS O. K.

Mrs. J. W. B. writes: Will you kindly advise me if bran and graham breads are suitable for a person having high blood pressure, to eat? Also eggs?

REPLY:

Bran and graham breads are all right. Eggs are not.

MACHINISTS' SKIN DISEASES.

Mrs. G. M. E. writes:

"1. Will you please tell me the name of the skin disease that machinists have?

"2. I think it is caused by constant use of oil.

"3. What treatment do you recommend?

"My husband has some pimples on his hands and arms, and it is causing him anxiety. It's very hard to rid the hands of all the grease and oils, and he thinks maybe it will spread more and be hard to fight, since he has to use the oils at work."

REPLY.

It frequently causes boils. What is called eczema is also caused by such work. The essential is to keep the skin clean. McConnell advises:

1. On entering plant wash the hands thoroughly with warm water, sawdust, and soap.

2. Dry the skin well and grease with sterile lanolin or lanolin and castor oil. Rub the grease into the skin.

3. At end of work wash with warm water, soap, and sawdust.

LOOK AFTER GALL BLADDER.

K. M. N. writes: "I am inclined to be bilious. Have had jaundice once, and feel and look as though I am on the verge of having it again.

"Will you kindly suggest diet or treatment to relieve the condition?

"Is jaundice caused by biliousness?"

REPLY.

I shouldn't wonder if you are subject to gall stones or have an infected gall bladder. "Bilious" is a very loosely used term and might mean any one of several conditions. Most people who say they are bilious are merely constipated. Some suffer from constipation plus the effects of overeating. If that is all you mean, live on vegetables, fruits, bran and whole wheat, and milk for a while.

Drink water in considerable quantities.

A SPECIES OF HIVES.

W. J. N. writes: "Kindly explain the cause of lumps forming on different parts of the body, face, and neck; this happens when I go in swimming or am out in the cold any length of time."

REPLY.

This is a species of hives. As a rule it means some form of protein sensitization in which cold springs the trap.

I knew a physician once who had worked a great deal with plague. In order to make his work moderately safe he had been vaccinated with Hafkines plague serum.

Thereafter, whenever he went in swimming in cold water, he broke out just as you do, I imagine.

You might try a daily cold sponge or cold air bath.

AN ANCIENT FALLACY.

M. B. writes:

"1. In reference to advice given 'Babe' recently in reply to her inquiry for a remedy to overcome the strong pains from which she suffers during the first days of her periods, I note that you prescribe hot baths. Would you kindly advise me whether you mean the baths to be taken during the period or whether you mean to take them just a day or so before, if possible.

"2. I have always understood that baths during this period were dangerous, and especially so in hot water, owing to a possibility of hemorrhage."

REPLY.

1. Both. Baths are useful during as well as immediately before. In addition to using baths keep the bowels regular. Send stamped, addressed envelope for copy of "Personal Hygiene for Women."

2. You have been incorrectly advised. The danger of hemorrhage due to warm baths is very remote.

CANNED MILK WON'T HURT.

Mrs. W. S. M. writes: "I am living in a community, where I cannot get fresh cow's milk daily, and am, therefore, obliged to use canned milk.

"1. Is that wholesome? Nutritious?

"2. I am always constipated. Can you tell me a harmless remedy? I get so tired using enemas."

REPLY.

1. It is. It is assumed that when one uses canned milk he also eats fresh fruit and vegetables.

2. Eat lots of bran. Make it into bran bread and bran muffins and eat it as a cereal. Eat vegetables and fruit. Drink lots of water.

CARING FOR CHICKEN POX.

Mrs. B. R. writes:

"1. What is the best treatment for chicken pox?

"2. Is is contagious to both young and old?

"3. About how long does it last?

"4. How long is the patient obliged to remain in the house?"

REPLY.

1. As a rule, chicken pox calls for no treatment. Keep the blisters clean.
2. Yes.
3. About ten days to two weeks.
4. Eighteen days in some places.

MUST THE LANDLORD PAY FOR REPAIRS?

Chicago, Feb. 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I am renting a flat and a few days ago my sink got stopped up. Whose place is it to have it put right? If I move can the landlord garnishee my wages for the cost of the repair? J. D.

In case of tenancy at a monthly rent where there has never been an agreement for a longer term either party can end the tenancy or the landlord can increase the rent at the end of any month of the tenancy on sixty days' notice. There is no legal obligation to assign a reason for such action. Since the statute merely specifies that the "landlord shall have the right to terminate the tenancy by sixty days' notice in writing," the legal effect of an oral notice is not clear.

The landlord is in general under no legal obligations to the tenant to clean or repair parts of the premises that are under the exclusive control of the tenant.

CHANGE OF NAME—NOT BY MARRIAGE.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I would like to change my name. What must I do to have this done? A. C.

No legal proceedings are required to make a change of name valid. It is sufficient if you use a new name and give notice of the change to those persons to whom the information may be material. In transactions in which your old name appears we suggest that you continue to use it to avoid confusion. For example, if real estate records show title in you, when you come to sell you should use the recorded name.

2. If the man married would the will stand as originally stated or would the wife be able to break the will and come in for a share? J. S.

1. Yes, if he is unmarried.

2. Yes, his wife could renounce the will and take instead her statutory share.

Juno then put the eyes of Argus in the tail of a peacock, a bird which was sacred to her.

THE TIPPERARY FUND.

A meeting of the Executive Committee appointed at a recent mass meeting of Irishmen to procure subscriptions to the Tipperary election fund from the Irish residents of each ward of the city was held at Burke's Hotel, last evening. There were very few members present. Mr. John Dillon was chosen Chairman pro tem., in the absence of Mr. Frank Agnew, the regular officer.

Senator Pomeroy, yesterday, had the effrontery to make his appearance in the Senate, and, further, had the boldness to ask an investigation as to his recent corrupt practices in Congress. The Senate was weak enough to give him a Committee, and if it have courage enough it will expel him without delay.

The House of Representatives again voted down a proposition to increase the salary of the President and the other Executive officers, and also the salaries of members of Congress.

WHY FORD DOESN'T GET MUSCLE SHOALS.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Much has been written recently regarding Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals and its relation to the coal and fertilizer situation. Many of us have often marveled at the fight Mr. Ford is making and also at his country-wide propaganda which is so plaintive in the name of the farmer and on Mr. Ford's part so threatening.

His whole case rests upon the alleged benefits which will inure to the public only in the event Mr. Ford himself secures Muscle Shoals. When one considers the magnitude of his propaganda and the statements of the benefits to be derived therefrom one is led inevitably to the conclusion that the reason his offer has not been accepted is not that the entire congress has been deceived by the so-called "interests" but is in reality the terms of the offer itself. It is beyond a doubt impossible of acceptance.

In brief, the objections to his offer are:

1. Failure to guarantee the manufacture of fertilizer.

2. Disregard of the policy of the government with reference to water power development. Mr. Ford's offer requires a lease of twice the duration of that of any other lessee under the federal water power act.

3. Cost to the government to comply with Mr. Ford's demands. He would acquire properties for $5,000,000 which cost the government more than twenty times that amount.

4. Failure to pay the government an adequate return after the property is leased.

5. Failure to pay the government an adequate sum to take care of depreciation.

6. Interruption of the public service in the southeastern states by Mr. Ford's acquiring the Gorgas steam plant, the latter being in no way connected with or necessary under contract to sell to a public utility which serves the entire northern half of Alabama.

I respectfully submit that the reason Mr. Ford's offer has not been accepted is inherent in the offer itself and is not the fault of congress.

THE DRUG EVIL.

Kankakee, Ill., Feb. 3.—The dope evil in the United tSates is growing fast. Federal authorities have fought it several years, but sometimes it seems beyond control. Statistics differ. Some claim 1,000,000, some claim 2,000,000, some claim even 4,000,000 American men, women, boys, girls are now narcotic slaves.

But let's say there are 2,000,000. Let's say also that one dope victim can easily make one other dope victim. Two million doubled make 4,000,000, 4,000,000 doubled make 8,000,000. And so on. Some of our own children may help make this great number of victims.

The United States probably uses more devilish dope than any nation on earth. Narcotic peddlers "laugh and grow fat."

I find American cities have tried to kill it—but they don't seem to. They say, leave dope alone. That's just the trouble—the right folks leave dope alone, then the wrong folks get it.

One of our papers claims 100,000,000 ounces of dope were smuggled into America last year. All blame can't be put on the poppy; not all on opium, cocaine, morphine; not all on manufacturer, doctor, dealer; not all on fiend, victim, or "other fellow." But if we ourselves ask: "Is it I?" I feel I must say: "Thou art the man. You are your brother's keeper."

E PLURIBUS UNUM.

AND STILL WESTERN CANADA WANTS THE SEAWAY.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—As a diplomat you would make a wonderful plasterer. Did you ever try to make love to a girl by tickling her under the chin at the same time kicking her on the shins? That's what you are trying to do with Canada in today's editorial page. Do you realize that Canada is as much a part of the British empire as Illinois is a part of the Unated States and that every time you suggest meddling with any part of the empire the average Canadian sees red? You suffer from a short memory. Otherwise you would remember how Champ Clarke successfully killed the reciprocity treaty by making some bright remarks about annexing Canada.

PITY THE POOR HONKEE!

Chicago, Feb. 4.—The honkee may not be to blame for the disturbance caused by the honker in calling her to the street. Despite the obvious fact of coarse associations, she may be a person with inclinations toward decency, and deeply regretful of the social offence to which she is a contributing factor.

The essential impertinence of honking does not depend on the amount of noise employed. Its fundamental insolence consists in disturbing many to call one by whatever means. It is a moron habit closely akin to the rude childish "Yoo-hoo!" The caller is too timid or too indolent to ring the bell as real people do.

Pity the poor, unoffending honkee emerging under the sharply appraising eyes of her cattish neighbors: "So it's you that boob is honking for? Now we've got your number." Next time he honks be deaf until he rings!

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

LITTLE BREECHES.

By John Hay.

I don't go much on religion,
  I never ain't had no show;
But I've got a middlin' tight grip, sir,
  On the handful o' things I know.
I don't pan out on the prophets,
  And free-will, and that sort of thing—
But I b'lieve in God and the angels
  Ever sence one night last spring.

I come into town with some turnips,
  And my little Gabe come along—
No four-year-old in the county
  Could beat him for pretty and strong,
Peart and chippy and sassy,
  Always ready to swear and fight—
And I'd larnt him to chaw terbacker
  Jest to keep his milk-teeth white.

The snow come down like a blanket
  As I passed by Taggart's store;
I went in for a jug of molasses
  And left the team at the door.
They scared at something and started—
  I heard one little squall—
And hell-to-split over the prairie
  Went team, Little Breeches, and all.

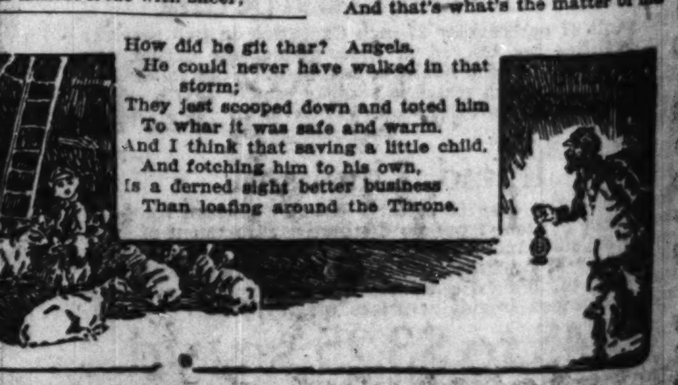
Hell-to-split over the prairie!
  I was almost froze with skeer;
But we rousted up some torches
  And sarched for 'em far and near.
At last we struck hosses and wagon,
  Snowed under a soft white mound,
Upsot, dead beat—but of little Gabe
  No hide nor hair was found.

And here all hope soured on me,
  Of my fellow-critter's aid—
I jest flopped down on my marrow-bones
  Crotch deep in the snow and prayed.

* * * * *

By this, the torches was played out,
  And me and Isrul Parr
Went off for some wood to a sheepfold
  That he said was somewhar thar.

We found it at last, and a little shed
  Where they shut up the lambs at night.
We looked in and seen them huddled thar,
  So warm, and sleepy, and white.
And thar sot Little Breeches and chirped,
  As peart as ever you see,
"I want a chaw of terbacker,
  And that's what's the matter of me."



How did he git thar? Angels.
  He could never have walked in that storm;
They jest scooped down and toted him
  To whar it was safe and warm.
And I think that saving a little child,
  And fotching him to his own,
Is a derned sight better business
  Than loafing around the Throne.

POLICE SEIZE 100 SUSPECTS IN BIG ROUNDUP

Comb City After Renewed Wave of Banditry.

More than 100 suspects were taken in a general crime roundup last night instigated by Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes as the result of a day of activity by payroll bandits, burglars and stickup men. Many of those arrested are said to be well known police characters and are being held as "suspects."

All last night detectives were checking up on the recent whereabouts and activities of the men, and this will be continued today.

Bandits Get $22,000.

Following an early morning robbery of the Kerman Smart shop, 4720 Sheridan road, in which the loot obtained reached $15,000, three daring daylight thefts by pay roll robbers netted more than $6,000. In addition the holdup of an Atlantic and Pacific Tea company collector, who lost $1,000, was reported in the evening.

The most spectacular and daring raid was on the pay roll of the H. McFarlane & Co. auto body works, 322 South Green street. Three armed men, masked with aviators' helmets, held up A. E. Summers, cashier of the company, and F. G. Helberg, superintendent, in front of the company offices. They escaped with $4,444.

Trail Pay Satchel in Maroon Car.

Summers and Helberg had just drawn the money from the Mercantile Trust and Savings bank and driven back to the company offices. As they left their automobile they were confronted by two armed, masked men, who had followed them in a maroon colored car.

Joseph Shea, a truck driver for the Paper Mills company, 517 South Wells street, told Sergts. W. S. Byrnes and William D. Stanberg of the Des Plaines street police station he had seen the robbers following the pay roll car and watched them in their preparation for the holdup. He could identify them, he said.

Trails Bandit Car.

"I noticed suspicious actions on the part of three men following the pay roll car," said Shea. "I saw them button aviators' helmets over their faces, leaving only their eyes exposed. I suspected a holdup, but I could not keep up with the faster autos. I pulled up in time to witness the robbery."

Sergt. Hugh McCarthy of the detective bureau and his squad later arrested Martin O'Leary, 28 years old, 2302 West Adams street, who is said to have a police record. He was reported in the vicinity of the holdup, and owns a car similar to the one driven by the pay roll bandits.

Take Contractor's $1,200 Roll.

William Klein, 3314 West 67th street, a contractor, was the victim of a second pay roll robbery. As he was entering his office on East 70th street, just west of Oglesby avenue, he was held up by two armed youths. The latter relieved him of a satchel containing $1,200, the pay roll of men employed by Klein on a construction job.

The third raid on pay rolls was at Al's Bake shop, 6840 South Aberdeen street. After locking Frank Dahleen, cashier, and Louis Steinbach, manager, in a closet of the shop two armed men robbed the cash drawer of $1,000—the weekly pay roll.

C. Schloss Hartoch, proprietor of a men's furnishing store at 3029 Lincoln avenue, reported that burglars had crashed a padded brick through his display window some time after 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning. They obtained goods valued at $300.

Many Small Holdups.

Two men and a woman in an automobile held up Alex Carlson, 2928 Kimball avenue, he reported to the Shakespeare avenue police, and secured $23.

Two teams of robbers consisting of two colored men and two white men staged four robberies on the south side, their total loot amounting to only $71. Eugene Fritz, 4820 South State street; Martin J. Scott, 4918 Washington Park court; R. C. O'Brien, 5132 South Park boulevard, and Alex Supilla, 12300 Emerald avenue, were the victims.

PROF. W. C. ROENTGEN, EX-RAY DISCOVERER, IS DEAD IN MUNICH

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Prof. William Conrad Roentgen, discoverer of the roentgen rays, popularly known as X-rays, is dead at Munich.

W. C. ROENTGEN.

William Conrad Roentgen was born in Lennep, Prussia, March 27, 1845, received his early education in Holland and then studied at Zurich, Switzerland, where he took his doctor's degree in 1869. After service as professor of Physics at various German universities, he went in 1885 to Wurzburg, where in 1895 he discovered Roentgen, or X-rays.

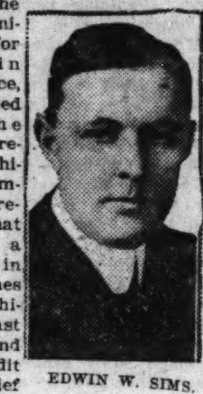
ATTACK MEN WHO SHIELD CRIME TO SHARE ITS LOOT

Trade "Respectability," Sims Charges.

An attack on the "higher-ups," the men who, outwardly respectable, secretly share the proceeds of criminals in return for their efforts in thwarting justice, was advocated yesterday in the fourth annual report of the Chicago Crime commission. The report shows that there has been a steady decrease in the major crimes committed in Chicago in the last four years, and much of the credit is given to Chief of Police Fitzmorris.



EDWIN W. SIMS.

"The next agency the commission should attack," says the report of former President Edwin W. Sims, "is the higher-up who, while outwardly preserving respectability, secretly shares the proceeds of crime in exchange for his cloak of respectability and his influence in thwarting justice. The man who sells his respectability for thieves' loot is worse than the criminal. He is a menace to our institutions. He must go."

Show Murder, Robbery Decreases.

A summary of the major crimes for the last four years, as prepared by the commission, follows:

	Murder.	Burglary.	Robbery.
1919	330	6,108	2,912
1920	194	5,495	2,782
1921	190	4,774	2,558
1922	228	4,301	2,007

Motor car thefts have also been greatly reduced, while the recoveries of stolen cars have been increased, the report further states. The percentage of penalties inflicted in the Criminal court was greater last year than in 1921, and there is a marked improvement in the administration of criminal justice.

More Convictions, Lighter Penalty.

Under the heading, "Murder," the report shows that while only one defendant suffered the death penalty in 1922, as compared to six in 1921, the percentage of persons convicted is higher. Of the 225 tried for murder in 1921, 55 were sentenced, a percentage of 24.44, while in 1922, of 191 defendants 73 were convicted, a percentage of 38.22.

Mr. Sims, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, the managing director of the commission, and Henry P. Crowell, chairman of the committee on police, all praise Chief Fitzmorris' work.

All of them point to the repeated demands for the resignation of the chief as proof that he is wielding a heavy hand in law enforcement. Mr. Sims states that in the past he has known of attempts by law abiding citizens to remove a chief of police for incompetency, but never before has he witnessed such an effort to get rid of a good police official.

"Hursen" Autos at "Hursen" Funerals
Are the Finest in America

It costs not a cent more to ride in one of Hursen's superb specially designed, private, noiseless limousines that it does to ride in any of the usual unlovely public funeral conveyances. Hursen's automobiles are recognized as the most beautiful in America.

The interior of "Hursen" cars is perfection in drawing-room elegance, and in arrangement for roomy comfort. The exterior in contour, in finish and in equipment represents a development far in advance of many of the highest-priced automobiles of the day.

Each has been specially designed by Hursen himself. Each required a small fortune to build. Each possesses those traits of unusual beauty, comfort and always appropriate loveliness which distinguish all things "Hursen."

"Hursen" cars are noiseless, vibrationless. Each rides like a Pullman coach. Each is under the supervision of a Hursen-trained, always correct, liveried driver. It is small wonder that a fleet of "Hursen" cars, wherever seen, always excites such universal admiration.

HE WASN'T SHEIK TO MAIDS WHEN HE HOED GARDEN

Rodolph Just Handy Man, His Old Boss Says.

West Wheatley, L. I., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The gardener, superintendent and kitchen maids on the country estate here of Cornelius N. Bliss Jr., related intimate, colorful stories tonight of Rodolph Valentino, as a mere "handy man" and fellow laborer, but they didn't paint him a sheik, perfect lover or flapperdom's idol.

Tuesday in Detroit, Carl Fischer, ballroom proprietor, who is employing Valentino at $7,500 a week for dancing with Winifred Hudnut, wife No. 2, referred to him as a "snob" who years ago polished Fischer's golf clubs while Fischer was a guest at the Bliss home here.

Denied Polishing Clubs.

The sheik indignantly denied ever polishing anybody's clubs, and said that when he was employed by Bliss he was the "head landscape gardener."

But Harry Stanton, an Englishman, for the last six years superintendent of the Bliss estate, tonight said:

"All the help know the story of this movie actor. He was just one of the help here. What he was told to do, he did. I don't know whether he polished Mr. Fischer's clubs, but I wouldn't be surprised.

"I believe his first job when he came to America was working here as a gardener's helper. That was in the spring of 1914.

"He didn't go under the Valentino name then. He was always for playing the gentleman, and was very arrogant. The maids didn't like him. Then he left all of a sudden, after having some kind of difficulty.

"He was originally employed to work on a golf course, I believe."

Will Return to Films.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Rodolph Valentino's engagement in Detroit, which terminates Sunday, is expected to be the first and last before he returns to the screen, his manager, Harry Field, announced today.

Field stated that Valentino had been notified by his attorneys that they had practically completed arrangements for him to return immediately to the films.

"I do not know whether we will go direct to the coast to commence work on a picture, but at present all indications point that way," Field said. "His attorneys wired me today that they had about settled the controversy over the contract and that we should be ready to begin work at the shortest notice."

Field refused to state whether Valentino would return to work for Famous Players-Lasky, or whether his contract with that concern had been canceled.

Alleged Tax Evader Caught; Wife Is Sought

60 BODIES TAKEN FROM WRECKED MINE AT DAWSON

Dawson, N. M., Feb. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dawson's death list in the disastrous blast which wrecked Mine No. 1 of the Phelps-Dodge corporation Thursday last probably will be 120. Officials have abandoned hope of finding any of the missing men alive, it was announced late today. Sixty bodies had been taken out of the mine late tonight.

W. D. Brennan, manager of the local properties, after an exploration trip which took him to the most distant point in the mine—the end of No. 4 crosscut north—declared emphatically there is little doubt that all have perished.

P. G. Beckett, general manager of the Phelps-Dodge corporation, arrived here this afternoon to investigate the explosion.

Blizzard Hampers Rescuers.

Rescue crews were hampered early in the day by a blizzard, but the storm subsided at noon and the work continued.

If none of the miners still unaccounted for in the mine are found alive the disaster will have widowed fifty-five women and made orphans of ninety-two children, according to figures compiled late today.

Harry Morrison of Cherry Vale, N. M., a dry farmer, who is a miner during the slack season in farming, left a widow and six children. Earl Graves another dry farmer of Cherry Vale and companion of Morrison, is survived by a widow and four children.

Son Killed in 1913 Disaster.

Albert E. English Sr., whose son was foreman of mine No. 1, is survived by five children. One son was killed in the 1913 disaster here and the body of the other, the foreman, was taken from the mine tonight.

The welfare department of the Phelps-Dodge corporation already has been organized and none of the descendants left by miners who lost their wives will suffer, Manager Brennan announced.

24 Dead in Canada, 9 Missing.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 10.—[United Press]—Nine miners caught in the blast which wrecked the Canadian Collieries mine No. 4 at Cumberland, Vancouver Island, were unaccounted for today. Twenty-four bodies had been taken from the shaft. Forty men were imprisoned by the blast. Six were seriously injured and one escaped unhurt.

Three Boys Disappear; Note Says They're Headed West

Arthur Christensen, 13 years old, 4224 Fulton street, left a note to his parents yesterday which stated that he is on his way to Oklahoma with Martin Milken, 12 years old, and Edward Edan, his school chums. The Austin police were asked to search for them.

JILTS WIFE, TWO BABES FOR GIRL 16 AND LOVE NEST

The glamour of a romance with a married man was what caused Miss Lucille Carlson, 16 years old, 827 Belmont avenue, to leave her home, she told Policewoman Theresa John of the Chicago avenue station yesterday when arrested in custody with Edward Goodman, 34 years old, 665 Wellington avenue. Goodman is the father of two children.

The two revealed plans to build a "love nest" in the artist's colony to pursue their love in the manner each chose. They were booked on a charge of disorderly conduct and taken before Judge Henry M. Walker in Chicago avenue court.

Mrs. Goodman, the wife, appeared and told Judge Walker that Miss Carlson had stolen the affections of her husband and that she had lured him from his home and family.

Goodman retaliated by saying that he and his wife did not understand each other. They were not "soul mates," he said, while he and Miss Carlson were ethereally suited. He needed her love, he said.

Miss Carlson, it developed, agreed with the opinions held by Goodman. She said it was "perfectly wonderful" to be in love with a married man, but stoutly denied that she was anything of the "lure" she was pictured by Mrs. Goodman.

After considering the case, Judge Walker continued it until Feb. 16, and asked that the girl's parents be brought to court when the case comes up again.

At request of her father, Warren avenue police yesterday began investigation of a weird story of travel and adventure in company with a "mystery sheik" told by 17 year old Mae Ryniker, 3134 Warren avenue, following her return home. Both the father, William Ryniker, and police were skeptical of Mae's recital of wanderings with the strange man through Texas and took her before Dr. William H. Hickson, head of the psychopathic laboratory.

The girl, who refused to reveal the identity of her "sheik," said she met him at Quincy, Ill., and that he persuaded her to accompany him, offering marriage, but that at El Paso, Tex., he left her declaring he had been "drawn for overseas military service."

Use of Schools for Private Purposes Costly; Banned

Use of Chicago schools for other than educational purposes has cost the public $70,000 a year, Superintendent Mortenson declared yesterday in an address before a meeting of principals and assistants. He ordered that no persons or associations hereafter be permitted to use the buildings.

This North American Breakfast for 45c. The same breakfast elsewhere—not one bit better or tastier—may cost $1.00 (or more)

For 30 cents we will fry for you 2 fresh country eggs and include at that price 4 strips of the finest bacon. For 10 cents we give you an individual 2-cup pot of coffee with real cream (not a mere cup). And for 5 cents your choice of fresh toast, zweiback, coffee cake or a big sweet roll with butter. That's a total of only 45 cents for as fine a breakfast as anyone could want. In other high-class dining places, where the food is carried to your table, that same breakfast will cost $1, and more, yet our food-quality can't be beaten at any price.

CALIPH RAZZIT RUNS FETE OF GRIDIRON CLUB

He Offers Foreign Policy Skit.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—America's foreign policy, made to appear elusive and at the mercy of congress, was the principal subject of satirical treatment by the Gridiron club at its mid-winter dinner tonight, attended by several hundred distinguished guests, among them eminent authors, artists, and cartoonists of the country mingling jovially with the nation's political chieftains, statesmen, diplomats, and captains of American finance and industry.

In a series of "stunts," musical and otherwise, the famous club of Washington correspondents, after braving the dangerous field of foreign entanglement, ran rough shod over national domestic affairs and irreverently dragged those who sit in high places over the hot grid.

Harding Makes Speech.

With its usual spirit of reciprocity, however, the club gave a selected few of its famous guests, including President Harding, an opportunity to get even in brief speeches, but these, under the club's tradition and rule that "reporters are never present," may not be made public. Statesmen and diplomats who talk to the Gridiron club can say precisely what they think without fear of an hereafter. Tonight they did—with exceeding great zest.

Satire on the American foreign policy was presented in an Arabian Night entertainment, introduced with the darkening of the room and the crash of cymbals off stage. The lights went up to reveal that Hear'em All Razzitt, Knight of the Golden Gridiron, Commander of the Mirthful, and Caliph of Bagdad-on-the-Potomac, had been reincarnated and had set up his court. He appeared, accompanied by Whozzit, his Grand Vizier, Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs.

He was advised by the vizier that his first consideration should be the formation of a foreign policy and the appointment of a head of a foreign affairs bureau of public information and press relations.

Must Be Mysterious.

"What for?" asked the Caliph.

"All successful diplomacy is mysterious," said the Vizier. "Our foreign policy must be incomprehensible except to ourselves. But we must have open diplomacy, so that every one can understand how incomprehensible it is. A press agent is the front door keeper of open diplomacy."

Hassan Saidit thereupon was appointed to the post, he having qualified by declaring that he was "born in the Happy Valley—Ohio."

Next came the appointment of an Unofficial Observer, which post went to All Bla-Bla, the possessor of the Magic Spy-Glass. It was explained that an unofficial observer is "a backdoor diplomat," who "represents us in company where we would not be seen ourselves."

Senators Want a Share.

Senators Borah and Reed of Missouri insisted on participating in the affairs of the court. Reed was angered because, as he declared, All Bla-Bla was "nothing, but a book agent for the league of nations."

"We are just formulating our foreign policy," began the Caliph, but Borah interrupted by declaring, "I am against it." When the Caliph called his attention to the fact that the policy has not been announced, Borah said, "That doesn't make any difference. All foreign policies look alike to me."

The woes of the consumer and tax payer were illuminated through the medium of a tabloid version of "Robin Hood," under a new title, "Robbing Good," sung by the "Gridiron" Opera company, the cast including the Income Tax Collector, alias Robbing Good; the Landlord, the Coal Man, the Ginger Ale man, alias the Bootlegger; Mr. Consumer, Maid Mary Ann, and an outlaw chorus, made up of meat packers, grocers, gasoline men, public utility men, plumbers, "and all gougers and profiteers."

Here's Song Hit.

One of the song hits was a solo by Robbing Good, sung to the air of "The Sheriff of Nottingham," a verse of which follows:

You may gayly try, but you never will descry
Such a wholesale robber as I!
Such a brain! Such an eye!
For a touch so deft that you will have nothing left.
I have never apologized;
And if you started to lynch me now,
I would not be surprised.

Trouble started at the beginning of the dinner. Arthur Sears Henning, Washington correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, recently elected president of the Gridiron club, attempted to take charge of the proceedings, but was interrupted on the ground that he had not been inaugurated. As the inaugural ceremony was about to be staged, the leader of the club's radical bloc, declaring that "inaugurations lost their thrill two years ago," suggested, "Let's not inaugurate him—let's impeach him," and the suggestion proved popular.

The club's legal adviser, however, presented a brief showing that "repeatedly and unanimously it has been held by the Supreme court—Justice Brandeis dissenting—that an official must be inaugurated before he can be impeached," and the inauguration proceeded.

PLANS GALA MART

[Moffett Photo.]

Mrs. E. R. Fifield is vice chairman of the auction block committee for the Gala Mart to be opened during Easter week by the Illinois Women's Athletic club. The Chicago Lincoln club at Germania and Clark streets has been taken for the week's display of shops and daily entertainment features which will be the club's spring benefit for its building fund. It will also mark the time for breaking ground for the new fifteen story building to go up at 820 Tower court.

The auction block, where mysterious packages will be sold to the highest bidder, the spring fashion show, with its daily parade of models, tiny shops where lingerie, household articles and foodstuffs will be sold, will be combined with daily dancing and entertainment features. The picturesque architecture of southern France will be imitated in the building of the shops and the decorating of the dance hall.

Mrs. D. F. Fesler is club president, and Mrs. M. J. Seifert is general chairman of arrangements for the Gala Mart.

RADIUM SPOTS TO DETECT FRAUD IN SPIRITISM TEST

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Glowing radium spots, like those on luminous watch dials and keyholes, will be attached to the arms and legs of mediums in order that every movement of those members may be watched in the dark cabinet sessions, according to the Scientific American, which is offering $5,000 in prizes for definite proof of pyschic photographs and of other psychic manifestations.

This technique was invented by a German medium to convince skeptics and will be used to detect fraud, if there is any, in the demonstrations which the Scientific American will conduct.

The jury to be convinced by candidates for these prizes consists mainly of hard headed practical men, one of them being Dr. Daniel F. Comstock of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the inventor of the new technicolor process recently applied to motion pictures; the famous Houdini, a thorough disbeliever who has been a nemesis of fakers; Dr. William McDougall; Dr. Walter Franklin Pierce, investigator of the Antigonish ghost and exposer of many frauds, though a believer in the genuineness of certain psychic phenomena, and Dr. Hereward Carrington, who has exposed some psychic operators and indorsed others.

Spiritistic Elite to Take Part.

Before this court, the elite of the spiritistic profession, candidates proposed by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and true believers in spirit communication and other spirit activities, will attempt to produce irresistible evidence of the interference of other world agencies in human affairs.

These judges may award the prize by a unanimous vote or by a four-to-one division. Their program was partly mapped out at a recent conference. A suite of rooms in this city is being fitted up for the psychic tournament, but the schedule of exhibition by mediums under test conditions has not yet been prepared.

A great armament of scientific apparatus for detecting spirits or supernatural agencies or clever imitations thereof is being installed in this laboratory for the weighing, measuring and photographing of ghosts.

Describes Detecting Devices.

In his description of these spirit-detecting devices J. Malcolm Bird writes as follows in the forthcoming issue of the Scientific American:

"Of the actual scientific apparatus the simplest, of course, is the camera. We shall not be allowed to use flashlight powder, so we shall have to content outselves with a powerful electric flashlight. The only drawback of this is the lag in its attainment of full power, and this can be controlled.

"A constant friend of the psychic investigator is his scales. This instrument must be of the spring-controlled type, and must settle down to a steady reading with a minimum of oscillation.

"This brings us to that very handy instrument for which the French have devised the telling name of chronograph. With uninked stylus on a smoked drum, or with inked stylus on a drum paper, this device records the successive states of any instrument to which it may be connected."

CHICAGO
Sheridan Road at Wilson Avenue
500 rooms—all with private bath.
Large ballroom—many smaller party and banquet rooms.

Once more there is an opportunity to make especially favorable selection of rooms and suites for permanent residence in uptown Chicago's most favored hotel.

A few belated departures for the south and far west leave available for immediate occupancy some of the best located rooms. Included are four $100-a-month rooms, three at $125 a month and two suites—one moderately priced and the other one of the finer suites. Earliest possible action is advisable. You are invited to inspect these rooms and suites today.

In addition to the most discriminating class of residential patronage Hotel Sheridan Plaza is favored by visitors to Chicago—tourists and others demanding accommodations of unexcelled quality—who appreciate that Chicago has burst the artificial bonds that formerly confined its chief hotel business to the loop. Excellent rooms, each of course with private bath, may be had at prices considerably below the rates for rooms of equal size and similar furnishings downtown.

In the beautiful main restaurant are to be had food and service which have made this hotel famous. Table d'hote Mondays to Fridays inclusive, $1.25—on Saturday evenings and Sunday noons and evenings, $1.50. A la carte service also—at all times. Dancing during the dinner hours every evening (except Sundays) and also throughout the evening to midnight on Saturdays. Music by Husk O'Hare's Syncopated Aces, with Marimbaphone.

The Narcissus Grill Cafeteria is the most attractively furnished and the coziest cafeteria in Chicago. All food there is of the same high quality (in fact from the same kitchen) as the food in the main restaurant.

Exceptional garage accommodations opposite the hotel. Eighteen minutes to the loop by elevated express; Broadway surface line; motor busses, to the loop through Lincoln Park, stop at the door.

I. C. C. REFUSES TO DIVORCE TWO PACIFIC LINES

Southern and Central R.R. Systems to Stay One.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The application of the Southern Pacific company to retain its present control of the Central Pacific railroad by ownership of its stock and lease of its lines was granted today in full, by a decision of the interstate commerce commission.

Although the Supreme court in 1922 at the end of eleven years of litigation over the existing merger of the roads held them to be a combination in restraint of competition and ordered them separated, the commission—with but one member dissenting—declared their maintained union was necessary in the interests of the western states they traverse and the country as a whole.

Further, the majority declared, the former policy of the nation in demanding maintenance of competition above all other things in transportation service, had been reversed by the congressional enactment of the transportation act of 1920, permitting general consolidation of railroads under government supervision.

Commissioner McChord Dissents.

The conclusions of the commission are subject to review by the courts before they become effective.

Commissioner McChord, in complete dissent from the view of his associates, declared the "findings of the majority contrary to the will of congress as expressed in the legislative act which conferred the powers invoked in this case."

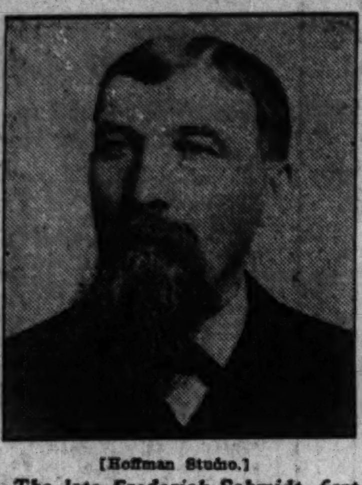
With Commissioner Campbell, who entered a partially concurring opinion, he concluded that the Central Pacific company, by its peculiar nature as a corporation, could not legally lease its lines to the Southern Pacific without special federal legislation.

Objections Are Eliminated.

Traffic agreements reached between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific systems, and between the Western Pacific and the Southern Pacific, allowing reciprocal rights for maintenance of traffic service over the Central Pacific lines, the majority of the commission held, have eliminated nearly all the objections which the western shippers, states and communities have hitherto advanced to the merger of the two roads.

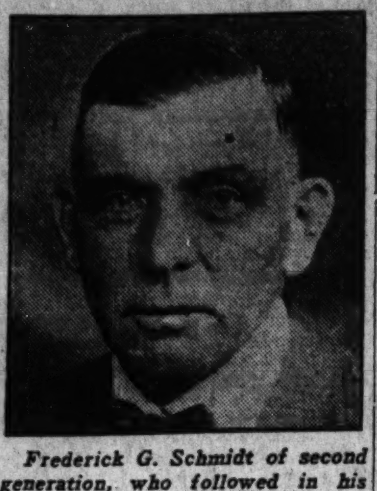
The agreements in question, all of which are aimed at maintaining full transcontinental service over the Central Pacific route, which runs north via Ogden and competes with the Southern Pacific's own transcontinental route running via El Paso, have satisfied all interests in the territory concerned, the decision said, that the present unity of the Central-Southern combination should not be disturbed.

118 Years in Lumber Business



[Hoffman Studio.]

The late Frederick Schmidt, first of three generations of lumber men.



Frederick G. Schmidt of second generation, who followed in his father's work.

Edgar F. Schmidt of third generation engages in same business.

3 GENERATIONS OF FAMILY IN LUMBER TRADE

More than 100 years in the lumber business, most of which was in the service of the same firm, is the unique record of three generations of the Schmidt family of which Frederick G. Schmidt, 970 Linden avenue, Hubbard Woods, is the present head.

Way back in 1852, Frederick Schmidt, the founder of the family in America, came to Chicago direct from his birthplace, Mecklenberg, Germany, and at the age of 12 years entered the employ of the Maers-Bates Lumber company. He remained with this firm until his death in 1907, making fifty-five years of service.

Frederick G. Schmidt, his son, was born in the rooms above the offices of the lumber company for which his father worked and when he was 13 years old, he followed in his father's footsteps. And he is still carrying on, being foreman of the Hubbard Woods Lumber company, with forty-two years of service to his credit. Edgar F. Schmidt of the third generation is now a shipping clerk for the same firm, having put twenty-one years in the business.

One hundred and eighteen years in all!

HARRY THAW TO VISIT MOTHER IF COURT APPROVES

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, who is confined to the Pennsylvania hospital for mental and nervous diseases in West Philadelphia, will visit his mother in Pittsburgh next week if a court order is granted permitting him to leave the institution. Former Judge James Gay Gordon, counsel for the family, will make an application for an order next week, he said today. Thaw, counsel said, needs a change of air and the trip is proposed partly for his health and to see his mother. If the application is granted Thaw will be accompanied by a guard.

MRS. HENRY KEEP AND C. J. BIDDLE WED AT CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The marriage of Mrs. Henry Blair Keep of Chicago and Charles J. Biddle of Philadelphia took place this afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. John's church, with the Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston officiating.

There were no attendants other than Matthew Gault of Baltimore, who acted as best man for Mr. Biddle, and only the members of the families and a few intimate friends were present.

Following the ceremony there was a small reception at the residence of Mrs. Hennon Jennings, the bride's aunt. The bride wore a beige colored dress made on long, simple lines, and a hat to match.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep, Mrs. James C. Hutchins and Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, all of Chicago, the parents and sisters of the bride's first husband, who was killed in action during the war.

Before her marriage in 1916, Mrs. Keep was Miss Katharine Legendre of New Orleans.

Prisoners' Bucket Brigade Halts Fire at Bridewell

Much excitement but little damage was caused by a fire in the crusher building at the Bridewell yesterday morning. The flames were seen by Joe Shannon, in charge of the prisoners, and a bucket chain formed by the men employed quickly subdued the blaze. Crossed wires were held responsible.

PIGGLY WIGGLY

WANTED—A HUSBAND

If He Is Good Looking I Will Be Pleased

If he is WEALTHY I will be pleased, but I know that only TWO out of a HUNDRED men are WEALTHY at the age of SIXTY, so I presume that only ONE YOUNG MAN out of TEN THOUSAND is WEALTHY, which leaves the chance of my marrying a wealthy young man very remote. The best I hope to get is one who appears to have the seed of success in him.

I do not expect to earn any of the living, but will promise to use judgment in spending the family income.

When I find a store like the PIGGLY WIGGLY stores selling EVERYTHING on a SMALL PROFIT, and where I can TRULY SAVE MANY DOLLARS EACH MONTH, that is where I am going to trade, thus aiding my husband to become ONE of the TWO out of a HUNDRED WEALTHY men.

Mahogany—

The first article of furniture to be made of mahogany is veiled in legend. ~ There is, however, fairly authentic record of a Candle-box that was made for a Dr. Gibbons in about 1700 or earlier. The early mahogany trade depended upon freebooting expeditions on the island of Cuba.

Much of the beauty of Chippendale and other eighteenth century furniture would have been lost but for the discovery of mahogany.

A Store Economical To Buy From

CHICAGO FAILS TO PROFIT BY RATE DIVISION

Connection with Mississippi River Needed.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—There is only one water-course in the entire country which can be utilized profitably under the present "unfair" division of interchange freight revenue between rail and water companies, in the opinion of the federal inland and coastwise waterways service.

But in the government's experiment on that one—the Mississippi river—this bureau claims the water transportation has been so successful that it has increased the price of wheat in certain primary markets. But Chicago is not one of them. Its connecting waterway between Lockport and the Mississippi has not been constructed.

McCormick Seeks Change.

Further, the boat line between St. Louis and New Orleans on the Mississippi, which Senator McCormick proposes substantially to improve by a bill presented to congress, claims to have materially lowered the freight charges on certain imports last year.

Among those are 90,000 tons of sugar and 2,500 tons of molasses and sirup from Cuba, 20,000 tons of coffee from Central and South America, 11,000 tons of sisal from Yucatan, and 37,000 tons of burlap from India. A large percentage of those consignments went to the Chicago industrial district. Indeed, all of the 11,000 tons sisal were the importation of the National Cordage company of Chicago.

Probably the farmers of the valley are more interested in the government's claims regarding a boost in the price of wheat.

On that Col. T. G. Ashburn of the waterways service says to the secretary of war:

"As for the wheat carried during the year, it is but a beginning, but the service has carried approximately 1,000,000 bushels a month. The saving of the barge line's rate is 3 cents per bushel under the all rail rate from St. Louis to the gulf.

Price Grows 3 Cents.

"The operation of the service is therefore responsible for a direct increase of 3 cents per bushel to the price paid to the farmers each month for at least 1,000,000 bushels.

"The effect is, however, much more far-reaching. The price bid each day for the exportable surplus fixes the price that day for all purchases, both export and domestic. So the proffered saving of 3 cents per bushel through the operation of this route is daily reflected in a commensurate elevation of the prices."

These results are not claimed for the experiment on the Warrior river, which Col. Ashburn asserts is typical of all other waterways in the United States except that of the Mississippi. The rulings of the interstate commerce commission, giving railroads an "unfair" part of interchange freight, he contends, kills all other rivers for profitable navigation, and makes the appropriations by congress for those purposes "a wasteful burden upon the taxpayers of the nation."

1st Time She Sassed Judge It Cost $5, 2d Time $5 More

Mrs. Anna Pluta, 8737 Princeton avenue, objected yesterday when Judge J. J. O'Toole fined her husband $5 and costs for disorderly conduct. Walking up to the judge she told him so. He cautioned her to be silent, but she continued. Judge O'Toole thereupon fined her $5 for contempt of court and ordered a bailiff to take her away. This only further incensed Mrs. Pluta. Another fine of $5, however, quieted her and she left.

MOTHER LOSES COURT FIGHT FOR HER CHILD

Mrs. Margaret Gallagher, 6354 South Laflin street, retains possession, at least temporarily, of her foster child, Yvonne Harriett Wilcox, 12 years old, despite tearful pleas for return of her child by Mrs. Grace Wilcox Woodworth of Cleveland, O.

Mrs. Woodworth's petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the culmination of a seven year search for the baby taken from her by an Ohio divorce decree, was dismissed by Judge Harry Fisher. He advised that a similar petition and a motion for a modification of the decree be filed in an Ohio court.

Six months after the girl's birth Mrs. Woodworth was divorced from Charles Wilcox, and because of illness allowed the custody of the child to be awarded to her mother-in-law. After her second marriage, Mrs. Woodworth sought to regain her baby, but discovered that Mrs. Wilcox Sr. had given the child to Mrs. Gallagher. Subsequently, Mrs. Gallagher had obtained a modification of the decree which named her as the child's legal guardian.

Under the agreement effected yesterday, Mrs. Woodworth will be allowed to visit the child at any time during the pendency of the Ohio litigation.

CIVIL SERVICE BILLS SEEK TO CURB DISMISSALS

Barbour Hits "Political Pull" Juggling.

Political discharge of state civil service employés will be made more difficult, perhaps impossible, under a bill which will be introduced in the legislature this week by Senator James J. Barbour. The bill reinstates in the state law a section insuring to employés a fair and impartial hearing before discharge.

At present a state employé who has been discharged must allege in writing that he has been discharged for political, religious or racial reasons before he can get a hearing. At the hearing he is limited to proving his specific allegations. If he has been discharged for theft he is denied under the law the right to prove his innocence.

Restores Original Rights.

Senator Barbour's bill was drawn by the Civil Service Reform Association of Chicago, and reinstates the trial clause in the law as it stood before 1917.

Other bills extending civil service protection to several thousand employés of Cook county and the sanitary district, as well as the Municipal court of Chicago, will also be presented by Mr. Barbour. The Municipal court bill brings clerks and bailiffs in the court under the control of the City Civil Service commission. In the county and sanitary district bills a single commissioner is provided, to be selected by merit test. The examining board in each instance is to be composed of persons selected for qualifications and experience rather than for political pull.

Hits "Political Pull."

Russell Whitman, president of the Civil Service Reform Association of Chicago, said yesterday:

"These bills represent principles which the real friends of merit have advocated for years. By their application merit and fitness would control in selection and political pull would be nil. Of course, the restoration of the trial clause in the state law would prevent much juggling which has been rumored during the last two years."

Bill to Stabilize Wheat Gets O. K. of Senate Body

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The bill of Senator Gooding [Rep., Ida.] to create a government wheat stabilization corporation with $200,000,000 capital to buy and sell wheat was reported favorably today by unanimous vote of the senate agriculture committee

SLAYER, 13, HELD FOR CHUM'S DEATH

A card game dispute, a taunt, and the chum of 13 year old Robert Rutkowski of Hillside was dead from a bullet wound. The coroner's jury believed his story of accident, but finding he had no mother held him for manslaughter so he could be sent to a school. The policeman with him is Clarence Bersema of Maywood.

Walter Melowitz, 13, who was slain by his friend, who says he "didn't know gun was loaded."

MEDILL SCHOOL LAYS WIDE RANGE OF FORUM TOPICS

Wide and varied are the topics to be discussed by leading figures in the world of writers and publishers at the regular Thursday night lectures of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university during the coming months. They range from the training of a cub reporter to the trials and problems of a foreign correspondent and, in between, come such subjects as newspaper work in Washington, masterpieces of reporting, the society editor's job, the passing of the circulation faker, and other kindred topics.

Among those who will be heard in the forum are Robert Barry of the Washington bureau of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, Edward Price Bell of the Chicago Daily News, and Lorado Taft. Members of THE TRIBUNE staff to appear include Arthur Sears Henning, Washington correspondent; Philip Kinsley; India Moffett, society editor, and S. E. Thomason, business manager.

LAW TAKES BOY SLAYER TO TEACH, NOT PUNISH HIM

"I didn't think it was loaded" was the age-old excuse; but the coroner's jury held 13-year-old Robert Rutkowski, Hillside boy, to the grand jury for manslaughter and had him locked up in the Detention home last night.

Robert at 10 o'clock Friday night shot and killed his chum, Walter Melowitz, also 13 years old. The boys had played cards in Robert's home, they had quarreled, and Robert had pointed the gun at his friend and pulled the trigger.

Sergts. Louis Laird and Albert Jelincke of the county highway police found the boy early yesterday waiting to hop a train out of town.

"The coroner's jury was inclined to believe the shooting might have been an accident," Sergt. Laird said. "But inasmuch as the boy has no mother, it was thought best to hold him for manslaughter so that he might be sent to some house of correction or parental school."

Two Banking Houses in Pueblo, Mexico, Close Doors

Mexico City, Feb. 10.—The failure of the Commercial Banking company and banking house of Martinez Pando & Co. was reported from Puebla today. The suspension has caused consternation in banking and commercial circles here.

SAYS WETS ASK BREACH OF OATH BY CONGRESSMEN

New York, Feb. 10.—Advocates of modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of light wines were criticized by Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin in an address before the Alumni Association of New York University law school tonight for asking members of congress "to deliberately violate their oaths of office."

"That congress could constitutionally increase the alcoholic percentage of beer to between 2 and 3 per cent is admitted," Senator Lenroot said. "Whether it should do so is a matter of policy. But to go beyond that, or permit the manufacture or sale of light wines would clearly violate the eighteenth amendment to the constitution.

"It is the right of every citizen to advocate modification or repeal of the eighteenth amendment, but no citizen has the right to ask congress to violate its terms."

Senator Lenroot, whose plea was for a return to government by a constitution which he declared had not outlived its usefulness, also assailed proponents of "an insidious propaganda to destroy the power of the Supreme court to pass upon the validity of acts of congress."

He declared that "the end of the republic would not be far distant," if the proposal to permit congress to override a Supreme court decision on constitutionality by a two-thirds vote was adopted.

Miss Florence E. Allen, judge of the Ohio Supreme court, who also addressed the association, urged that the great political parties adopt planks calling for nonpartisan election of judges.

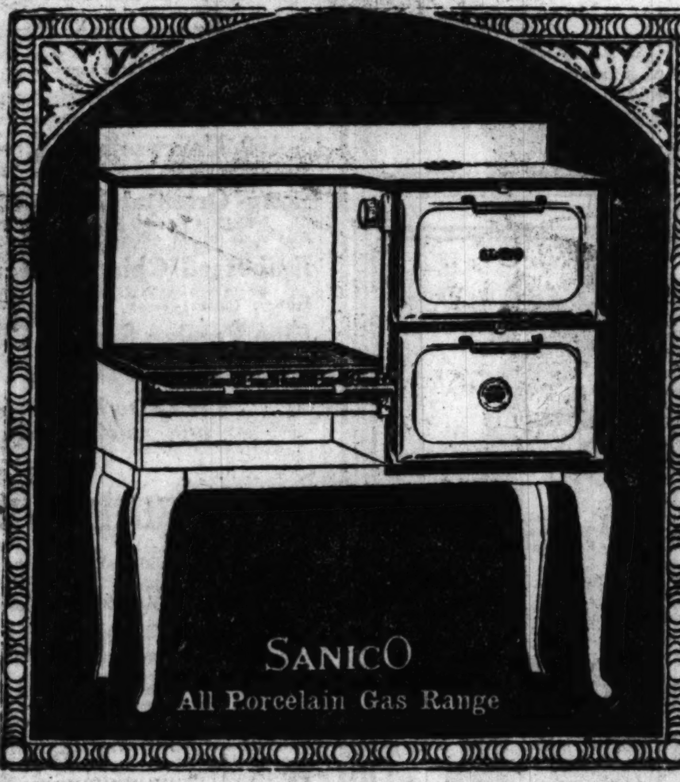
THE MOST ATTRACTIVE RANGE STORE IN CHICAGO!

We've moved to new and enlarged quarters—300 North Michigan Avenue—across the street and a little north from our old location.

Consider this an invitation to visit the finest and most exclusive Range Store in the city—where SANICO, the best looking and the best cooking Range, is on view—in all styles and sizes—burning Gas alone, or Gas, Wood and Coal.

Here efficient, courteous salespeople who know their business from A to Z will take pleasure in demonstrating the good points of SANICO Rust-proof Porcelain Ranges, and prove to your satisfaction that they outclass and outshine all other porcelain ranges on the market.



SANICO
All Porcelain Gas Range

Just a few examples of Sanico superiority:

Six-metal porcelain inside and out—rust-proof, heat-proof. Most other porcelain ranges are made of bathtub enamel, which cracks from heat, becomes unsightly, and only lasts half as long.

Easily cleaned—just take a damp cloth, rub gently and the Sanico becomes as spic and span as a new pin.

Economy—the Sanico saves gas and labor and dispels the drudgery bugbear that hovers over the average kitchen stove.

Service—the Sanico will always give you splendid and uniform cooking results. It is guaranteed for 25 years, and this guarantee is burned right into the porcelain.

SANICO

at 20% to 40% off

Our new location has necessitated cleaning out present stock, new models will shortly arrive and we must make room for them. For these reasons of space limitation, we are offering a few 1922 models of Sanico Ranges, which have been on our sample floors, at big price reductions. Perhaps they have a scratch here, a blemish there, or just a bit floor worn in appearance, but they are all practically perfect in every way.

If you are considering purchasing a Range AT ANY TIME SOON, it will be a matter of real economy to do it NOW.

Better come in today when you can take your choice from a wide display of Sanico styles; perhaps tomorrow you'll be disappointed. First come, first served—and with each sale our positive 25-year guarantee and assurance of Sanico satisfaction.

This is your Range opportunity—take advantage of it—and put sunshine, saving and efficiency into your kitchen.

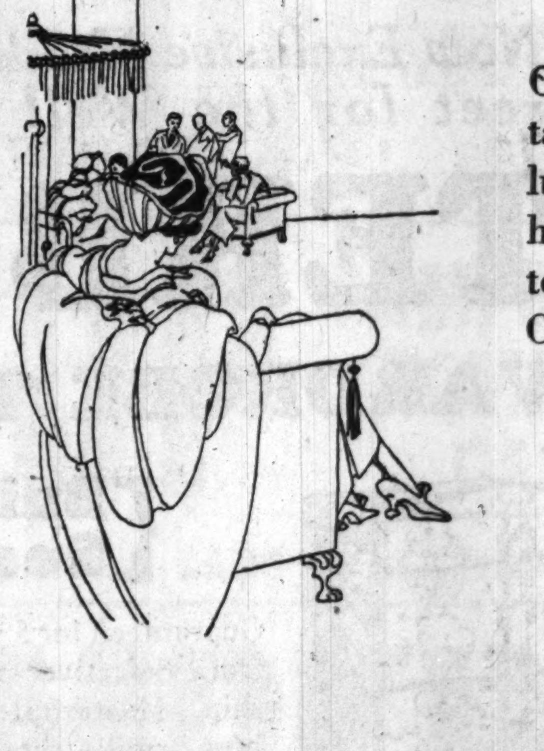
A woman's idea of good food

The pleasantest and most convenient place of meeting on the North Side is the comfortably furnished lobby of the Wilson Avenue Ontra.

Miss Dutton opened the first Ontra to supply, at moderate prices, food such as she could not find outside of her home or the homes of a few of her friends.

Most restaurants and cafeterias are man-operated. Miss Dutton believes that the best cooks, and the best supervisors of cooking, are women.

The development of her idea may be seen today in three Ontra Cafeterias—one of them the largest and most beautiful in existence—all managed by women and patronized by the most intelligent class of men and women.



Ontra patrons know they obtain the finest breakfasts, luncheons and dinners to be had in any restaurant or cafeteria. Why don't you try the Ontra?

REFUSES AID TO FATHER,106;GETS A MONTH IN JAIL

Retired, Worth $20,000; Calls $2 Too Much.

Persistent refusal of Samuel Fine, retired merchant living at 1648 South Springfield avenue, to contribute to the support of his 106 year old father, Hunya won him the appellation of "one of the meanest men on earth," in addition to a thirty day jail sentence from County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki yesterday.

SAMUEL FINE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Several court orders requiring Fine, who is 55 years old, to contribute $2 weekly to the maintenance of his aged parent were met with the reply "I am sick—I am sick—all the time some one asks money—what can I do?"

Relatives assert that in addition to a personal fortune estimated at from $15,000 to $20,000, the man receives an income from the wages of two employed sons.

Splits Family into Angry Groups.

Deputy sheriffs were forced to separate various factions of the relatives who surged about Deputy Sheriff Edward Skarda, as Fine was led away to jail still protesting that his father's plight was not chargeable to him. Complaint of Mrs. Agnes Kaufman, 3311 Grenshaw street, with whom the centenarian lives, made to Assistant State's Attorney Edward Huber, resulted in the son's citation for contempt of the support order and subsequent sentence yesterday.

RICHARDSON, NEW CAR EXPERT, TO ARRIVE TUESDAY

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Guy A. Richardson, newly appointed vice president of Chicago's surface lines, will arrive in that city Tuesday, it was learned here today.

"I shall leave Philadelphia some time on Monday," Mr. Richardson said in an interview at his suburban home here. "I cannot say just what steps I will take upon arrival in the way of revision of Chicago transit conditions."

Mr. Richardson stated that he would have to make a survey of the situation as an inspection trip made by him in Chicago some years ago was confined to the elevated lines. He expressed pleasure at the information that President Blair had indicated supreme authority in surface line matters would be turned over to him.

NOTED BRITISH SCHOLAR WILL BE GUEST HERE

Sir Frederick George Kenyon, director and principal librarian of the British museum, arrives in Chicago tomorrow for a two day visit as the guest of John C. Shaffer. Although his visit is purely one of pleasure, he will give two addresses while he is here, one at Northwestern university and the other at the University of Chicago.

SIR FREDERICK G. KENYON.

Sir Frederick is one of the highest classical authorities in Great Britain, having specially distinguished himself in the study of papyri. He has been president of the British academy since 1917 and professor of ancient history in the Royal academy since 1918. He is also noted as a student of the Brownings and as an editor of their poems and letters.

MAC PHERSON WANTS PRECINCT VOTE CAST OUT

Throwing out of the entire vote of the fourth precinct of the Second ward and nearly 100 other disputed ballots on grounds of fraud was asked yesterday by Attorney Patrick J. Lucey, representing Norman Macpherson, who is contesting the election of State Senator Adolph Marks from the First district.

The official figures showed Macpherson the winner by forty-six votes, but the state canvassing board, headed by Gov. Small, tnrew out a precinct, giving Marks the election. Marks is a Thompson-Lundin follower. The senate ordered a recount, however, and the senatorial committee is now hearing arguments on disputed points.

Mr. Lucey and Representative Michael L. Igoe are objecting to the vote in the fourth precinct of the Second ward on the ground that the poll books show that the voters were voted in alphabetical order, while in the thirty-first precinct of the First ward they are contesting sixty-eight ballots which they claim plainly show the work of "short pencil artists."

With the fourth precinct and the sixty-eight votes counted for Marks he has a lead of fifty-seven over Macpherson. The throwing out of the votes would give the latter the election by more than 200.

Woman Helped Husband Murder Italian, Charge

That the Negro wife of Cicero Tylo, a Mexican, 1011 Larabee street, helped her husband to kill Frank Farina, an Italian, whose mutilated body was found in the Tylo home Friday, was charged by the East Chicago avenue police yesterday. She will be charged with murder.

The police are making a city-wide search for Tylo.

HARVARD HUSHES FLEDGLING VICE TO PURGE REPUTE

Officials of the little town of Harvard, Ill., have been successful in their attempts to hush up the scandal resulting from recent investigations of a youthful vice ring operating in the town.

In consequence of the town's eagerness to quiet the affair the January grand jury will not be recalled to hear evidence against six boys, held on statements of four girls, involving serious charges. No official search is being made for two of the girls, missing since Friday night, when they fled town rather than face further questioning by State's Attorney Vincent S. Lumley.

Although it was the accusations of the girls regarding illicit meetings at a reported house of ill repute, of post-dance parties held in closed sedans rented for most of the evening, of bootlegging, and of other irregularities, which caused the arrest of the boys, it was expected that later these girls would be sent to a reform school.

Parents of the boys claim the girls disappeared because "they knew they had been telling lies and were afraid to face the music."

U. C. Facilities Taxed; Raise Entrance Bars

Plans for stricter entrance requirements at the University of Chicago are being formulated by a committee of faculty members under the chairmanship of Dean David A. Robertson, as a result of inability to provide proper attention for all of the students who are taxing its facilities.

NAMING OF MOVIE STARS HALF OVER; HOLD LISTS FOR 36

Are you keeping up with the movie game? Have you figured out properly all the combinations of pictures that have been offered so far in the Coloroto Section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, and are you holding them until you have the complete set of 36?

Today the contest is half over. Remember, this contest is open to everybody, except employés of THE TRIBUNE and their families. There is no money to pay and no work to do. Just show your skill in putting the various composites together to make the pictures of the players you name.

There are $10,000 in cash prizes. The contestant showing the most skill will get $1,000. Was $1,000 ever earned so easily?

Even if you fail to be first, there are hundreds of other prizes worth anybody's effort—if it could be called an effort—just to cut out the pictures, put them together, and name the actors. It's just amusing yourself by proving your skill.

Here are a few don'ts that every contestant ought to read:

Don't send in any pictures until you have the complete set of thirty-six.

Don't write asking for "tips," which, if answered, would be unfair to all other contestants.

Don't forget to read the rules carefully.

(A Business Editorial)

"I NEVER KNEW YOU HAD IT."

Such an expression is frequently heard in all stores in this city where by chance a new customer appears. People get into the habit of going to a certain store for many of their requirements. Unfortunately, for them, they are thoughtlessly assuming there is only one place to trade.

One never loses by a wide comparison of values—by careful shopping! Knowing ones call it "Good Business."

BOMBS IN DUBLIN PUNCTUATE NEW REBEL DEFIANCE

War Goes On, Liam Lynch Tells Followers.

BY THOMAS RYAN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Feb. 10.—The Irish peacemakers marked time today, awaiting a statement by Eamon de Valera. Meanwhile Liam Deasy has been dismissed from the republican army because he wrote his famous peace letter.

While many observers hope Mr. de Valera will ask for further discussions, nobody believes Mr. de Valera and Liam will yield on the terms now advanced by the government. Free Staters think Mr. Deasy's defection will win over many of the rank and file in counties Tipperary, Waterford, Limerick, and Cork, where Mr. Deasy was best known.

Mr. Lynch issued a proclamation today addressed to his army, in which he declares the war will go on until Irish independence is recognized by all.

Blow Up Government Print Shop.

Extraordinary military activity in Dublin has been a feature of the last two days. Anticipating a big coup by Mr. Lynch in answer to Mr. Deasy's letter, troops have been searching basements near the public buildings in quest of tunnels. Heavy patrols are searching pedestrians.

Patrick Mahon's printing establishment was blown up today by three armed men, who planted a series of bombs. Mahon printed the government's amnesty proclamation, which is posted everywhere in Dublin. The place was once wrecked by the black and tans and Mr. Mahon was given a long term of imprisonment by the English.

However, sporting Irishmen offered small bets today at 5 to 1 that Ireland would achieve the normal conditions within three weeks. County Waterford republicans voluntarily have cleared the roads which they blocked and returned books and documents seized from the county offices.

Mary MacSwiney Tests Amnesty.

Desiring to test the government's invitation to the republicans to work on constitutional lines, Mary MacSwiney reappeared today in Eamon de Valera's former office at 23 Suffolk street. There she sits in a bare, uncarpeted room, behind a bare desk, and receives visitors. If she is rearrested she declares she will go on a hunger strike.

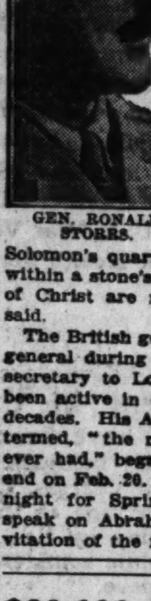
Her last hunger strike appears to have agreed with her. She is more slender than before but seems to be in the best of health.

Miss MacSwiney's office will be a public headquarters of the republicans while Mr. de Valera's cabinet meets in a secret place in Dublin.

Canvass U. S. for Rabbi to Succeed Dr. Hirsch

A country-wide canvass of all the Jewish Reformed churches is now being made, on the orders of the board of trustees of the Chicago Sinai Temple congregation, to find a successor for the late Dr. Emil G. Hirsch. According to Dr. Elkan W. Fishell, 108 North State street, for thirty-five years chief usher of the temple, it is doubtful if a new rabbi will be selected this year. "A great many rabbis have contracts with their own congregations," he said, "and cannot be released immediately."

PALESTINE NOT MODERNIZED, STORRS ASSERTS



GEN. RONALD STORRS.

Gen. Ronald Storrs, British military governor of Palestine, who is the guest in Chicago of Gen. Charles G. Dawes and Consul General Nugent of Great Britain, declared yesterday that the Holy Land would not mar its history and traditions with modern improvements.

"Electric street railways up the Mount of Olives or to Bethlehem, corrugated iron repair work on walls built of stone hewn from Solomon's quarries, factory chimneys within a stone's throw of the sepulchre of Christ are not in our policy," he said.

The British governor was a brigadier general during the war, was oriental secretary to Lord Kitchener, and has been active in eastern affairs for two decades. His American trip, which he termed, "the most delightful I have ever had," began on Jan. 28 and will end on Feb. 20. He leaves Chicago tonight for Springfield, where he will speak on Abraham Lincoln at the invitation of the mayor of Springfield.

$80,180 FIGHT ON SMOKING STACKS, ABATEMENT PLAN

In an effort to get larger appropriation for the smoke abatement division of the health department, the Advisory Commission of Smoke Abatement, headed by H. W. Evans, has appealed to the civic organizations for support.

The program for smoke abatement, as drawn up by the commission, contemplates an expenditure of $80,180, and it is asked that the finance committee of the city council appropriate this money so that an adequate smoke inspection bureau may be established and a "watch put over the 50,000 smoke stacks in the city which require constant attention." A little more than $25,000 was appropriated last year.

Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, under whose supervision the smoke inspectors operate, is heartily in favor of the increase in the duties of the smoke abatement department as an aid to health.

HOLD EVANSTON MAN FOR ATTACK ON GIRL IN AUTO

One man was held to the grand jury yesterday and another fined $200 and costs for offenses against girls. Max Bauer, 57 years old, 125 South Halsted street, was charged with annoying Margaret Zajac, 10 years old, 1627 North Mozart street, while sitting next to her in the Crystal theater, West North avenue. It was stated that he continued in his actions even when warned to stop. Judge Joseph Burke imposed a fine of $200.

Frank Calikins, 38 years old, 191 Wesley avenue, Evanston, the father of three children, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $1,500 by Justice J. O. Howard of Evanston on a charge of attempting to assault Miss Josephine Josephson, 18 years old, 1003 Washington street. The alleged offense took place in Calikins' car while driving Miss Josephson home from a party.

SPECIAL LEAGUE FOR AMERICAS IS PLAN OF URUGUAY

President Brum Urges New World Group.

MONTEVIDEO, Feb. 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Baltasar Brum of Uruguay today made public the plan for an association of American nations which the Uruguayan delegation is to lay before the Pan-American congress at Santiago, Chile, next month.

The proposed organization would admit not only the soverign states of the American continent, but also nearby islands and territories owned by countries on other continents, provided they have their own diplomatic representative in at least one American country and declare they are in a position to carry out and enforce the obligations inherent in the association. Members would be allowed to retire after giving two years' notice.

Obligations of Members.

The members of the association would have the following obligations:

First—To fulfill the resolutions of the council and assembly.

Second—To respect the territorial and political integrity of the other associated nations, obligating themselves not to go to war until three months after the pronouncement of an arbitration award.

Third—To prohibit the sale or export of arms or munitions of war to a private person.

Fourth—To prevent the transit of arms and munitions which are not destined for governments.

Fifth—To assure liberty of traffic and transit.

Plans Trade Blockade.

The project establishes that if an associated or nonassociated country should refuse to obey decisions adverse to it, or should refuse pacific solutions, the association would break diplomatic, commercial, and financial relations with that country.

The authorities of the association would be a council, assembly, and secretariat. The council would be formed of the representatives of nine nations; members to hold office six years, and two-thirds of the membership to be renewed every two years.

The assembly would be formed of representatives of all the members, each holding one vote. Ordinary sessions of this body would be held at least once yearly.

Vienna Hears Wall Street Will Float Austrian Loan

VIENNA, Feb. 10.—[United Press.]—A loan will be floated in Wall street for Austria, according to the Wiener Journal today.

LEGION NOTES

The South Chicago auxiliary of the American Legion will entertain the disabled "vets" at Drexel hospital next Tuesday evening. The glee club, O. E. S., Lady Garfield chapter, will furnish the program.

The auxiliary is also taking the ex-service men from the Jackson Park hospital to see "The First Year" tomorrow night.

Chicago council, Gold Star Mothers, will hold their third annual banquet at Terrace Gardens tomorrow night at 6:30. Mrs. John Brucker, 4320 North Kimball avenue, is president.

NAMES TEACHER, DUNES RETREAT, IN DIVORCE SUIT

Inordinate friendship for a South side high school teacher and week-end jaunts to an Indiana dunes retreat will be cited by Mrs. Anne Newell Roper, 932 Argyle street, in a bill for divorce from Denny Warren Roper, $18,000 a year engineer for the Commonwealth Edison company, to be filed tomorrow by Attorney Frank Cantwell.

Mrs. Roper appeared before Judge Walter Steffen yesterday seeking a temporary alimony award pending a final hearing of the separate maintenance suit filed several months ago, in which she charged desertion and cruelty.

Roper, member of the Engineers and other clubs, and graduate of Cornell university, in an answer, asserted that Mrs. Roper's charge of desertion was "ridiculous," and countered by charging that for several years she had occupied a separate bedroom in the home.

The couple have two children, Helen, 18 years old, a student at Smith college, and John, 15, attending a Cornell preparatory school.

Trade Routes in Danger, Expert Says.

miles of the Virgin islands, while others make calls on the way at some of the ports in the eastern West Indies. Some of the vital necessities it carries for us are: Coffee, cocoa, rubber, manganese, beef, hides, asphaltum and hard woods.

Second route. From our Atlantic coast ports through the Windward passage [between Cuba and Haiti] to Central American ports and through the Panama canal to our own west coast, as well as to west coast ports of South America. Vital necessities brought in over this route for American use are: Bananas and other tropical fruits, and nitrates from Chile.

Third route. From our gulf ports through the Yucatan channel [to west of Cuba] to the same destinations as named in the second route. The vital necessities carried to America by this route are the same as over the second route.

Fourth route. From our gulf cities, as well as from east coast Mexican and Cuban ports to our Atlantic distribution centers north of Cape Hatteras. Cotton and petroleum products are the prime necessities this route carries.

European Trade Route.

The route over which passes practically only foreign [European] trade enters the Caribbean sea in the general vicinity of Porto Rico and the Virgin islands.

"Since the Panama canal has become a reality, is it not true," Capt. Gannon resumed, "that several of our gulf ports have entered upon extensive harbor improvements? And for what but to accommodate the increase in ocean going trade which flows through them from the productive Mississippi valley and gulf states over the third and fourth trade routes just mentioned? All of which goes to promote the contentment and prosperity of peoples living in those states.

"Now, if we take note of one of Secretary Denby's pronouncements in connection with United States naval policy, that is, 'to make every effort, both ashore and afloat, at home and abroad, to assist the development of American interests, and especially the American merchant marine,' and at the same time remember that the very essence of naval strategy is to control sea trade routes, we see at once that naval positions in the West Indies possess very positive strategic importance to America."

Would Have Big Effect.

"Would American interests be affected if the principal islands of the West Indies were owned or controlled by one or more European countries having strong navies?" I asked.

"Most assuredly they would," Capt. Gannon promptly replied, "and to the detriment of American enterprise, contentment and prosperity. Countries so favored could and, with their usual forehandedness, would establish and develop during times of peace naval bases within their West Indian possessions at places best calculated to discourage American trade and enhance their own."

"What effect, if any, would war with such a nation have upon our trade routes to the West Indies and South America?"

Would Cut Off Trade Routes.

"Those trade routes would be cut and our trade greatly reduced if it did not under pressure disappear entirely. Except for those which might be brought in through our Pacific coast, we would be denied such vital necessities as coffee, cocoa, manganese, nitrates and tropical fruits, UNLESS we were unwilling to be thus deprived, in which case we would have to pay to those neutral European and Asiatic countries willing to supply us an exorbitant price for the commodities themselves.

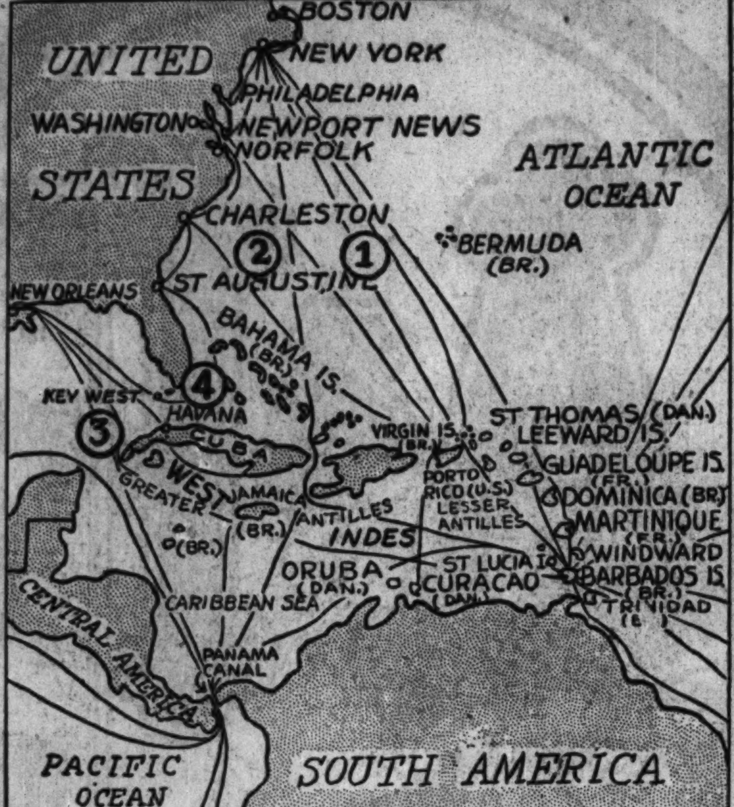
"The ultimate cost to us in our lost trade and damaged national prestige would be large indeed. These Central and South American countries would then be put to the necessity of seeking and finding other markets for ther products which had previously come directly to us.

Would Close Some Markets.

"By the same token, the West Indies, Central and South American markets would be denied us by virtue of the strategic positions held by such a powerful enemy, while the needs which we formerly supplied to them would be forthcoming from Europe and elsewhere.

"We would find it difficult indeed to get oil by water transportation from Mexico and Texas to our eastern and New England coast. Further, our Monroe Doctrine, which has served so faithfully and well the western hemisphere for a full century, would rapidly become an historical myth; and our hold on the Panama canal would, to say the least, become precarious."

THREAT OF FOREIGN OWNED WEST INDIES



United States naval authorities hold that the islands of the West Indies owned by European nations are a direct threat to the trade routes to South America and through the Panama canal. Even our coastwise shipping would be easy prey to enemy naval units based on protected harbors in these foreign owned islands.

1. Shows the trade route between New England and Atlantic state ports and South America.

2. Route between United States ports through the Windward passage between Cuba and Haiti to Central American ports and the Panama canal.

3. Route from gulf ports through the Yucatan channel west of Cuba to Central America and through Panama.

4. Route from our gulf ports and those of Mexico to other Atlantic ports, over which passes most of our cotton and petroleum from the south and Mexico.

LEGION LEADER ASKS ARMY ABLE TO REPEL ENEMY

A sane and conservative military policy, with the maintenance of a standing army sufficient to protect the United States from invasion in case of war, was advocated by National Commander Alvin M. Owsley in an address at Senn High school under the auspices of the North Shore post of the American Legion last night.

The commander stressed illiteracy as the largest problem confronting the Legion today, declaring that only one in every five of the men who composed the American fighting forces during the world war could read and speak English. He expressed confidence in the passage of a federal bonus bill at the coming congress.

One of the largest crowds which ever assembled at a Legion affair gathered to hear the national commander, whose eloquence drew frequent applause. Many prominent Chicagoans not Legionnaires also attended.

PLAIN AMERICAN ROMANCE BRINGS TITLE TO GIRL

New York, Feb. 10.—[United Press.]—Miss Mabel Gray of New York is to be the next American girl to obtain a British title.

Announcement was made today of her engagement to Viscount Exmouth, who until recently was Prof. Charles Ernest Pellew of Columbia university, plain American citizen.

Prof. Pellew, who gained the right to the title upon the death of his father in Washington last Sunday, will go to England shortly to have his rank confirmed and take his seat in the house of lords. He will take his bride with him.

When Miss Gray, who is a daughter of the late Richard Gray, formerly general traffic manager of the Southern Pacific railroad in California, became engaged to the viscount she had no idea she would "marry a title." At the time of the engagement the title was held by a young Englishman and there was no prospect of the American branch of the family getting it.

However, this Englishman died, and Henry Edward Pellew of Washington became Viscount Exmouth. He was 94 years old and died a short time later. Then his son became viscount and Miss Gray learned she was to become a noblewoman.

DAY BY DAY COUE, HAPPY OVER TRIP, SAILS FOR NANCY

New York, Feb. 10.—M. Emile Coué, professor of the "day by day" theory of autosuggestion, left New York today for his home in Nancy, France, aboard the liner Olympic.

The little white haired French druggist, who has spoken to enthusiastic audiences throughout the country, expressed himself as satisfied with the results of his trip here.

"My only unhappiness during the entire trip," he said, "came when people refused to believe that I do not perform miracles. When no miracles were performed they were dissatisfied.

"Otherwise my experiences here have been very gratifying."

ASSERTS FASCISTI SEEK TO BUILD UP PROSPERITY

Italy's present economic revival was explained to the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations yesterday by Signora Olivia Agresti, who has come to this country to plead for closer industrial coöperation between Italy and the United States.

"An intense emotional nationalism is binding Italy in a harmonious unit bound in one direction—the establishing of the country's economic status," she said. Italy has one purpose, and the unparalleled outburst of national energy has one object—to produce.

"The labor unions are losing their power. Their monopoly has been broken. The Fascisti, with a million members, are recruiting with destructive rapidity from the ranks of socialists and labor unions.

"The Italian government now controls the railroads, tramways, and the telephone service, which has proved a millstone around Italy's neck.

"The people are burdened with unreasonable taxes and they are rebellious. Within a short time, I think, the government will shed these heavy burdens and the country will bound into a new prosperity.

"We desire the coöperation of the United States more than any other country. And having first organized our own country and placed its industry on a firm economic basis, we believe the help to be derived from a closer relationship will be mutual."

Uncle Sam Repudiates Greedy Undertakers

Government Organizations Served Exclusively by Skeeles-Biddle Company

January 30, 1923.

"Gentlemen:

"Before accepting in good faith your criticisms of Chicago's profiteer undertakers, I should like some information. How does it happen that your company furnishes all the caskets required by the several institutions maintained in Chicago for the care of invalid soldiers by the Sixth Corps Area of the War Dept., the U. S. War Veterans' Bureau and the U. S. Public Health Service?

"Yours truly,
"G. L. Roberts."

Impotent in the violent rage to which they have been provoked by our exposure of their methods, too cowardly to attempt a reply to our charges, Chicago's curbstone undertakers are resorting to the tactics of guilty sneaks and are striving by lies, innuendo and slander to undermine public confidence in our honesty and sincerity of purpose.

The writer of the above letter has plainly been led to believe that we have gained the privilege of serving the government through some sinister influence.

For his information as well as others who may have been deceived by the lies that are being circulated by these reprobates we desire to state:

That the undertaking service required from time to time by the three organizations mentioned is furnished exclusively by the Skeeles-Biddle Company and that this privilege is one for which a large number of Chicago funeral directors competed.

To the unscrupulous profiteer undertaker nothing is sacred—not even the memory of those heroes whose names are being added, day by day, to the immortal roster of those who gave to the nation the last full measure of devotion.

Many of the bids received were summarily rejected because of the unreasonably high prices demanded for caskets and undertaking services. Other bidders were found, upon investigation, to lack the facilities and equipment essential to efficient service.

It was only after the most thorough investigation of our firm and its personnel that the Skeeles-Biddle Company was finally selected for this honor. Careful inquiry was made by these government officials into our record and reputation, our experience, our business methods, the location of our two memorial chapels, our facilities and equipment. No higher recognition has ever come to us and we have tried faithfully to show our appreciation of the compliment.

The government organizations mentioned above are not the only ones that have taken steps to suppress profiteering on the part of these greedy undertakers. A large number of Chicago's leading welfare organizations, whose chief care it is to protect the unfortunate from exploitation and robbery, have followed Uncle Sam's example by making permanent and exclusive arrangements with the Skeeles-Biddle Company to take care of all their funeral work.

The success and steady growth of the Skeeles-Biddle Company is due principally to the friends we have made among our clients in every part of Chicago and environs and to the kind words these friends have spoken to others about us. Skeeles-Biddle service makes no distinction between the client who spends $25.00 and another who has several hundred dollars for the purchase of a casket. The proportionate saving in our lower prices is carried all the way through the big assortment of caskets and supplies of every kind which we have in stock at all times at both of our establishments.

For the smallest as well as for the largest funeral we use only large, roomy Pierce-Arrow automobiles, richly upholstered, and kept at all times in the finest mechanical condition.

No matter in what part of Chicago or suburbs you may live, a telephone call will summon a member of our organization to your door in less than an hour to bring you, if desired, to either one of our establishments for the purpose of examining and comparing our prices, our equipment and our facilities.

Each of our two model funeral establishments has a magnificent memorial chapel with directly connecting parlors and rest rooms, supplied with every accommodation that will add to the comfort and convenience of our clients. No charge whatsoever is made for the use of either of these chapels.

ST. LOUIS VOTES $87,372,500 FOR A CITY BEAUTIFUL

Civic Center and Wider Streets in Plans.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—St. Louis soon will enter upon an era of physical transformation and beautification as a result of approval at the polls Friday of twenty bond proposals calling for the expenditure of $87,372,500.

The city will send $16,000,000 in expanding its civic center, now consisting of a Municipal courts building and city hall, occupying four blocks on the fringe of its business district, by tearing down the business buildings upon nine other blocks and transforming the area into a memorial plaza for its sons who fell in the world war.

City Auditorium to Seat 20,000.

It will erect in this plaza a memorial building costing $1,000,000, and on the borders of the plaza will construct a municipal auditorium seating 20,000 persons and costing $5,000,000, a new civil courthouse to cost $4,000,000, a new city morgue, and a municipal power house costing $1,000,000. The plaza will also bring to its boundary the city's central public library, which cost $3,000,000.

It will create in front of Union station another plaza of two city blocks, now occupied by unsightly business buildings, and will widen the street passing the station's entrance from 80 to 100 feet for a distance of a mile towards the city's residence section and a mile in the opposite direction through the downtown business and retail section.

To Widen Major Streets.

It will replace the gas street light system with a modern, city wide electric system to cost $8,000,000. It will expend $14,450,000 to create a citywide major street plan by the widening of its chief traffic arteries, the central feature being a street 100 feet wide, extending from the north residence extremity through the business section to the south residence extremity.

It will expend $3,800,000 to acquire new parks and to expand the already extensive facilities of existent parks to give recreational advantages to a greater proportion of its population; $19,000,000 to extend its sewer system to all districts and reconstruct worn-out portions; $12,000,000 for an additional filtration plant; $4,500,000 for the expansion of its public hospital facilities, and $1,250,000 to reconstruct four public market buildings.

It will eliminate railroad grade crossings at a cost of $1,600,000 and spend $772,500 to complete the motorization of its fire department.

The Missouri law requires a two-thirds vote for the issuance of municipal bonds. St. Louis voters defeated only one proposal, to build a new national guard armory at a cost of $1,000,000.

SALVATION ARMY SEEKS CHURCHES' AID IN DOPE WAR

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The Salvation Army formally called upon the Federation of Churches of Christ in America today to join it in a concerted movement toward the elimination of the increasing devastations of the drug habit and the redemption of the million or more addicts in the United States.

Commissioner Thomas Estill of New York, head of Salvation Army activities in eastern and southern states, sent the invitation at the request of the annual congress of the eastern social department now in session here.

"The Salvation Army," he declared, "has proved in its own experience that the Christian religion is the only safe and sure and permanent cure for the habit and that all Christian people, therefore, should have a sense of personal responsibility in this crisis."

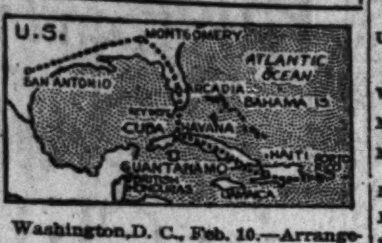
U. S. TO PORTO RICO FLIGHT ARRANGED BY ARMY AVIATORS



Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Arrangements have been completed by the army air service for an experimental airplane flight from the United States to Porto Rico by way of Cuba, it was announced today by Secretary Weeks.

The flight will start from Kelly field, near San Antonio, Tex., late this month and will be in charge of Capt. Thomas Lanthier, now commanding the air service troops at Fort Sill, Okla.

Six De Haviland 4-B type, planes are being equipped at Kelly field, each plane with a gas capacity of 135 gallons, and other special devices, including speed propellers and extra sturdy landing gears.

The itinerary calls for the first stop at Lake Charles La., then to San Juan, via Montgomery, Ala.; Arcadia, Fla.; Havana, Cuba; Camaguey, Cuba; the United States naval base at Guantaname, Cuba; Port Au Prince, Haiti, and Santo Domingo City.

The cruise will be made in easy stages and it is expected the airplanes will arrive at San Juan in about three weeks from the time they leave Kelly field.

STORY OF PLOT BRINGS COLORED WOMAN'S ARREST

Warrants for the arrest of Lillian Bernard, colored housemaid, who appeared before First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas on Friday and told of an alleged plot by Mrs. Meta Murphy, wife of J. H. Murphy, millionaire grain dealer, in which the latter was to be "framed on" for the purpose of obtaining evidence to get a divorce, were issued by Judge Schulman in Municipal court yesterday.

The woman was arrested in her home at 465 East 31st street an hour after the papers, charging subornation of perjury, were placed in the hands of a policeman. She was lodged in a cell in the South Clark street police station.

Judge Schulman acted after he received a statement from Mrs. Murphy in which she denied any dealing with the woman.

"The whole thing is a frame up," said Mrs. Murphy. "She is either romancing or it's a poorly prepared case of blackmail."

The

WARD BAKING COMPANY

Repeats Its Challenge

No Loaf Has Been Found to Equal the Nutrition in VITOVIM

IN perfecting VITOVIM, we conducted feeding tests in our own laboratories and had these tests checked in two independent University laboratories. VITOVIM was fed in comparison with a large number of home-made breads and in comparison with the most popular breads in the markets served by the Ward Bakeries. There was a wide and astounding difference in nutritional value in favor of VITOVIM. As a result of this thorough work, we issued the challenge "All competitive breads, home-made bread included, are challenged to equal the nutritional value of VITOVIM bread in public tests." We have received a letter from one of the companies putting out a vitamin preparation, accepting the challenge. On investigation we find that there is no competitive loaf on the market available for such a comparative test.

The statement which we have made regarding the nutritional value of VITOVIM is a tremendous and sweeping challenge, but as yet no legitimate loaf from the baking trade and no loaf from home baking practice has come forward to accept.

Since WARD'S VITOVIM has been put on the market, manufacturers of all kinds of preparations are advertising that their product will produce a loaf equal to VITOVIM. But no such loaf has been placed on the market. When such a loaf does appear, and one which is not simply an infringement or imitation of VITOVIM, we will welcome the fullest test.

In the meantime, feeding tests with animals and human beings are more strongly proving our claims every passing day. VITOVIM stands unmatched by any loaf of bread ever produced.

Both the public and bakers are warned to investigate the claims of imitators very fully in order that the baker will not be misled into making claims for nutritional value which he cannot prove, or into infringement of others' patents, and particularly in order that the public will not be misled into buying and eating a bread which does not contain the proven nutritional value of VITOVIM.

JEWETT SIX

Sedan $1465

Weight and Quality throughout to Match Its Superb Power

The Lightest Car of Its Power
The Heaviest Car of Its Size

$545
Cash—balance in 12 months—buys a Sedan or Coupe

Jewett power is admitted. Its sturdy quality in every chassis part is recognized by those who know cars. Jewett, while it is the lightest car of its power is the heaviest car of its size. Paige engineering skill has produced in the Jewett not a light six, but a quality car of wonderful strength, in moderate size.

To its fascinating ease of handling Jewett adds distinguished comfort which every woman will appreciate. It is upholstered in French blue, long-wearing fabric. All wanted appointments are furnished. The seats are soft and comfortable. Everything is roomy and handy—luxurious. All this, mind you, in a full steel-paneled body—not a wall-board and fabric makeshift. It is a body sturdily built to endure with the chassis. It seats five adults in absolute comfort.

What a delight to a woman driver is such a car! From 2 to 60 miles an hour, by the mere pressure of her foot on the accelerator. No need to change gears in rounding corners or following slow teams. And on the rare occasions when gear-shifting is needed, it is delightfully easy. Jewett, with its Paige-type clutch, positively amazes those who are accustomed to pause when shifting gears to avoid clash or "missing." Here is a car no woman need learn to drive. Move the gears fast or slow. Let in the clutch as fast as you can move your foot. You cannot jerk the car nor stall the motor.

And one of the finest things about the Jewett is the certainty of its endurance. No motor was ever better oiled—and lubrication is life. With the Jewett high-pressure, hollow crank-shaft gear-pump oiling system, 2 gallons of oil per minute are forced through all main and connecting-rod bearings. Metal never touches metal in Jewett motor bearings. Always a thin film of oil defeats friction. Smoothness, silence, and long life are certain.

The Jewett sedan weighs what the Paige engineers know it must weigh to be absolutely sturdy. It is more than strong enough to accompany such splendid power. It is the heaviest car of its size.

The resulting "open car" performance of the Jewett sedan is what you might expect from a Paige-designed, Paige-built car. And remember, the Jewett is the only car of its price and class that is built by a builder of high-grade cars!

You've a new sensation in store when you drive this Jewett sedan. Its actions impress the most blase motorist. And we will place a car at your disposal, suiting your convenience, so you can see for yourself what the super-power and super-quality of the Jewett sedan would mean to you and your family. Phone us, any time. (374)

RAY SHATTERS THREE WORLD RECORDS

OFFICIALS TO MAKE CHICAGO WORLD LEADER IN GOLF

PUBLIC COURSES ARE PLANNED TO ENCIRCLE CITY

Park, Town, and County Governments Unite.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Chicago: A city entirely surrounded by golf.

A. J. CERMAK.

Chicago, leading the world in golf development, ranking first in the extension and development of public links, although third among American cities in proportion of golf to population, will, when the plans of the present administration—county, park and city materialize—lead the world.

With the county commissioners, the forest preserve officials, the park boards and the city government working together for public golf links, Chicago this year will add twenty-seven holes to those now available for public use, and perhaps thirty-six.

Golf seems to be the only thing capable of wiping out political lines.

242 Holes of Public Golf.

Chicago now has 242 holes of public or semi-public golf, and, if the plans are perfected, a new eighteen hole course is to be opened sometime during the summer on the available land just east of the Speedway hospital, nine holes added to Lincoln park [if difficulties which have hampered the plan can be removed and land filled] and, in addition to that, the South Park board plans two straightaway courses paralleling the now outer driveway connecting Jackson and Grant parks, so that the south side golfers can golf from 70th street to the foot of Van Buren.

Anton J. Cermak, new president of the county board, has announced the policy of the board to be more playgrounds, more golf, and more wide spread use of the forest preserve districts by the people.

South Park Board Busy.

Meantime the south park board is going ahead with the program of public links in an interesting manner. John Barton Payne, president of the south park board, has instructed the landscape engineers of the board to prepare plans for a double eighteen hole golf course—using the filled land along the new outer drives from Jackson to Grant parks, so that the golfers can play eighteen holes coming downtown and eighteen holes going home — which would leave Chicago completely surrounded by golf.

On top of this Robert McKinlay, formerly chairman of the golf committee of the county board, now election commissioner, has a plan for double decking two of the west side public courses so as to double the capacity.

McKinley to Continue Work.

Mr. McKinlay, while retiring from the work with the forest preserves, still continues voluntarily to aid in golf development, and as Chicago representative of the public links division of the United States Golf association is aiding in working out plans to make Chicago the public links golf center of the world.

Just now, in proportion to population, Chicago lags behind Toledo and Indianapolis in the matter of public links, but leads all the large cities by a great margin. New York has three finished public courses and one partly finished, while Chicago, when this season starts, will have twelve public and ten semi-public courses in the golfing radius, according to Mr. McKinlay, who includes in his estimates two unfinished courses and the North Shore community courses.

Movement on for More Courses.

In spite of the tremendous development of public golf links the backers of the movement for more courses declare that the acreage now devoted to public golf is less than 50 per cent of what is needed. Jackson park, with a nine and an eighteen hole course; Lincoln park, with eighteen holes and with plans going forward for filling land to add nine more holes; Marquette park, Columbus park, Palos Hills, Edgebrook, and Garfield park give Chicago the lead in golf, and added to them the north shore towns contribute Evanston, Winnetka, Glencoe, and Highland Park community clubs. Of the privately owned courses available for public use there are Harlem (five days a week), Big Oaks, and the new Budlong Woods course.

Chicago therefore has sixty clubs in operation, eleven of them nine hole courses and Olympia Fields with three eighteen hole courses, giving 1,091 holes available for golf. The new courses open for play this year will be Columbus park Lawrence Grove, Glen Oak, Winnetka, Barrington Hills, Dixmoor, and Naperville, which add 126 and with those contemplated (part of which will be in use before fall) Chicago will have 1,217 holes, with an estimated acreage of 4,500 acres in use for golf in the county alone.

Continue Development of Golf.

The present county board announces its determination to continue the development of golf as far as available lands will permit, and President Cermak (who, while not a golfer, is an enthusiastic supporter of the game) has requested a survey of the entire forest preserve district to show what sections are best suited to golf without intruding upon the rights of the non-golfing public desiring to use the preserves.

KNOLLIN, '22 TRACK CAPT. AT WISCONSIN, KILLED BY GAS ENGINE

ALBERT KNOLLIN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 10.—Albert Knollin, 1922 captain of the University of Wisconsin track team and twice winner in the Western Conference high hurdles, was killed yesterday at his home in Bethel, Kas., according to word received tonight. A gasoline engine with which he was working on his father's farm exploded, killing him almost instantly.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune."

THE QUESTION.

What do you think of the action of Muldoon, chairman of the New York boxing commission, putting ban on Dempsey-Wills fight?

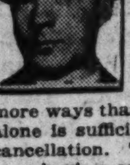
WHERE ASKED.

Madison street at Dearborn.

THE ANSWERS.

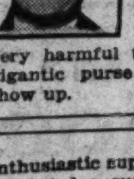
John Brown, 1430 South Central Park avenue, packer—Wills should fight Willard before he has a chance at Dempsey, thus getting the best man to fight the champion. Big purses and heavy betting are hurting the sport. Evidently Muldoon realizes that you can't prevent by purses or heavy betting, so he put a ban on the fight. Under the circumstances, Muldoon was right.

John Papas, 11 West Madison street, manager candy store—I believe the real cause was the inadvisability of a mixed bout, and that he issued the ban because he didn't think it for the good of the sport for Dempsey and Wills to fight. Half a million dollars for a fight is too much money. The fight is not for an honor, but purely for money. It is not a good thing for boxing or any other sport. Muldoon was right in making the decision he did.



Harry Coleman, 1159 North Halsted street, clerk—I think Muldoon was right in stopping that fight. Should have been done a long time ago. If Dempsey and Wills should have fought and Wills had won, there might be trouble in more ways than one. The heavy purse alone is sufficient to have justified its cancellation. The purse should be up to a boxing commission.

Terence J. Donohue, 920 West 77th street, police officer—Muldoon was right, from his standpoint. New York city politicians believed a mixed bout would result in the killing of boxing entirely when the bill came to the legislature, and desired to save the sport at the expense of Dempsey and Wills. Muldoon first ordered the match made, and later, under political pressure, forbade it.



James E. McSweeney, 3047 Polk street, salesman—Muldoon was undoubtedly right, inasmuch as a mixed bout of this character, and involving so much money, would bring about considerable comment. The betting habit has been very harmful to the sport; now, the gigantic purse evil is beginning to show up.

CAPITAL TO GET "IDEAL" RACING BILL THIS WEEK

Clubs Plan Busy Turf Season Here.

BY FRENCH LANE.

JUDGE JOSEPH A. MURPHY.

The first big move to bring favorable racing legislation to Illinois is to be made at Springfield this week, when a second race bill is scheduled to put in an appearance. It will go to the state capital with the backing of the most prominent business men and sportsmen in the state.

In what respects it will differ from the Denvir bill introduced last week has not been announced. Well known Chicagoans identified with the Chicago Washington Park club are endeavoring to make it as near ideal as possible. The best clauses of the Kentucky and Maryland laws will be included, but the bill will differ somewhat from the measures now in effect in those states because the local situation will demand it.

To Settle Differences.

Latest developments in the Chicago situation indicate that the different organizations here booming a return of thoroughbred racing will go to Springfield seeking favorable legislation with a united front. The settlement of whatever differences that exist between jockey clubs will be made in a businesslike way, when it is time to prepare for the various track openings.

This was shown yesterday when officials of the new Washington Park Breeders' association, which plans to build a $1,000,000 track at Riverdale, announced a meeting of their organization for Feb. 18, the day preceding their derby dinner at Hotel La Salle. At this meeting the name of the organization will very likely be changed, in order not to conflict with the Chicago Washington Park club. At the same time a name will be selected for the special race which is planned on opening day by the club and which in many respects will rival the prominence of the renewal of the American Derby.

Murphy to Preside.

"We desire in no way to conflict with other organizations, and our aim is to restore racing on the highest possible plane," an official of the club said yesterday. "Two or three organizations operating under similar names will complicate the situation and may have a bad effect on the sport in the long run, and we are only too glad to do our part in overcoming every possible handicap," he said.

Judge Joseph A. Murphy, it is announced, will be here to preside both at the business meeting and at the "Derby banquet." He has been active in the early organization plans of the club and probably will be prominently identified with the track when operations start. The Derby banquet, to which 2,000 invitations have been issued, promises to be one of the big steps in the move to restore the sport. The banquet is to be held at 7 o'clock on the night of Feb. 19.

Reservations Already Made.

First reservations for stable room for the spring meeting which the Illinois Jockey club has announced for Hawthorne opening, May 26, have been received, according to announcements made last night. Charley Irby was the first to make reservations, putting in an order for ten stalls. John M. Hubbard of Kentucky was the next in line. His string will include Black Watch II, Friz, Bonero Blue and Paula. A. J. Sonsone and Sam Holman, general manager of the Maple Heights track, are other owners to make early plans for shipping here.

The list of officials for the spring Hawthorne meeting will be complete within the next few days. An extensive building improvement program also has been outlined, and according to present plans will include a new club house and a new front entrance extending along the 52d avenue fence for 250 feet. Workmen have already started whipping the grounds and track into shape.

Offer Nathanson Managership.

Secretary Tom Bourke of the Illinois Jockey club is to leave Monday for Havana, Cuba, where he hopes to interest Martin Nathanson in the affairs at Hawthorne. He will offer Mr. Nathanson the general managership of the track, it is understood. Secretary Bourke goes from Havana to Tiajuana to interest horsemen in the spring and fall meetings here.

AUBREY DEVINE IS TO WED PASADENA PEACH TODAY

Davenport, Ia., Feb. 10.—Aubrey Devine, all-American football star with Iowa in 1921, will be married to Miss Catherine Hamilton of Pasadena, Cal., tomorrow morning, it was learned here tonight. The wedding ceremony will take place in Fairfield, Ia., and the Rev. O. B. Devine, brother of the groom, will perform the ceremony. Devine is a junior in the Iowa law school. Miss Hamilton also is a student at Iowa.

BY TED ISERMAN.

University of Chicago cagers beat Minnesota, 28 to 14, and scored their second conference victory this season at Bartlett gymnasium last night in one of their most bitter and most poorly played games. There was little real system to the teamwork of either quintet, both teams putting up a more intelligent defensive than offensive struggle throughout.

During the first half the game was closely contested, the score being successively 5 to 5, 6 to 6, and 10 to 8, ending with the Maroons in front by 12 to 8. In the first few minutes of the second session the entire Chicago outfit performed with the same skill and ardor displayed by Harry Barnes in the first half, but this burst of brilliance, which netted two buckets by Dickson and one by Weiss, soon ended, and the contest again degenerated into blind passing.

Harold Severinson, one of last year's stars on the Gopher five, played his first game this season, being hitherto barred on account of grades. He was plainly off his old form, but showed lots of fight. Lineup:

IOWA, 28; NORTHWESTERN 11

After a well played first half in which the Purple held the upper hand in floor work, but not in free basket shooting, the Iowa Hawks let loose a dazzling long range offense last night, which enabled them to humble Northwestern, 28 to 11, before 4,000 conference basketball fans at Patten gym. The inability of Capt. Harold McKenzie and Jimmie Paterson of the Purple to hit the free basket made the score far from what it should have been. Iowa led at half time, 12 ta 7.

The Purple floor work started off more smoothly than that of the Hawkeyes, and the locals held the lead for a while, but lost it near the end of the half when Janse and Burgitt dropped in three ringers in a row. Bewildered by the stellar work of Janse

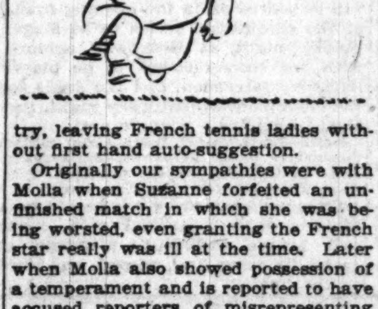
SUZANNE VS. MOLLA.

PYROTECHNICS, racket, and verbal, are likely when Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French champion, meets Mrs. Molla Mallory, American champion—if they do meet—for the world's tennis title to end the dispute of two years' standing.

Preliminary arrangements are being carefully planned. Mrs. Mallory sailed from New York after an illness which "may affect her game and prevent the match." Mlle. Lenglen is becoming stout—so stout "she may not be able to do herself justice." Sacre! Mon Dieu! And Coué lecturing in this country, leaving French tennis ladies without first hand auto-suggestion.



Originally our sympathies were with Molla when Suzanne forfeited an unfinished match in which she was being worsted, even granting the French star really was ill at the time. Later when Molla also showed possession of a temperament and is reported to have accused reporters of misrepresenting her, we became neutral again.

So if these young ladies meet in the Wimbledon finals we suggest a chief surgeon in place of a referee, and medical specialists instead of linesmen at the corners of the court.

The Prisoner.

By nature a settled work-a-day chap,
Quite free from the urge to roam,
I do most of my traveling with a map,
In a comfortable chair at home.
But there comes a time, as the winter wanes,
When I long to speed away
To the sunny climes where the ball team trains,
And remain till opening day.

The office, then, is a prison cell,
A place of confinement vile;
An endless jumble of "buy and sell"
And the cheapest rate per mile.
But a struggling clerk, who hopes to attain
Success in a business way,
Must stick to his work while the ball teams train,
And wait for opening day.

COMMY SMILES AS SOX $100,000 BEAUTY SIGNS

Charles Comiskey, the White Sox boss, had one big worry lifted from his shoulders yesterday when the signed contract of Willie Kamm arrived at club headquarters. The document came from San Francisco, where the lad for whom Commy paid $100,000 makes his home. Kamm will report at the Sequin, Tex., training camp about March 8, and right from that day he probably will eclipse Babe Ruth in the publicity league. He will hold down third base under Gleason.

THE CLOCK ON JOIE

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Feb. 10.—Joie Ray's new world's records set at the Wilco games tonight are:

1¾ miles, 7:59 4-5.
3,000 meters, 8:31 1-5.
2 miles, 9:08 2-5.
1⅞ miles, 8:34 3-5.

The old records for these distances were:

1¾ miles, 8:10 3-5, made by George V. Bonhag at Buffalo in 1910.
2 miles, 9:11 2-5, made by Ray in New York in 1917.
3,000 meters, 8:31 3-5, made by himself in 1922.
2 miles [outdoors], 9:09 3-5, made by Al Shrubb in England in 1904.

JOIE RAY.
[Walinger Photo.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C., Chicago, America's premier middle distance runner, broke three world's indoor records and established a fourth in the special two mile invitation race, which featured the third annual indoor meet of Wilco A. A. in Thirteenth Regiment armory tonight. In addition to these performances, Ray surpassed the time for one world's outdoor record.

The distances at which Ray broke world's records were one and three-quarters miles, 3,000 meters, and two miles. He established a new record for one mile and seven-eighths, a distance for which there was no previous indoor mark.

Leconey Establishes Mark.

Alfred Leconey of Lafayette college established a record for 125 yards indoors for which there had been no previous mark. He was timed at this distance in a 150 yard heat in :12 3-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the world's outdoor record, made by C. H. Sherrill in 1889 in New York. Loren Murchison of Newark A. C. won the series of sprints, taking the 100 yard dash in :10 and the 50 in :05 3-5.

Still another world's indoor record was lowered by Herb Meyer of Rutgers college, who made the 100 yard low hurdle in :11 9-10. The old record was :12 1-5, made by James S. Hill at Baltimore in 1907.

Running against Ray in his second race were Willie Ritola of Finnish-American A. C., national ten mile and cross country champion; Robert F. Moore of Columbia university; Walter Higgins, also of Columbia, the intercollegiate two mile and cross country champion; and Eddie Weiman of Morningside A. C.

Joie's Greatest Race.

In running in what was probably the greatest indoor race of his career Ray defeated Ritola by three-quarters of a lap. The Illinois A. C. flyer finished more than a lap ahead of Moore and also Higgins. Weiman found the pace too hot and dropped out on the fourteenth lap.

For six and one-half laps Higgins set the pace, followed by Ray in second place. Ritola, Weiman, and Moore alternated in the other places. On the backstretch of the sixth lap Ray went into the lead, followed by Weiman. From that point Ray led all the way to the finish, being sixty yards ahead of the Finn at the mile mark and lapping Higgins and Moore on the fourteenth lap.

For the last two laps Ray raced like a sprinter and the crowd of 8,000 persons went wild.

How Ray Was Timed.

Here is how the Chicago runner was clocked in his record feat:

Quarter mile, 1:02 2-5.
Half mile, 2:11 3-5.
Three-quarters mile, 3:22.
One mile, 4:29 2-5.
One mile and a quarter, 5:39 1-5.
One mile and one-half, 6:48 3-5.
Mile and three-quarters, 7:59 4-5.
Mile and seven-eighths, 8:34 3-5.
Two miles, 9:08 2-5. [This surpassed by a full second the world's outdoor record of 9:09 2-5, established by Alfred Shrubb in England, in 1904.]

At 3,000 meters one watch caught Ray in 8:31, another in 8:31 1-5, and a third in 8:32. In accordance with the rules the middle time was accepted.

Abel Kiviat, famous when he retired seven years ago as an Olympic athlete, and still holder of the world record for 1,500 meters, failed in his attempted comeback in the 880 yard run, finishing fourth. The race, in the slow time of 2:01, was won by William Sullivan, Paulist A. C., who was pressed for honors three-quarters of the distance and held second place up to the stretch, where two others passed him.

Summaries of other races:

50 yard dash—Won by Loren Murchison, Newark A. C.; H. B. Lever, U. of Pa., second; L. Rawlings, Long Island A. C., third. Time, :05 3-5.

150 yard dash—Won by Alfred Leconey, Lafayette college; J. T. Norton, Yale, second. Time, :15 1-5.

One mile, handicap—Won by E. O. McLane, Penn [20 seconds]; Patrick Kennedy, Yonkers second [40 seconds]; William L. Stokeley, St. Christopher, third [40 seconds.] Time, 4:27 1-5.

100 yard low hurdles—Won by Herbert Meyer, Rutgers; J. C. Taylor, Princeton, second; T. Farrell, unattached, third. Time, :11 9-10.

600 yard run—Won by Walter Koppisch, Columbia; Allan Helffrich, Penn, second; J. W. Driscoll, Boston A. A., third. Time, 1:23 1-5.

HOCKEY AT THE LAKE FOREST WINTER CLUB

Taking puck down the rink in yesterday's game between Lake Forest and Kenosha, which was won by Lake Forest, 3 to 1, in extra period. Greeley of Lake Forest and Kapper of Kenosha are endeavoring to secure possession. Chaput of Kenosha is coming up from the rear, while Armour of Lake Forest, shown in the foreground, is watching the fight preparatory to chasing the puck no matter in which direction it goes.

This picture shows a play at Kenosha's goal. Hellman has just blocked a Lake Forest attempt to score. Otis of Lake Forest has stumbled, after bringing the puck to the visitors' goal. Bolneau of Kenosha is up there to help Hellman. Armour of Lake Forest is shown as having missed the puck on its return, while to the extreme left Kapper of Kenosha is right on top of the rubber ready to send it down toward Lake Forest's goal.

SIGMA DELTA PSI HARDEST TO JOIN

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Sigma Delta Psi is the hardest fraternity among all college organizations to join. There are no tappings, no "rushing," no favoritism, but the college man who is entitled to wear that pin and be received into the fraternity has earned his way.

There are now fourteen chapters of Sigma Delta Psi among the American colleges. The closest estimate of membership at present is that, since it was organized, about 225 youths have earned the right to wear the pin. Yale, with thirty-nine members since 1915, probably leads the list with the largest chapter.

Plenty Qualifications.

This fraternity is open to any man in any college in America, yet it is one of the smallest of them all. All a fellow has to do to become a member is to run 100 yards in 11 3-5 seconds, run the 220 yard low hurdles in 31 seconds, leaving all standing; make a running high jump of 5 feet, a running broad jump of 17 feet, put the 16 pound shot 30 feet, pole vault 8 feet 6 inches, throw a baseball 120 feet on the fly, punt a football 120 feet on the fly, swim 100 yards without rest or floating, run two miles in 12 minutes 15 seconds, and in tumbling do a front hand spring, a hand stand maintained for 10 seconds and a vault over a fence the heighth of the chin. Then, if the erect carriage of the candidate (secretly observed) meets the approval of the committee, he is eligible to get his key.

The fraternity was founded at Indiana university in 1912, and numbers among its members many of the most famous athletes produced in American colleges. Yale's list alone includes the following named famous athletes, all "Y" men.

Nick Carter, '15.	H. Potter, '17.
E. J. Stackpole, '15.	H. C. Rolfe, '17.
W. F. Roos, '15.	Stephen Potter, '19. Killed in war.
J. H. Grubb, '16.	Gordon Brown, '20.
W. M. Oler Jr., '16.	T. J. O'Brien, '21.
J. W. Overton, '17. Killed in war.	M. P. Aldrich, '22.
W. B. Schleiter, '21.	P. H. Crane, '22.
Thomas Campbell, '23

Can Substitute Letter.

The rules permit any letter man to substitute his letter for any one of the required events, and in spite of the reasonable requirements in each event extremely few candidates are able to do all the performances and many have used their letter to complete the list.

One of the greatest of eastern athletes failed in his attempts to make Sigma Delta Psi. He could do everything excepting pole vault and run two miles. Try as he might he could not vault eight feet, nor make the required time in two miles. He made scores of attempts, and failed by seconds.

OPAL DERBY CHANCE FOR LESSER LIGHTS

The Opal A. A., one of the leading smaller athletic organizations of the city, will hold its annual skating Derby at Douglas park today. The program will open at 1 o'clock, and President Bob Little wants it understood contestants must report for their numbers half an hour earlier.

In the absence of local stars who are in the east taking part in various championship competitions, experts who have been playing second fiddle to the stars will have opportunities to win gold medals. Among some of the well known skaters who will take part are Gus and John Fets of the Opal A. A., Lars Lundgoot of the Norwegian-American A. A., Larry Quirk of the Austin Columbia A. A., and Eddie Murphy and the James brothers of the Alverno A. A.

A large entry has been received from the playgrounds, and indications are a number of the coming stars will break into the point column. In every open skating meet held this year playgrounds have been represented by skaters who have scored points. Last Sunday, Henry playground finished third in the annual Derby of the Alverno A. A.

CAMELIA SABIE SETS WORLD RECORD IN 60 YARD LOW HURDLES

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Miss Camelia Sabie, Newark's wonderful school teacher athlete, who won world fame as a hurdler and broad jumper at the 1921 Olympic games, established a world's record for the 60 yard low hurdles tonight in the local armory at the first annual games of the Newark Young Women's and Young Men's Hebrew association.

Miss Sabie was opposed by Edith Munch and Mary Enright, also Newark girls. Despite their handicaps, Miss Sabie fairly walked away with the race, catching her opponents before the first hurdle was reached and then skimming over the hurdles like a frightened greyhound, negotiating the distance in the remarkable time of :09.

The Marquette-Setters clash is holding chief interest in the north section of the Knights of Columbus basketball league this afternoon at Broadway armory. NORTH SECTION.
O'Connor vs. Hennepin.
Columbus vs. Lafayette.
Brownson vs. University.

PURDUE, 26; OHIO, 21

Columbus, O., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Purdue's fast stepping basketball team defeated Ohio State, 26 to 21, in the scrappiest game fans have seen on the Coliseum floor this season. The Boilermakers were leading, 14 to 6, at the half, but three minutes after the second half began, the Bucyeyes cut the lead to 19 to 24. It was their only bid for possible victory.

Robbins' shooting eye and Holwerda's fine foul tossing kept Purdue out of hot water throughout the contest. Johnny Miner, who at the beginning of the week was leading the Big Ten in points scored with 74 markers, failed to ring a basket. Howard ["Red"] Blair sent in five minutes before the game was called, and scored three baskets. It was Ohio State's sixth defeat in seven games. Lineup:

Midkiff is 19 and is built along the lines of Jess Willard. Officials at today's matches are agreed that Midkiff has no idea of his true strength.

Takaki, Chicago's Jap wrestler, gained the only fall for the Maroons when he pinned Hughes of Illinois in short order. MAROON TICKET SYSTEM TO LEAVE THE PUBLIC LAST

The University of Chicago has decided to adapt its system of selling tickets to football games to that used by Harvard, Yale and other great eastern universities. The committee, appointed to investigate the ticket system, reported yesterday in favor of granting priority claims to students, alumni, and others connected with the university, with the general public to be served later.

The committee admits that the system used last fall fell down in some respects in handling tickets, especially for the Princeton game, and declares that some plan of priority must be adopted, as it has been in eastern universities where the demand for tickets exceeds the supply.

Commend Work of Committee.

The committee, of which William Scott Bond is chairman, and which is composed of Roy Keehn, Gus Axelson, Harvey Woodruff, James A. Field, James M. Sheldon, and Walker Kennedy, in its report to Wallace Heckman, business manager, said:

"We find that the committee was working under a plan adopted by the board of physical culture and athletics. The plan was a new one, and its execution involved a tremendous lot of detail and, in our opinion, the committee, under the circumstances, did a very creditable piece of work and deserves commendation. When there are not enough seats to fill all applications there is sure to be dissatisfaction. We find that the plan followed rests on a sound and equitable basis, although naturally in the first execution of an undertaking of this kind, there were some mistakes and in our opinion some changes are advisable.

Students to Come First.

"We believe that the principle which must be followed is that of giving priority to the students and alumni and others directly connected with the university and then accommodating as many of the public as possible."

The second part of the report recommends changes for 1923 which will be taken up by the athletic board for action. The board has had an agent studying the system of sales used at Harvard and other eastern schools and the Chicago system will be an adaptation of the Harvard system to Chicago conditions.

Evanston Preps Humble Northwestern Marksmen

Evanston High rifle team defeated Northwestern university shooters yesterday at Evanston, 1,668 targets to 1,589. Two Evanston shooters, Sturm and Grant, turned in high scores.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

THE FACTS.

With oratorical delight
The true aristocratic sport
From sunny Dixie makes a rite
And ceremony of a snort.
The julep [with its frosted mug,
Crushed ice and sugar, and a sprig
Of mint and contents of the jug],
His one best bet, goes over big.
The nectar's frills, on which his pride
Is showered, have but very small Effect. They're great because they hide
An awful dose of alcohol.

The cocktail, which we rally round
Up north, its fourflush also makes;
Its basic principle is sound
But its remaining parts are fakes;
Vermouth and sirup, cherries, too,
As well as olives, may be swell,
But when employed to help a stew
Achieve his object—wotthehell!
We don't inhale this liquid fluff
By reason of its outward call;
We sip because its fancy stuff
Conceals a jolt of alcohol.

The elbow-crooker, whate'er be
His rank, must fib about his drinks;
He can't refer with honesty
To mugs in which his nose he sinks;
The rich guy in his cloistered club,
The cadger, though he sponge and mooch;
The genius and the mental cub,
Have alibis for h'isting hootch.
Each claims it's sociability,
Or this, or that [some kind of stall,
That prompts his penchant for a spree]
When all he wants is alcohol.

CUBS GET AWAY NEXT SATURDAY FOR CATALINA

INDIANS IN CAMP

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 10.—Hot Springs saw its first baseball spring training activities of the season today with the arrival here of four members of the Cleveland, American league, club. Jack McAllister, Frank Roth, Stanley Coveleskie, and George Uhle made up the Indians' advance guard.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Spring training, with its rubber shirts, rubber boards, and sore muscles is only a short ways off for Bill Killefer and his Cub early birds. Next Saturday morning the first delegation will steam out over the Santa Fe for the far West, and by the following Tuesday twenty athletes will be in harness ready for a protracted, intensive drill on Catalina island.

The first squad, as now made up, comprises thirteen pitchers, four catchers, including Killefer, and four infielders. It's quite a bulky layout to handle in the two weeks before the regular crew arrives, but the manager will have four assistants on hand and when this corps of teachers gets busy it will not take long to get results.

Pitchers Chief Concern.

Like all managers, Killefer is vitally interested in his pitchers. The old fellows are not going to cause much concern. They can take things easy, but for the youngsters it will be a different story Every one of the rookies has the necessary natural ability but all lack pitching finish, and it is on this that they will be drilled, until they talk baseball in their sleep.

The first bit of training in which the entire squad of twenty will participate will be hiking over the mountains on William Wrigley's island domain. This is great for the breathing and for hardening the muscles. This toil will be augmented by a limited quantity of ordinary throwing, and a few days of this will put the boys in such shape that they can risk "putting something on 'er."

What Youngsters Must Learn.

What the young pitchers are going to have to learn is to field their position, develop a good deceptive move to first base, and acquire a change of pace, which is the only thing that stops the modern sluggers. All these branches of schooling can be covered, because in addition to the large corps of instructors, there will be an infield present made up of Cotter, Grantham, Hollocher, and Friberg. This will make it possible for the pupils to get their pitching lessons under the same conditions as prevail in a regular game.

Cheeves, Kaufman, and Osborne of last year's staff and Nick Dumovitch, the star southpaw recently obtained from the Los Angeles club, won't have to bother much with the elementary stuff. Dumovitch, although in professional ball only two years, is expected to prove a sensation and there is no reason why Osborne shouldn't be as good or better than last season. With Alex and Aldridge this gives promise of a fairly formidable staff in itself, but there are others who may be heard from.

Semipro's Great Prospect.

Killefer has another great left handed prospect in Fred Fussell, the Denver semipro who came up late last season. He boasts an excellent curve and fast ball but lacks a slow floater. He'll be taught this at Catalina. Steuland's is a similar case. He came up last year with a lot of speed and gradually developed a curve ball. Now he has to master the slow ball so that he may acquire the much needed change of pace.

Another hurler who may develop into a prominent citizen is Victor Keen. He performed in semipro ranks around Philadelphia and also pitched at the University of Maryland. He was in camp last spring but was so shy on the finer points of heaving that Killefer farmed him out to Wichita Falls in the Texas league. Down there the lad developed in a hurry and won thirteen games against four defeats. Not much is known of the other mound men on the roster.

ENGLAND WINS AT RUGBY.

LEICESTER, England, Feb. 10.—England defeated Ireland in the international rugby fixture here this afternoon, 23 to 5.

ANDERSON-SMITH GO LOOKS BEST OF WINTER

Eddie Anderson of Moline and Harold Smith, bantamweight pride of the stockyards, who meet in the windup of the boxing show to be held before a suburban club tomorrow night, will show their wares before a capacity house, according to Matchmaker Jim Mullen.

That the match is one of the best arranged around here this winter is shown by the advance demand for tickets and the conversation in local boxing headquarters. Each has his admirers and neither will enter the ring a favorite. They will scale 118 pounds at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The main event will be supported by three other bouts.

Moore Off for Bout.

Pal Moore, local bantamweight, who will trade punches with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., at Indianapolis on Tuesday night, departs for the scene of battle today. Moore is in fine shape and has worked industriously for this bout. Kane and Long, who look after the interests of Taylor, claim the same fighting asset for their boxer.

It will be the fourth meeting of this pair of sparkling bantams. On two occasions they went ten rounds to about an even thing, while Moore won the popular decision when they met on the U. S. S. Commodore. The bout is attracting a lot of attention in the Hoosier state and the result will be watched with interest. Steve Harder is the promoter.

Freedman Goes East.

Sailor Freedman, local lightweight, and Manager Dick Curley depart today for the east, where Freedman will engage in three fights. Sailor will return to Chicago to resume training for pending matches, one of which is with Ever Hammer before a suburban club.

Jack Elle, tough west side bantamweight, who meets Eddie Anderson in a ten round bout at a suburban club Feb. 19, will start active training at the Arcade tomorrow. Four other bouts will be on this card.

Matchmakers for the Harold Taylor post of the American Legion have finally clinched the Joe Burman-Midget Smith ten round bout to be staged at a north side suburban club Feb. 21. Smith will be in town Friday to finish his training. Burman resumes training for the bout tomorrow. This is their fifth meeting. Kid Bandy of St. Louis will meet a worthy opponent in the semi-windup.

Tom Walsh has booked Jock Malone, St. Paul middleweight, to box Johnny Herman of New York twelve rounds to a decision at Zanesville, O., Friday night, and Bud Christiano, the local lightweight, to face K. O. Mars of Cincinnati in a twelve rounder to a decision at Columbus, Feb. 19. Malone and Christiano are training daily at the Arcade.

N. Y. COMISH TO DECIDE WHETHER KANSAS GETS WHITE FORFEIT COIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The New York State Athletic commission will decide whether Charlie White, Chicago lightweight, beaten last night by Rocky Kansas, must lose his $2,500 weight forfeit, because he entered the ring three quarters of a pound over the 135 pound limit.

White filed a protest with the commission after the Buffalo boxer's manager, Dan Rogers, refused to withdraw his claim.

According to his manager, Ike Dorgan, White based his protest on the ground that Rogers made no complaint at the time the boxers weighed in at 2 o'clock, waiting fifteen minutes later to do so. By this time White had eaten a bowl of broth and was unable to attempt further weight reduction before 3 o'clock, the time limit.

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Kansas left this city for Buffalo today after collecting $10,753.52. White received a similar sum less the $2,500.

William Muldoon, chairman of the state athletic commission, declared tonight that he had received no notification of White's protest to the commission. He added, however, that in his opinion White's protest was unfounded, since the Chicago lightweight failed to make the weight for which he had signed and posted a forfeit.

$100,000 ASKED TO BIND DEMPSEY BOUT

Great Falls, Mont., Feb. 10.—In reply to an offer from the Toole County American Legion Boxing association of Shelby, Mont., to guarantee a $200,000 purse to Jack Dempsey and $50,000 to Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul for a fifteen round fight at Shelby, July 4 next, with a $50,000 forfeit posted to guarantee the contract, L. A. Sampson of the Legion association today received a telegram from Jack Kearns in New York, stating if the association would guarantee protection for the bout from the authorities, and post $100,000 forfeit instead of $50,000, he would be interested in taking up the offer. Gibbons has not yet replied.

DEMPSEY ARRIVES AT SALT LAKE TO SEE HIS FATHER

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 10.—Jack Dempsey, white heavyweight boxing champion, reached Salt Lake City late today from the east and went direct from the train to see his father, Hiram Dempsey, who is ill at a local hospital. The elder Dempsey is suffering from stomach trouble, and his condition is reported serious.

The champion appeared somewhat worried and was reluctant to say anything regarding plans for coming fights. He said he had not affixed his signature to articles for a match with Joe Beckett.

NOTES OF THE BOWLERS.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 10.—Fort Wayne (Ind.) bowlers landed in the first division in singles and doubles in the International Bowling association tournament here today. E. Kraft and F. Zurcher of that place finished first in the two men with 1,237. Dohrman and Farnam, Fort Wayne, were second in this event with 1,202. In the singles E. De Meulle of South St. Paul, Minn., was at the top of the heap at the end of the opening day with 670. C. Behr, Minneapolis, was next, rolling 647. E. Kraft of Fort Wayne finished fifth with 619.

NO DECISION IDEA HARMED MURPHY IN DECISION BOUT

This is the eighth article on great boxers who failed to win the title in their divisions and the reasons why.

BY SIDNEY SUTHERLAND.

To explain why "Harlem Tommy" Murphy never became a titleholder in the lightweight ranks it is necessary to digress a moment from straight narrative.

Although the majority of championships have been decided elsewhere for three decades, New York, with that metropolitan insolence that infuriates the hinterland, has arrogated to herself the rôle of dictator in pugilistic affairs, as she has in financial, social, theatrical, and other worlds.

Many years ago, due to a combination of venal referees and rotten gamblers, the boxing game in Gotham emitted a fearful stench. Indulging the quaint American habit of regulating everything from inclement weather to a world war by "passing a law," the Neanderthalers at Albany, instead of simply replacing the crooks with honest, competent referees and disqualifying faking boxers and their managers, brightly decided that the pollution arose from the decisions.

Supplied a Greater Evil.

The clover kicking statesmen promptly eliminated that curse by providing the sport with one twenty fold worse; for behind the short "no decision" contests they wished on the public, a dozen dishonesties can be practiced where only one was perpetrated before. As if righteousness lay in inconclusive contests!

A no decision match has no redeeming feature. It is bad for the boxer because he is tempted to "waltz" through the six or ten rounds. It is bad for the game because no two reporters see a fight alike—every other sport can be described by a diagram, and it is bad for the public because it often pays generously to see fraudulent or stalling contests, and because even if both performers are really trying no definite decision is reached.

Imagine racing, baseball, stud poker—any sport—carried on to a no decision finish!

Why Murphy Never Won Title.

It was in the New York of no decision matches that "Harlem Tommy" Murphy flourished. Born in 1885, his record begins with 1903 and ends, so far as worthwhile performances go, in 1913. That record tells why this superboxer never reached the peak—he was mentally and physically geared up to a ten round no decision contest.

Possessed of every qualification a titleholder requires he mechanically and inevitably adjusted himself to the verdictless issue. When he stepped out of the ten round game he won only nine bouts, and of these five were twelve round affairs in Boston. In the eleven years mentioned, he fought 130 battles and in 84 of these no one knows today what happened. He knocked out 26 men, also in no decision bouts, thus giving to 110 of his 130 fights the no decision complex.

Now in at least seventy of those eighty-four unsatisfactory encounters, Murphy probably received the favorable decisions of the majority of sporting writers present. How much better for his prestige and his box office drawing power if, instead of the exasperating, meaningless "No Dec.," he could have printed after his name the letter "W" to show that he won.

As to Murphy's abilities, he had everything except the "will to win" the referee's verdict—and that was due solely to the fact that there was no referee's verdict. He was a terrific puncher, an extraordinary ring tactician, and his speed was bewildering. When Cæsar paused in his career of "decision" fights to praise it was deemed praise indeed. No greater tribute ever was paid to any boxer than the one bestowed on the Harlem lad by the fastest boxer that ever lived, Percy Cove. 'Twas thus he spoke:

Long Fights His Waterloo.

"Brother, when Murphy hits a man once with either hand, no power under the shining sun can prevent him from hitting him three more times. I've often trained with him, and when he hit me the first one I knew three more were on the way."

Murphy started downhill when he went to California to get into the twenty round game, just as "Knockout" Brown Leach Cross, and other graduates from the New York school did. Packey McFarland beat him, and he drew with "One Round" Hogan, Abe Attell, and Ad Wolgast. He later defeated Attell and Wolgast, about the only long battles he ever won. His other triumphs and defeats can be seen in the record books, save where they are forever obscured by the no decision "decisions."

Murphy, however, should lie awake nights worrying about his failure to win the title. During his long career he sensibly invested a great part of his earnings in Brooklyn real estate, and today he is almost a plutocrat, with an income as handsome as it is secure.

ANOTHER SHOT AT THE PIKE FAMILY.

SINCE we lined up the members of the pike gang in a story some three or four weeks ago the bait shooters have sure been on the job telling us what they think about this "pike" and "pickerel" question. One chap took his writing weapon in hand and assured us that no matter what we called that darn snake which infests the waters of the middle west, whether we called it Great Lakes pike, great pike, or plain pickerel, it was nothing more than a snake to him, not fit to take on a hook, and "pickerel" was even too good a name for said fish, to say nothing of calling it great pike! So that's that. And now let's take another shot at this jumbled question of what's what in the pike family.

Among other letters received from the fishing fraternity was one from A. C. Weed of the division of fishes of the Field museum, Chicago. A. C. is working on this pickerel and pike business right now and has just finished with the smaller pickerels, which don't interest us much, as they hardly can be classed as game fishes. Friend Weed said that the lineup we gave was just about the same as he had doped out, except that he figured it was quite hopeless to try to change the common, old time, well nigh universal name of the pickerel [Esox lucius] to great pike or Great Lakes pike. Reckon you're right, A. C., but this jumble of names will never get straightened out unless this big pike is called by its right name.

While at the museum the other day we had a look at a fine, big muskie from Ohio which, according to many fish experts is the Ohio or chautauqua muskellunge. But you can't get a half dozen fish men to agree on this point. Some say there are three muskies in the middle west. Others, as, for instance, Dr. Henshall, recognize only one which, with slight variations are found throughout this region. So there you are. When the scientists can't agree what chance have the rest of us to get together on this question? However, we'll hazard a guess that before many years when everybody has had a chance to study more of these muskies here in the middle west, the students will be pretty well agreed that the muskie of northern Wisconsin is not the same fish of the Ohio country.

At present the lineup is something like this:

1. Scientific name [Esox masquinongy]; common name [common muskellunge]. Found in upper St. Lawrence river, some streams and lakes tributary to the Great Lakes, and a few lakes in the upper Mississippi valley.
2. Scientific name [Esox Ohiensis]; common name [Chautauqua muskie]. Found in Chautauqua lake and the Ohio River valley.
3. Scientific name [Esox immaculatus]; common name [great northern pike (a muskie)]. Found in Eagle lake and other small lakes of upper Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Although this classification gives everybody chance enough to scrap about these fish and whether they "is" or they "ain't," a fellow can keep the following rule for telling the difference between the great pike [pickerel] and the true muskie and be sure of his ground:

MUSKELLUNGE—Upper half of both cheeks and gill covers scaly, lower half naked. Remember "smooth shaven" below and you have it.

Color—Usually of a uniform dark gray hue and if spotted the spots are darker than the ground color.

So the things to remember about the muskie if you are ever going to put up any cash betting on a fish are smooth shaven below, spots always darker than the ground color.

As for the pike, which everybody calls pickerel, snake or some other pet name, his cheeks are entirely scaly with gill covers scaly above and naked below; color, bluish or greenish gray, with spots lighter than the general or body color. So the things to remember about this fish are that he is a "one and a halfer," whole of cheek and half of gill cover scaly, spots lighter than ground color. With these simple differences in mind you can tell what's what in a jiffy if a big lunker of the Esox gang is paraded before you.

Chaney Going After His 89th Knockout Tomorrow

New York, Feb. 10.—George "Knockout" Chaney, Baltimore lightweight, has scored eighty-eight knockouts in his ring career and will try to make it eighty-nine on Monday night, when he is to fight Alec Hart of Cleveland in the main bout of eight rounds at the Arena A. C. of Philadelphia.

MICHIGAN TOWNS ENROLL UNDER WALTON BANNER

BY BOB BECKER.

Declaring that "he would rather have been the founder of the Izaak Walton League of America than be president of the United States," James Oliver Curwood, well known author and outdoorsman, along with Will H. Dilg and Dr. Preston Bradley of this city, brought Lansing, Mich., into the Izaak Walton league Friday night, when sportsmen of that city gathered at a banquet at which Mr. Curwood was guest of honor.

Nearly 600 fishermen and other outdoor lovers attended the banquet, and after listening to talks by Messrs. Curwood and Dilg, and Dr. Bradley, they voted to ally themselves with the greatest conservation movement in the history of the United States.

Owosso, Mich., Mr. Curwood's home town, also has rallied around the Walton banner. On Feb. 8, 650 sportsmen of that city and vicinity got together at a banquet to consider joining the league, and before the evening was over more than 300 new members had put their names on the membership roll. President Dilg and Dr. Bradley also spoke at this banquet.

Wisconsin Coöperates.

Another good piece of news for outdoorsmen is the report that the Wisconsin Game Protective association has officially allied itself with the league, bringing in eighty-three county organizations.

Bill Dilg, who heads the national organization of "Hello Ikes," in speaking of the national sweep of the Walton movement, said last night:

"We've got the nation. But they are coming too fast for us. New chapters are being formed everywhere so fast that headquarters can hardly take care of them. Michigan is now coming in. Dr. Preston Bradley and James Oliver Curwood will make thirty speeches before mass meetings in that state. It will require the services of two organizers to handle the demands for new chapters.

America Awakening.

"It's the same story with our publication, the greatest conservation magazine ever put in the hands of outdoorsmen. Subscriptions to it are pouring in. There can be no doubt that the conscience of outdoor America is awakening, and sportsmen everywhere are eager to get behind the Walton league conservation movement."

To take care of the increased work at the headquarters of the league, Charles F. Bennett has been engaged as executive secretary.

IT STARTS PROMPTLY IN THE COLDEST WEATHER

The behavior of Dodge Brothers Motor Car on zero days is a fair example of its fitness the year round.

You turn the switch, step on the button, and the motor starts—without undue noise or delay.

The reasons are readily understood:

The coordination of the power plant is well nigh flawless. The slightest impulse sets it in motion.

The battery—6-cells, 12-volts—is unusually large.

A high-vacuum carburetor so thoroughly vaporizes the gasoline that it ignites instantly under the spark.

The electrical system is remarkably efficient and cuts to a minimum the usual voltage loss between battery and starter.

Finally, the starter, itself—an admirable example of its kind—is directly united with the engine by a chain drive which is always in mesh—a fact having much to do with the promptness and quietness of its action.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Thirty riders, composing fifteen teams, by far the best field which ever started in a six day bicycle race in Chicago, will be sent away from a rolling start on the 146 hour grind by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer at 9 o'clock tonight at the Coliseum. The race will be brought to a close at 11 o'clock next Saturday night.

Of the fifteen teams which will start, nine must be given a chance to win. They are so evenly matched that the slightest error in pickups during the jamming may cost any combination the race. Each team is composed of a plugger and sprinter. All have had experience of six day racing and under such conditions a great contest should result.

Watch Goullet-Walthour Team.

Although Maurice Brocco and Oscar Egg make up a dangerous combination, the riding of Al Goullet and Bobby Walthour Jr. will command the interest of local bike enthusiasts, despite the fact Hy Kockler and Carl Stockholm of Chicago are in the race.

There are tricks to the bike game the same as in other branches of sports. Jake Magin and Eddie Madden are about as clever in discerning weaknesses and taking advantage of openings as any team in the race.

The Buysse brothers of Belgium, who make their first appearance in Chicago, may be the sensation of the race. This team recently won a six hour team race in Paris.

"Hy" Kockler of Chicago, who won the race last fall while teamed with Goullet, will have Alfred Grenda as a partner, while Carl Stockholm, another local product, will have Reggie McNamara as a partner. Willie Coburn, who with Dave Lands finished second in the last race here and won the previous event, will have Willie Hanley for a teammate.

Sprints Three Times a Day.

During each twenty-four hours there will be three series of sprints. At 3 o'clock each afternoon there will be ten two mile dashes, the same number at 9 o'clock each night, and a like number at 2 o'clock each morning. The winner of each sprint will be credited with 6 points. Second place will be rewarded with 4 markers, third with 2, and fourth with 1. On Saturday morning and afternoon the value of first place will be 12 points.

Every mile will be a sprint during the last hour of the race. The winner of each dash will be credited with 72 points. Five points will be given the second place winner, three for third, and one for fourth. If two or more teams are tied in mileage at the end of the race, the winner will be determined by points. Tickets for the entire week are on sale at 153 North Clark street.

Stockholm Beats Kockler.

Manager Paddy Harmon pulled a surprise at the match races last night by sticking Carl Stockholm and Ernest Kockler, Chicago rivals, on in a one mile match race. Stockholm won in two straight heats.

In the first heat of the team race between Maurice Brocco and Reggie McNamara and Alfred Grenda and Willie Lorenz, Brocco pulled his partner into second position for the final spurt and McNamara won from there. In the second heat Brocco again jumped a half a lap to the front. Lorenz caught him and Grenda blocked McNamara off until Brocco and Lorenz were more than a lap in front. Lorenz then outgeneraled and outrode the Italian and won. The third heat was desperately ridden with Grenda winning the heat and race for his team. Goulett took the alternate race without trouble.

TREDICK AGAIN TOPS 3 CUSHION LEAGUE

BY JOE DAVIS.

With last week's play over, Bert Tredick of McGarry's is again in front in the kaleidoscopic race in the Chicago Billiard league. He won two games and so passed Kenney and Reid of the Kieckhefer room. Kieckhefer, who was defeated, fell into a four handed tie with Grauman, who won, and Kendall and Jacobs, who each lost one and won one.

The veteran Charley Le Gros, who has been climbing steadily, after a poor start, is now in seventh place. Art Thurnblad, who was sixth a week ago, suffered two defeats and tumbled into the second division.

Tom Henry of Leffingwell's has gone to live in Michigan, and his place will be taken by Wallace Rock, who will make his first appearance Tuesday night, meeting Tredick at Leffingwell's. Rock will be at the same handicap as Henry, 44, and is said to be about his equal in skill.

Percy Collins, who is practicing for the class A amateur balkline championship to be held at the Crescent Athletic club in Brooklyn, starting Feb. 26, this week will meet Al Taylor in a match at Mussey's Madison street room. They wil play 300 points each night, starting Tuesday.

Jake Schaefer is in Los Angeles practicing for his coming match with Willie Hoppe in New York. Jake is working with Oro Morningstar and Kinrey Matsuyama.

WESTERN HEAVY MAT STAR SIGNED TO MEET CALZA

Dick Daviscourt, California heavyweight mat star, has been signed to meet George Calza at the Coliseum Feb. 20. The Italian took into consideration the plea of the westerner that should he lose he would accept nothing for his pains and just moderate compensation if he wins. John Perrelli, the Italian's pilot, wired acceptance for Daviscourt.

"This fellow from the west seems confident he can and will beat me if I take him on and I am for giving him the chance," Calza said. "This is not the first time I have heard of that man. I am sure he is working in the interest of Gardini, my Italian rival, the so-called trust favorite. I will wrestle Daviscourt and want all my enemies to come to the ringside and crow over me, but only for a little time. I feel certain of being returned the winner."

Calza demands that his match with Daviscourt be strictly to a finish, two out of three falls.

Cochet Retains Covered Court Net Championship

BARCELONA, Spain, Feb. 10.—[Associated Press.]—Henri Cochet, the youthful French lawn tennis star, retained the world's covered courts tennis championship by defeating J. B. Gilbert of Great Britain in the finals here today, 6—4, 7—5, 6—4.

The title in the women's doubles was won by Mrs. Beamish and Miss Kathleen McKane of England, who defeated Mesdames Golding and Vaussard of France in the finals, 6—1, 6—1.

British Polo Team Spurts and Nips West Point, 9-6

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Army's indoor polo team lost to the British international indoor polo team here today, 9 to 6. The cadets got away to an early lead and at the end of the first period led, 2 to 1. As soon as they warmed up to their work, however, the Britishers easily outclassed the Army lads. Four periods were played.

Sunday Fishing May Be Made Crime in Arkansas

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 10.—The bill to prohibit Sunday games and fishing in Arkansas was made special order of business for next Wednesday when it reached the senate today. At that time it was announced Senator Emory will offer an amendment requiring prosecuting attorneys to enforce the law under penalty of losing office if the law is not enforced.

West secured eight tricks.

After winning the first trick the declarer naturally decided to play for the club suit by finessing twice, hoping to find one of the honors in the north hand. In case this hope was not realized, however and south held both king and queen of clubs, a reëntry card in dummy would be necessary, as it was evident the ace of hearts would not remain for very long.

The declarer, therefore, created a reëntry in dummy by taking a losing finesse in the diamond suit and thereby lost the game. The game was not lost on account of the diamond finesse but on account of the time that the diamond finesse was taken. The declarer should have won the second trick with the king of diamonds, and allowed the jack of clubs to run around to the queen.

Then, after winning in dummy with the ace of hearts, taking the finesse in diamonds, it would not have mattered what card north led. It was the sequence of the plays which counted, as it was of the utmost importance that the second lead of hearts should come from south rather than the third.

In other words, a trick in clubs must be lost to the south hand while the ace of hearts still remained in dummy. That would have prevented south from securing a lead through the badly defended jack of hearts at a later period.

This deal requires a careful study because failure was certain unless the entire scheme was clear in the declarer's mind from the time that the first card in the deal was played. The play of the defendants was unimportant with the exception of the lead of the ace of spades by north, which saved the game for his side.

CHICAGO CRAFT AT NEW ORLEANS FOR SPEED RACES

New Orleans, La., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Century Tire, Peggy, and Miss Illinois were three arrivals yesterday for the motor boat carnivals here next week. Century Tire, owned by Charles J. Venn of Chicago, is an entrant in the single engine championship race, which will be a feature of the carnival. Venn's boat will compete against Miss Chicago, Miss Dubonnet, Miss Orleans, and the other speed marvels of its class.

Peggy, which is owned by Fred Scram of Milwaukee will race in the 610 class, while Miss Illinois, Bob Lee's boat from Dubuque, Ia., is to compete in the 215 class.

SQUASH TITLE RESTS BETWEEN PHILLY, BOSTON

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—All Detroit entrants in the national squash racquets championship tournament were eliminated in the opening singles matches today, leaving the battle for title honors resting betwen players from Boston and Philadelphia.

Stanley W. Pearson of Philadelphia, five times national champion and present title holder, won his match with Lawrence W. Ballairie of Baltimore, in straight sets, 15—10, 15—12, 15—9, and will meet Charles C. Peabody of Boston tomorrow in the singles finals.

Peabody reached the finals by defeating Morton L. Newhall of Detroit, runnerup last year.

Boston and Philadelphia play tomorrow for the team championship.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 10.—The Concordia seminary basketball team defeated the Indiana State Normal five, 36 to 33, here.

EVANS, GARDNER WON'T COMPETE ON YANK TEAM

BY JOE DAVIS.

It can be set down at this stage that neither Bob Gardner nor Chick Evans will compete on the American team which will compete in the international match in England this year. Gardner's "no" generally is final, but Chick's declination can be taken as tentative, depending on business engagements.

Word comes from New York that Jesse Sweetser, the amateur champion, and Francis Ouimet will be able to take part in the defense of the Walker cup, and the same authority asserts that Bobby Jones has applied for leave of absence from the Harvard authorities. Jesse Guilford, whose business engagements do not seem to tie him down much, probably will be able to make the trip.

Criticise Gene's Club.

A small storm of disapproval has arisen in the east over the refusal of the Briarcliff club to permit Gene Sarazen, its new professional, to cross the pond and try for the British open championship. It is asserted that George Duncan and Abe Mitchell have twice been given leave of absence from the clubs to play in the United States open championship, and also that Sandy Herd and J. H. Taylor will come over this summer to have a shot at our national open.

Sarazen is by this time a national institution, and the club will make a mistake if it does not give the champion a chance to try for the highest honors in British golf. Walter Hagen will defend the title he won last year, and it is likely Jim Barnes and possibly one or two more American players will go with him.

Olympia Clans Meet.

Olympia boosters, who favor the plan of creating a greater Olympia, and the round table clan, who are opposed to the plan of expansion recommended by the special investigating committee, each held caucus meetings yesterday, the boosters at the Sherman house and the round table at the City Hall Square building. The board of governors of the club and the investigating committee will hold a special meeting Tuesday night at the South Shore Country club, which members and their wives are invited to attend to view the plans and to have explained to them all details, in connection with the financing of the project.

Tom Kennett, the Olympia Fields professional, has opened an indoor school at the store of Thomas E. Wilson & Co. Matt Jans, who for several years was with Wright & Ditson, is now affiliated with Wilson & Co.

A PIPE STORY AND A GOOD LIE

FROM way down in Dixie comes the story of the season's freakiest shot. Edward Kennedy of Boston, a member of the Old Guard society at Palm Beach, drove a skyscraper from the eighth tee. The ball struck the roof of a cottage, bounced into the gutter, then ran down a drain pipe which runs half way round the house, and finally emerged from the spout and landed on the fairway, giving Mr. Kennedy a good lie—

INDOOR GOLF NOTES

FOUR matches were played in the first round for the Leon Errol prizes at the Henrici indoor golf school yesterday. Bill Jackson of Olympia Fields defeated Art Sweet of Edgewood, 2 up, the scoring not being remarkably low. J. F. Lyman of the Hunter's club defeated Joe Rubens of Idlewild, 2 and 1, Lyman had a card of 32-35—67, Rubens getting 35-33—68.

The best match was that in which Hugo Oppenheimer of Idlewild defeated E. A. Maginnis of Edgewater, 3 and 2. Oppenheimer made two at each of the first nine holes, and getting three aces coming home, was 3 up at the half way mark with a card of 34. He was 5 up at the twenty-seventh, but Maginnis made four aces on the next six holes and staged a great finish. Each had 34 on the second 18. Fred Hill of Skokie defeated Simms McGuire of Edgewater Beach, 1 up, thirty-eight holes.

Play in the qualifying round for the Randolph trophy will start tomorrow at Henrici's and the elimination frame will be open all week. The thirty-two players turning in the lowest scores will be paired for match competition.

The first women's tournament at Bob MacDonald's indoor course in the Leiter building will start tomorrow. The qualifying round will be open tomorrow and Tuesday, and the selected field will play a thirty-six hole medal round Wednesday for the prizes. The winner and the runnerup will receive trophies, as will also the low medalist. Among the prospective starters are Mrs. Melvin Jones, Mrs. H. A. Dunham, Mrs. G. A. Connell, Miss Edith Dahlstrom, Mrs. Eliot H. Evans, Miss Ruth Shults, Mrs. Oscar C. Horn, Mrs. Hiram D. Fargo, and Miss Grace Saunders.

Bob Jolly, the former Park Ridge professional, reached Chicago yesterday on his way to take a position with the Arkansas City Country club of Kansas.

MOTORDOM

Heavy Trucks May Be Barred from Township Roads

Conference to Protect All Secondary Routes in North Counties.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MOTOR vehicles weighing more than four tons may be barred from the use of all secondary roads in northern Illinois during the spring months.

Plans for the drastic enforcement of the state law, which allows the limiting of all truck loads to 5,000 pounds when township highways are soft, will be discussed in Wheaton tomorrow at a joint conference of county and state authorities. At the same time, the road chiefs expect to formulate a general and coöperative policy for the policing and protection of the northern routes.

The joint conference has been called by E. L. Gates, superintendent of highways in Du Page county, whose order last year limited the loads on all roads other than state pavements in his county to 12,000 pounds during the forty-five days of the spring thaw. It is his contention that complete highway protection can come only through the coöperation of all neighboring counties.

"Overloaded trucks are a menace to any road, paved or otherwise," he declared yesterday, "but they cause the most damage to the gravel and graded dirt surfaces and the macadam paving on our so-called secondary or township arteries. These roads are important farm to market routes, under the direct supervision of county organizations, and must be maintained by the funds at hand throughout the year. When a huge truck leaves the state pavement and plows through the thawing surface of one of them the road sometimes requires practical rebuilding before it can be put into shape to carry its legitimate traffic. I want help from neighboring counties in this spring drive against useless highway expense, and I believe that authorities in neighboring counties are ready to enter on a general protective policy. I want it known that in this county, at least, vehicles weighing more than 8,000 pounds will be subject to arrest and heavy fine if they operate on township roads during the next forty-five days."

Maj. George A. Quinlan, superintendent of highways, will represent the Cook county department at the conference. Superintendents of Kane, Will, McHenry, Lake, and Kendall counties will also be present, together with road committees from the various boards of supervisors. Senators Barr and Meentz have been invited to speak on the state's attitude toward maintenance, policing, and other details of county systems.

Official opinion concerning this drastic limiting of freight traffic differs widely. A number of Illinois officials believe with the Wisconsin highway department that "traffic must be served" and contend that roads must be built for trucks, rather than the reverse. The United States bureau of public roads takes the same attitude, except in cases where flagrant overloading and reckless operation of freight vehicles cause the destruction of expensive pavements.

It is expected that every angle of the maintenance problem will be considered at the conference before any general policy can be adopted.

Another important coöperative movement was introduced by the Illinois commerce commision yesterday in the form of a general order asking for immediate improvement of railway grade crossings in the state. The order requires removal at once of all hedges, trees, weeds, and other obstructions which obscure the view at grade crossing approaches. It declares that, generally, these obstructions are on private property and advised highway commissioners to make a personal appeal to property owners in the spring cleanup campaign.

The order adds that at a number of crossings piles of earth and embankments on railroad property have been observed recently and promises immediate state action if the roads do not comply with local requests for their removal.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." Olaus Nordbye, 825 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

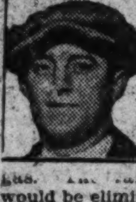
How do you account for so many automobiles getting stalled on railroad tracks?

Where Asked.

City hall.

The Answers.

B. P. Boyce, 4759 Winthrop avenue, garage proprietor—In a sense they are too self-consciously careful at railroad crossings. A railroad crossing isn't much of an obstruction. Every autoist regularly does more difficult stunts with ease and safety. When sure that the track can be crossed in safety put it on second speed and proceed in the regular way, that's all.



James White, 5214 South Halsted street, chauffeur—Upon approaching railroad crossings most cars are in high speed. Upon slowing up to see if anything is coming and they find everything safe the natural tendency is to step on the gas. The railroad crossing danger would be eliminated if everybody would shift to second speed upon approaching all railroad crossings and stay on second, regardless of everything, until the tracks have been passed over.

George Meade, 5603 South May street, concrete road inspector—Undoubtedly the reason for so many stalled engines at railroad crossings is because they are in such a hurry to get it all over with that they feed the gas too fast, thus killing the engine. It's a natural instinct to try to get away from dangerous places as quickly as possible.

Dave Donigan, 5206 South May street, printer—The only way I can account for it is that people get so scared at the railroad crossing signs that when they actually come to go up the small inclines leading to the tracks they step too hard on the gas, flood the carburetor, and kill their engine. It is easy in case of excitement to put the foot on the brake instead of on the gas and release the clutch too fast, which also kills the engine.

Mike McCarthy, 1149 West Marquette road, clerk — I don't know, unless it's because they don't know how to drive or because they see an engine somewhere down the track. I presume most of the accidents are due to leaving the clutch out [illegible] third to second speed after making the incline. In doing that they kill their motor, then they get balled up and don't know what they are doing.

Fire Protection.

Dallas county, Texas, has made it possible for its rural districts to obtain protection from the fire department in Dallas through the construction of modern hard surfaced highways. A contract executed recently between the Dallas city commission and the county commissioners provides for fire protection to farmers on all paved roads within a radius of fifteen miles of Dallas. When a farm house or barn along a paved road catches fire all the farmer has to do is to telephone the Dallas department and it will respond at forty to fifty miles an hour with a chemical engine or a steamer as occasion may warrant.

GREASING GEARS.

When the hole in a gear case is so small it makes the feeding of grease through a gun extremely difficult, screw into the hole temporarily an ordinary compression grease cup of large size, by which means a full charge may be inserted.

Emmerson Begins Roundup of All License Evaders

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 10.—A state-wide drive directed against all automobile owners who have failed to secure 1923 licenses was launched today by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson.

In a letter addressed to all police chiefs he asks their coöperation in enforcing compliance with the law and the automobile inspectors under his own direction are being sent throughout the state to assist in the roundup.

"Many owners of cars," declared the executive, "seem to have the impression that if they get their new licenses any time within the first three months of the year it will be all right. No such provision is made in the law and if this was ever true it was because the secretary of state found it impossible to issue the licenses fast enough and a grace period had to be provided to allow time for the mailing out of the plates.

"Under the system perfected in the automobile department under the present administration, there is no longer any delay in sending out plates to applicants. Each day's mail is cared for before closing time in the evening. If a car is without 1923 plates it is because no application has been made.

"To date we have issued 53 per cent of the entire year's licenses. More than 425,000 licenses have been issued and the plates mailed out to the owners. The collection on these licenses amount to $4,400,000.

"This breaks all past records. But in spite of this enormous volume of business there has been no delay in the department and we could have taken care of more applications had they come in."

In his letter to police officers, Secretary Emmerson says:

"If you will begin a campaign in your community to secure the enforcement of this law it will greatly assist me in my official duties and aid in bringing into the good roads fund quickly the money due it. Every cent collected for automobile licenses goes into the roads fund to be used in paying off the bonds and interest and in building roads. Automobile drivers who fail to comply with the law, therefore, are hampering to that extent the highway program."

Indications from early receipts, the secretary says, are that more than $8,500,000 will be collected in automobile fees this year.

Building Scenery.

New Jersey is nothing if not resourceful. The state is going to undertake building scenery as well as roads. Nature architects will be set to work remodeling the highways to please the eye of nature lovers. Aside from the joy of driving through landscaped and deeply shaded lanes, the value of the shade as a shield from burning suns and rainfalls will benefit financially.

VOICE OF THE MOTORIST

CHAMPIONS AUTO SHOW.

Automobile Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE: Dear Sir: I am forced to take issue with the rather sweeping condemnation of the national automobile show as an institution, as published recently in the trade press.

To my mind the national show is one of the most valuable factors for trade promotion in the entire industry. It is a sound business enterprise, yielding rich returns in the promotion of sales both at the show and in its immediate wake. Through its successful development, year after year, it has come to be the outstanding motor car event of the year. Motor car enthusiasts look forward to it for months, awaiting with the keenest interest what it may disclose in the way of developments of engineering, in motor vogue, and in refinements and improvements in cars with which they already are familiar.

At the national automobile show all the latest achievements of this industry are seen in tangible form. Side by side they are ranged for the inspection of the prospective car buyer. Here he can subject the various types of cars to careful scrutiny and intelligent comparison. All the vast fortunes that every motor car plant spend year after year in engineering, in laboratory research in tests, are represented in the complete product thus displayed.

The general appeal of this method of displaying cars is apparent from the throngs that attend. The visitors pay a substantial admission charge; they endure the discomforts of dense congestion; at times they wait for hours to gain admission—still they come, and study, and learn by personal observation what the trade holds to interest them and to meet their particular requirements.

I cannot close without pointing out what to me was a highly significant feature of the show just closed—the intelligent discussion and the often constructive criticism that emanated from the throngs continuously pressing about the displays of stripped chassis. It is unquestionably true that the automobile has developed in America a generation of mechanics, men who have at least a fundamental understanding of "what makes the wheels go round." While the increasing trend toward closed cars brings corresponding interest in body lines, upholstery fittings, finish, and appointments, there can be no serious doubt as to the earnest, intelligent appreciation of the mechanical side of the motor car on the part of the show patrons. E. O. TRAVIS, General Sales Manager Locomibile Company of America, Inc.

BUYS BODY PLANT

Announcement was made Friday that General Motors, Inc., has purchased for $2,000,000 the entire body business and plant of the Milburn Wagon company of Toledo. Under the terms of the deal the Milburn company will retain its electric car business.

Another Gas Tax.

The Alabama senate last week passed the 2 cent gasoline tax bill, giving 50 per cent of the revenue to the state treasury and the remaining half to be divided equally among the counties of the state for the upkeep of the roads.

The bill provides for a 2 cent tax on each gallon of gasoline sold in the state. It passed the house and now goes to the governor for approval.

Roads for Trucks

More and more the truck is becoming not so much a competitor as an auxiliary of the railroads. The truck takes care of the short haul and the lighter commodities, as a rule. But if the truck is to be one of the manifestations of the motor age, as seems certain, there must be truck roads—great paved highways, connecting farm and market. In the past there has been complaint that trucks destroyed roads. This probably was due to the fact that the roads were not built to withstand the "punishment" of heavily laden trucks. Roads now projected by the Missouri state highway commission will be so constructed as to accommodate both the truck and the passenger vehicle.

TO CLEAN TIRE.

A simple way to clean off a tire, removing stones from the tread design as well, is to jack up the car, place a pan filled with water or gasoline beneath the wheel, then turn it slowly, while scrubbing off.

More Truck Farms.

The establishment of better highways in Missouri has started a wide movement for small farms near the large markets of the state, in the opinion of Chief Engineer Piepmeier of the Missouri state highway commission.

He foresees large farms divided into small tracts of land and attention paid to truck farming. A large percentage of the farmers who now own large tracts of land near the big cities realize that good roads, over which they can reach the markets quickly at all seasons, will afford profits in the future more certain from cultivation of small tracts of land than from cultivation of a large tract for a single crop. There always is a market for the products of miscellaneous crops and fruits of all kinds, and it has happened a great many times in Missouri that the farmers who planted large acreages of grain did not make both ends meet because of low markets.

No Rolls-Royce has ever worn out

AN entire understanding of its qualities comes only to the man who has owned or driven his Rolls-Royce for ten or fifteen years or longer. . . . A Rolls-Royce costs practically nothing for repairs. It is not unusual to drive it ten years without an overhauling. . . . Given the benefit of new coach work, a Rolls-Royce, even after ten or fifteen years of service, retains the beauty and grace of line for which it is distinguished. . . . The first Rolls-Royce delivered in America, more than twenty years ago, is still in use and is a motor car distinctive in appearance and performance. . . . The Rolls-Royce is not an exclusive car, it is not a luxury; it is the result of unremitting effort to achieve perfection.

A PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

3 New Features

1—Standard Three Bank Keyboard The arrangement of the letters on the New Oliver is like that of all other standard typewriters. But by placing the numerals on the same bank as the top row of letters the extra bank is eliminated, making a neater and more compact machine. Make no mistake: this three bank standard keyboard has its advantages. Furthermore, every trained typist can operate the New Oliver without preliminary training. (Read below.)

2—Extra Quiet Action The action of the New Oliver is practically silent. Operating this new machine is a pleasure. The rattle and bang of the old-fashioned typewriter has been largely eliminated. (Read below.)

3—Velvet-like Touch The touch of the New Oliver is the lightest of any typewriter made. No heavy pounding of keys. The slightest touch on a key creates a good clear impression. The quick action and the light touch permit a speed far greater than the possibilities of human hands. (Read below.)

4—Durability The New Oliver is made in that same ultra-durable way as other models of this famous typewriter. For many years the Oliver has been known as the most durable of all typewriters, lowest upkeep, lowest cost for repairs, longest life. You can hardly wear it out. (Read below.)

5—Price The New Oliver is sold on the same money-saving plan as other models. We seek to give the public the lowest possible prices. Hence our remarkable offer. (Read below.)

Here is the latest and greatest of all typewriters. Send now for complete details on this wonderful new 1923 machine and our money-saving offer. The New Oliver—"The Quiet Speedster"—is the crowning achievement of 28 years' experience in building typewriters.

And as a matter of convenience for experienced typists, we have now on this new model chosen the standard keyboard—absolutely standard three-bank type. Every operator, whether now using three- or four-bank standard, can master this board instantly, without loss of time or output.

Since the first Oliver—the original visible writer—was brought out, there has followed a succession of improvements that revolutionized the building of typewriters. And now comes, most remarkable of all, Model 11, "The Quiet Speedster." This new 1923 model represents the best typewriter you can buy anywhere, at any price.

The dream of typewriter manufacturers has at last been realized—a typewriter utterly durable, yet almost silent in its action. In striving for this goal many typewriters have lost in speed possibilities and durability what they gained in more silent action.

But in the New Oliver nothing was sacrificed. Because we have invented an action that is new—the machine, besides being silent, is speedier than ever, and years of durability have been added.

And never was a machine more durable than the Oliver. Why? The reason is simplified construction. By building upon correct basic mechanical principles the Oliver requires only about 800 parts. Some machines have as many as 2500, or three times as many parts to wear or get out of order. No frail bearings. No hairsprings. No flimsy wires. No wood. No welding.

Is it any wonder that the Oliver lasts longer and requires less care than any other machine? When you buy an Oliver you have it for constant and steady use. No heavy repair bills. No loss of time waiting to have it fixed up.

That is why busy stenographers and typists who know have long preferred the Oliver. In homes and small offices, this point is even more important, especially when far removed from repair shops.

Oliver is the first and only typewriter to achieve permanent alignment of written letters. This is due to the double or U-shaped type-bar, the most prized feature in the typewriter world. This mechanical principle makes it impossible for the Oliver to get out of alignment.

The New Bi-Manual Duplex Shift Multiplies Speed—Touch Writing 100% Easier

The New Oliver Speedster has the same arrangement of keys as all other standard typewriters. Thus any typist can operate the Oliver without loss of speed or output.

But the Oliver keyboard besides being universal, excels all others because with but 28 type-keys it gives the operator control over 84 alphabet letters, punctuation marks and commercial signs. The average typewriter requires the typist to operate 38 to 42 keys to obtain the same results.

Oliver's simplified keyboard is far the easier to operate and the quickest. A special Figure Shift Key controls all numerals and signs. Another shift key controls all CAPITALS. The two shift keys together form what we term the Duplex Shift.

On previous models this Duplex Shift was located on the left side of the keyboard only. On the Extra-Capacity Oliver it is located on both right and left sides. This arrangement automatically increases the operator's speed because the shift can always be operated by the fingers of the hand least engaged. By enabling the operator to shift from small letters to CAPITALS or Figures with either hand, this feature increases the ease of touch writing 100%. We call it the Bi-Manual Duplex Shift—and it is winning hosts of expert writers from rival machines.

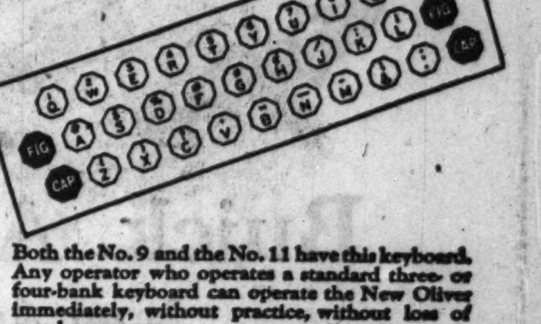
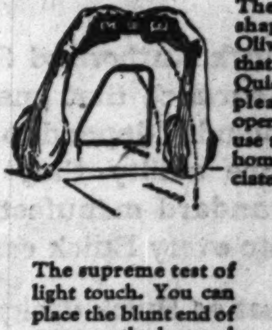
The New Oliver Quiet Speedster will be sold on the same money-saving plan adopted five years ago. This marvelous new model has no equal in the typewriter field and is easily worth $100 and more. But, because of high manufacturing efficiency, and because we have no money-eating branch offices and organizations. And, above all, because of perfection in mechanical design, we make a simpler machine (serving you better because it is simpler). We can afford to sell it for less (costing us less because it is simpler). All savings thus made are passed on to you. You get the benefit of these economies, you get absolutely the best typewriter made, and at a price less than even rebuilt machines are sold for.

If there ever was a machine worth $100.00, and more, it is the New Oliver Quiet Speedster. What business man will refuse to save money (over $50 on the No. 9, or more than $30 on the No. 11), when his stenographer instantly can use this standard three-bank Oliver? Oliver No. 9, the same as the New Model less a few of the more recent improvements, (the Model No. 9 with new standard three-bank keyboard) is sold at the remarkable price of $55 less 10% for cash. Thus you can get an absolutely new high grade typewriter at a saving of more than $50, or a No. 11 at more than $30 saving.

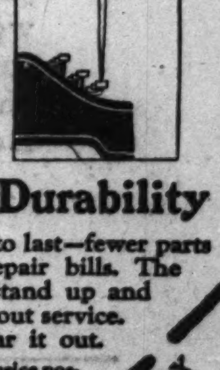
Note the Universal Keyboard on the New Oliver



Both the No. 9 and the No. 11 have this keyboard. Any operator who operates a standard three- or four-bank keyboard can operate the New Oliver immediately, without practice, without loss of speed or output.



The action and the U-shaped type-bar of the Oliver are so nearly quiet that operating the New Quiet Speedster is a real pleasure. Dictaphone operators, and those who use their typewriters at home, particularly appreciate this feature.



The supreme test of light touch. You can place the blunt end of a pen on the key and with your finger on the pen point move the key without hurting the finger.

Price and Durability

The Oliver is made to last—fewer parts—eliminate costly repair bills. The Oliver is made to stand up and give day in and day out service. You can hardly wear it out.

And sold at the lowest price possible. Compare the Oliver, point for point, with any other machine—then see if you can match the rock-bottom price of the New Oliver.

Illinois Farmers Meet Paved Roads with Clean Homes

Women Launch Campaign to Beautify Entire Countryside.

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Paved roads are given the credit for a notable transformation in the appearance of many farm homes and surrounding premises in central Illinois.

Inspired by the construction of the concrete highway and the passing of many thousand additional vehicles, agriculturists are, in numerous instances, rehabilitating their property. The drab, somber, and unkempt appearance that marked many rural residences and grounds, has been replaced by a complete rejuvenation. Hedge fences and those of wood are being removed; decrepit buildings are being torn down, while others are being painted, or new structures erected. Concrete driveways and walks have been laid from the porch or barn to connect with the pavement. Attention is being paid to the lawns, the planting of trees, shrubbery, and flowers, and, in other ways, the premises are being improved.

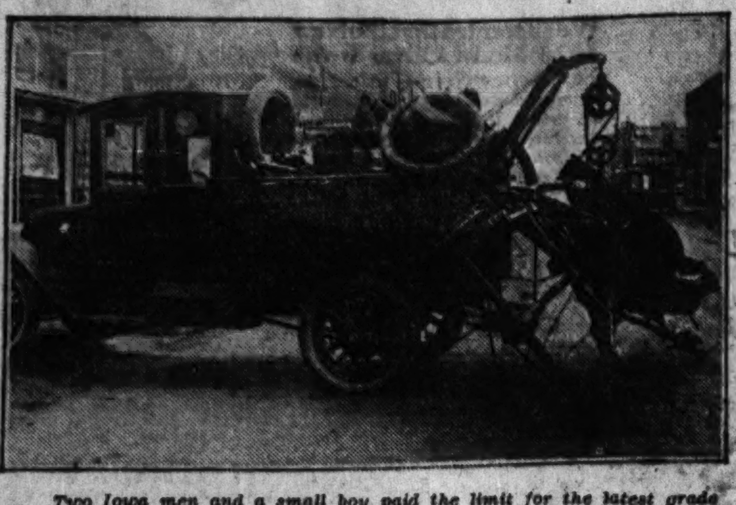
Those who make frequent trips over the rural highways of this section of the state have commented upon the interesting evolution from the old-time front yard to a neat, well kept, and inviting entrance. The pride that many urban residents take in their homes is now extending to the rural districts and tourists from distant points, who have occasion to travel over the hard roads of central Illinois during the coming year will have little to criticize in the appearance of the farms that line the rural boulevards.

Wives of farmers who belong to welfare organizations and who meet at the country schoolhouses to discuss subjects of mutual interest, are credited with much of the activity that is being exhibited in the farm beautiful campaign. A good natured rivalry has developed and many families who never previously gave much attention to this question, are now taking a pride in their homes and devoting much time and expense to the improvement.

In a good many instances, landlords are said to be responsible for the run-down condition of farm and buildings. In such cases committees from the neighborhood have been appointed to call upon such landlords and exert pressure upon them to make improvements uniform with others along the new pavement. In many instances this has been found effective.

Following the improvement of the farms along the boulevards will come efforts to clean up the right of way along the new roads. Dead trees, piles of refuse, and other unsightly débris, will be removed. It is proposed to plant trees, shrubbery, and flowers, and otherwise carry out a scheme of landscaping.

AFTER THE RACE



Two Iowa men and a small boy paid the limit for the latest grade crossing contest between automobile and express train near Hampton. Above is the remains of the touring car after the fatal accident. It will be exhibited as another argument for grade crossing carefulness.

Football Cops.

Gridiron battles with end runs, skin tackle plays, and bucking the line at center require a maximum of nerve and brawn that just about makes up the requisites of an ideal motor cop. This is just the type of young manhood that Police Chief Jenning of Toledo is utilizing in the building up of the motorcycle division in his department, which has recently been enlarged with the addition of thirty-two motorcycles and ten side cars.

Eight former Waite and Scott High school stars, heroes of many a grid contest a few years back, who have been selected from an eligible civil service list of fifty-two, are now in training and woe betide the speedster when these boys get into action, throwing overhead passes in the form of a police court summons.

THE TURNING WORLD.

Turn, turn, my wheel, turn round and round
Without a pause, without a sound.
So spins the flying world away!
This clay, well mixed with marl and sand,
Follows the motion of my hand;
For some must follow and some command,
Though all are made of clay!

Flood of Orders and Rail Tangles Stir Auto Makers

Factories Issue Warning of Car Shortage This Spring.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—From Detroit manufacturers goes a note of warning to those contemplating the purchase of a new car this spring. Buying within the next two months they predict, is destined to break several records, while the present buying has caused prospects of a serious shortage well into the summer months.

One year ago the sales to persons who had never before owned a car amounted to 40 per cent, and this year the prediction is freely made that nothing less than 1,500,000 will satisfy the demand for automobiles for replacement business alone.

The great volume of business during the last two or three months of 1922 continued well up to the monthly average for the whole year and kept factories busy producing for immediate sale. None of the cars built at that time were stored for the early trade of 1923, as is usually done, so the present year began with bare floors and storerooms, which necessitates practically a capacity production at the present time to satisfy the immediate demand and prepare for the flood of business that is sure to engulf the plants within the next three months.

All signs point to another serious problem in the expeditious delivery of the finished product at a definite time. It is already apparent to manufacturers that unless the railroads develop a stronger "come-back" than is expected, the automobile dealer is sure to experience difficulty in receiving the cars his schedule calls for. As conditions now exist, there probably will be considerable dissatisfaction and annoyance to prospective buyers, especially those who must depend on railroads for deliveries of their cars.

To illustrate the present freight conditions it is cited that right now 15,000 freight cars are tied up in Detroit yards. Fifteen large industrial concerns are barred from receiving more freight until this congestion is broken, and many factories of Detroit and elsewhere are facing shutdowns unless this situation can be relieved. In Toledo the condition is even worse. Hundreds of cars, loaded with raw material for the building of automobiles are standing on the tracks of that city waiting to be hauled to Detroit, Flint, Pontiac, and Lansing. When their final destination is reached, these cars are reloaded with passenger cars and trucks.

With the passenger car market running strong, increased activity with truck builders is apparent. Factory operations are being speeded up in anticipation of an increased demand with the opening of spring. The Road Builders' Congress, recently held in Chicago, is sure to have a pronounced effect on the sale of trucks. Demands continue good for motor busses and rail cars.

ADDS TO FAMILY

Another new Durant product has been announced, to be known, at least for the present, as the Star Special. It will be a low priced car, to be built in Flint, Mich. As yet nothing definite as to price has been announced.

Durant plans call for an output of 375,000 cars in 1923 and nothing below 400,000 in 1924.

GOSSIP of the AUTO TRADE

JAMES J. LAKE has resigned as sales manager for Edwards & Crist company, 2239 Michigan avenue, distributors of Auburn cars, in order to open his own Auburn sales headquarters at Jackson boulevard and Kedzie avenue. W. M. Cratty, general manager, has taken charge of the sales division for Edwards & Crist.

The thirteenth annual technical and repair school has been opened by the Cadillac Motor Car company in Detroit. The school is held every year to instruct Cadillac mechanics from all section of the country in the proper care and adjustment of Cadillas parts.

Following the official denial made during show week that W. C. Durant controls the newly organized De Jon Electric corporation, officials of the company have completed their organization by gathering together in the Poughkeepsie plant a number of the leading electrical engineers of the automobile industry. Officers and directors of the much talked of corporation include C. O. Miniger, president; D. H. Kelly, vice president; R. J. Skinner, secretary-treasurer, and E. T. Affleck and Percy H. Johnston, directors.

Louis Disbrow, dean of racers, tested the new Stutz six on the frozen Indianapolis speedway last week and reported that the car maintained a speed of seventy miles an hour for twenty laps of the oval without in any way straining the motor. The test was made under adverse weather conditions.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker has drawn another comrade of his early days into his Detroit organization through the appointment of Harold S. Pfister of Chicago as member of the Rickenbacker sales promotion department. Pfister's headquarters will be in Detroit.

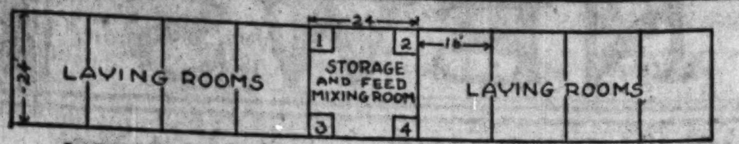
FARM AND GARDEN

His 3,000 Hens Work All Year Without Holiday

By Frank Ridgway.



LABOR SAVING ARRANGEMENT OF LAYING ROOMS—The outline above shows the convenient arrangement of the laying house on James A. Dorill's poultry farm, Leasburg, Mo. Four laying rooms, 16x24 feet, holding 600 birds each, on each side of the feed room save hundreds of steps in feeding and watering the flock and gathering the eggs. The four compartments in the feed room are used for storing feed and equipment. One, mash bin; two, corn bin; three, egg packing room, and, four, egg case storage.

CATERING to the whims and fancies of 3,000 hustling Leghorn hens and delivering the eggs almost before they get cold to consumers eighty miles away, is a man sized job. That's James A. Dorrill's job on his poultry ranch a Leesburg, Mo.

JAMES A. DORRILL.

Single handed with houses and equipment arranged uniquely and feeding methods skillfully worked out, he keeps every one of the 3,000 egg factories running at top speed, night and day, the year around.

Before graduating from the University of Missouri ten years ago Mr. Dorrill saw the great need of developing a system of selling fresh eggs direct from the nest to consumers in the large cities of the middle west. He knew this kind of project must be done on a large scale to supply the demands of customers day by day. The eggs must be fresh and supplied either by individual farms or by poultry keepers pooling shipments. Co-operation was in its infancy in Missouri when he completed his college work, so he began to lay plans to establish a business of his own.

Buys Best of Equipment.

All of these years have been spent in installing simple labor saving equipment, breeding a pure bred flock of single Comb White Leghorns, and finding a market for his products. From the 1,500 pullets and 1,500 two year old hens, an average of ninety dozen eggs a day have been produced, gathered, packed, and shipped to various cities throughout the middle west. Most of them have been sold direct to employés in large factories and office buildings in St. Louis.

Mr. Dorrill sells all eggs at a price averaging ten cents a dozen more than local dealers pay and is able to cover the freight from Leasburg to St. Louis, a distance of about eighty miles, and still deliver guaranteed fresh eggs to consumers at retail market prices or less.

In spring practically all of the eggs from the 1,500 two year old birds are sold to breeders for incubation purposes. Thousands of baby chicks are also sold from the Leasburg ranch each season.

"I keep only one breed of chicken, the Single Comb White Leghorn," says Mr. Dorrill. "By so doing I can give all the chickens the same attention. I spend my time studying their wants and needs, and I find that what is good for one is usually good for the others. If I had different breeds, each requiring different treatment, my problems of feeding and management would be complicated.

"I have fifty acres of land, but I buy all feed in carload lots, and spend my time feeding and caring for the flock instead of scattering my efforts by trying to raise crops, too. Managing a poultry plant is a specialized business, especially if an attempt is made to produce eggs in large quantities, and I do not believe it pays to combine it with general farming."

Producing at Maximum.

By concentrating on his birds he keeps the layers producing at maximum. During the coldest weather Missouri had this winter the 1,500 pullets produced about 1,200 eggs a day.

Hundreds of steps are saved each day by having all birds quartered in one laying house, 152 feet long and 24 feet wide. It is divided into eight laying rooms, 16x24 feet, with a feeding room, 24x24. Four laying rooms, furnishing ample space for 600 hens each, are built on the sides of the feed room. Two bins are built in the corners of the feed room, each with a capacity of 6,000 bushels; one is used for mash and the other for corn. In another corner egg cases are stored opposite the egg packing room. This minimizes labor in gathering and packing the eggs.

Each laying room is completely equipped with two V shaped troughs where grains and wet mash are fed, two dry mash hoppers, two water fountains, and an oyster shell box.

"I have learned that by using ordinary thirty dozen egg cases for nests I can save time and labor in gathering eggs and keeping nests clean and free from mites, lice, and other pests," says the manager. "With my dropping boards thirty-two inches above the floor I have plenty of room to set egg cases in rows all over the floor of the laying room. The compartments in the cases are big enough to give hens all the room they need and by having such portable nests they can be removed easily and frequently, and cleaned and disinfected if necessary.

"I also save myself a great amount of labor by buying feeds already mixed. I don't attempt to fatten chickens for the market. I am only interested in hens as layers. When they quit laying I sell them without fattening. Leghorns are not meat birds and I make more money by using feed in the production of eggs, leaving the production of meat birds to the fellow who has birds bred for that purpose.

"As soon as my pullets let up in laying this spring I will start culling. I know them so well that it doesn't take me long to locate the poor layers when I glance over the birds and study the appearance of their heads. The bright eyed, red combed hens are the layers. When I see a hen with a pale, limp comb I'm suspicious enough to lock her in a separate room. I put her on trial and go over her body carefully with my hands, applying all the known culling measurements, to see if she is a slacker. I don't need a trap nest to find out whether or not she is a layer."

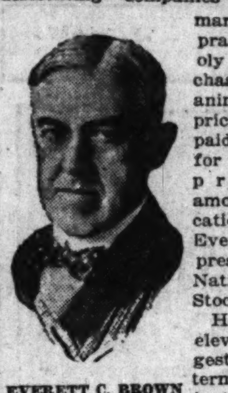
Excess Profits on Dead Animals, Charge

"It is apparent that rendering and desiccating companies in terminal markets have a practical monopoly on the purchasing of dead animals. And the prices now being paid, especially for dead hogs, practically amount to confiscation," declares Everett C. Brown, president of the National Live Stock exchange.



EVERETT C. BROWN

He says that in eleven of the largest live stock terminal markets in the country 25 to 50 cents a hundred is being paid for dead hogs. Chicago pays 75 cents a hundred; Buffalo, N. Y., $1.45 in January and $1.60 in February.

"In other words," adds Mr. Brown, "desiccating plants are paying from 62½ cents to $1.25 for a 250 pound hog; actual tests show that at the present time, desiccating plants are getting approximaely $5 a hundred, including the digester tankage value, or around $12.50 per hog gross. Deducting a liberal estimate for overhead of 25 per cent, there is an apparent net profit on a 250 pound hog of $9."

Mr. Brown recommends that each live stock exchange take immediate and vigorous steps to secure a fair market value for dead animals, and if no relief can be obtained he suggests the matter be reported to and taken up by the packers and stockyards administration for immediate relief.

GARDEN NOTES

It's a good plan to save the old planting chart from year to year. Make it out on ordinary paper, and then paste it on stiff cardboard, so it will withstand the rough usage in the garden at planting time. Dig out the old planting diagram or chart that was used last year, and make a careful study of it before attempting to work out the new plans in detail. Know just what plants were grown in the different rows or parts of the garden last season, and avoid planting the same kind on the soil this year.

By buying vegetable and flower garden seed early you stand a better chance of getting the desired varieties. Then, too, you avoid the rush. So, do your seed shopping early.

There are many flowers listed in the catalogues this year that are so old they are actually new to many. Try some of them.

Gardens are going to be in big demand this spring, and if you haven't rented your plot it's time to get busy. There will not be many left to choose from after the first or the middle of March.

It is hard to teach old gardeners new tricks, and the man who sticks closely to his old list of kinds and varieties of vegetables and flowers is often the loser. Plant breeders are constantly struggling for quality and high yielding characteristics and are bringing out new and improved varieties every season. So much emphasis has been placed on the fact that it doesn't pay gardeners to load up their seed list with novelties that there is danger of worth while varieties getting a slow start with growers. A little corner for experiment purposes is often a valuable thing in the garden where there is room.

Dairy Show at Syracuse.

The 1923 National Dairy show will be held at Syracuse, N. Y., on the New York state fair grounds, according to an announcement of the exposition's executive committee. While it has not been definitely decided, S. H. Anderson of the National Dairy association says the World's Dairy congress will probably have its sessions during the three or four days immediately preceding the show. Throughout the big New York region dairymen are organizing to support the exposition. Officials say that when the new coliseum is built, to accommodate the dairy show, the New York grounds will be the best live stock and industrial exposition plant in the country.

Farmers' Institute Meeting

The Illinois Farmers' institute will hold its twenty-eighth annual convention at Belleville, Ill., Feb. 21, 22, and 23. Among agricultural leaders who will speak are H. A. Wallace, editor of Wallace's Farmer; Dr. D. F. Lucky of the St. Louis live stock exchange, Dean Herbert W. Mumford, Prof. L. E. Card, W. S. Brooks, and Dr. W. L. Burlison of the University of Illinois, and Prof. T. J. Talbert, University of Missouri. Reduced rates of one and one-half fare for round trip from stations in Illinois and St. Louis, Mo., will be offered by railroads.

When You Choose That New Car Why Not Buy

Known Mileage

Aren't miles of satisfying service the one big thing you demand in your next car? Wouldn't you like to buy a car that is sold on this definite basis?

Oakland's new "Mileage Basis" Plan does this very thing. It tells you in terms of smooth, untroubled miles the sort of service an Oakland Six really gives. It presents facts and figures to prove, what owners everywhere are now saying, that it is "the finest light six" that precise, correct manufacture can produce.

Here are minimum mileage figures which careful investigation has shown you can rightfully expect from the essential parts of the 6-44, free from repairs or replacements. Make this Plan and these figures the basis for choosing your new car.

The "Mileage Basis" Plan

Main Bearings—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Valves—15,000 miles or more without need of grinding.
Connecting Rods—40,000 miles or more without attention.
Cylinders, Pistons, Rings—Guaranteed in writing 15,000 miles against "oil pumping."
Gasoline Mileage—20 to 25 miles per gallon.
Tires—15,000 to 25,000 miles per set.
Transmission, axles, and major parts—Life of the car.

START MOVE FOR BETTER YANKEE ARCHITECTURE

Public Taste to Be Raised by Education.

BY AL CHASE.

GEORGE C. NIMMONS.

As a practical first step in a movement for better architecture by the American Institute of Architects, its committee on education, after four years of effort, has produced a new book called "The Significance of Fine Arts" for the schools and colleges and for the general reader also.

"It undertakes," says George C. Nimmons, one of the two Chicago members of the committee on education (the other being Thomas E. Tallmadge), "from a nontechnical and layman's point of view to present the most important and interesting features and principles of architecture and its allied arts in a way that can be most readily understood and most easily acquired.

Movement Just Started.

"The architects of the country, as represented by the American Institute of Architects, have just inaugurated a movement for the improvement of architecture which they regard as the most important and most promising of any ever undertaken by them for this purpose," said Mr. Nimmons.

"It consists of a united effort of this national organization of architects, the Association of American Colleges, and other educational bodies to introduce instruction in architecture and the other fine arts into our schools and colleges, so that every scholar and student shall be taught enough architecture and art to intelligently and properly understand and appreciate them. Coincident with this movement means have been provided whereby older people who have already finished their education may also share in this undertaking.

Must Educate Public.

"It is a fact well recognized by architects that the only way by which our architecture may be materially improved is to educate the client and the public, so that when they come to build they'll demand better buildings and not permit the erection of ugly structures of poor arrangement and bad design.

"The education prescribed now for the architect consists of six years of college training and is more extensive and thorough than any ever required before, and probably equals, if it doesn't exceed in thoroughness and extent, the training of any other professional man.

"The training provided for the future architect is far in advance of that of his client, and the public, as the latter receive little or no training in school and college or architecture or art, even though it is a subject which plays a most important part in their daily lives.

People Determine Standards.

"Architecture never was and never can be to any important extent, an expression of the character of the architect, however well educated he may be. It always has been an expression of the people, because they pay for the buildings and it is their ideas and their standards of what they consider appropriate and beautiful that fix the character of the building in each case.

"Under present conditions, with architecture and the fine arts generally neglected by our schools and colleges, it seems almost hopeless to expect that this country will succeed in producing its own style of architecture appropriate for its buildings and for the great skyscraper construction which it invented, unless the people become interested and improve their own standards of taste up to a level that will make such a growth and development of their art possible."

At the national convention of the Association of American colleges, recently held in Chicago, the first copy of the book was officially presented to its president and plans outlined and discussed for its use in college and its distribution to the people through the book stores of the country.

The Art institute of Chicago, the Metropolitan museum of New York, and American Council of Education, the American Federation of Arts, and other institutions are lending their support.

More Displays Assured.

"Already there promises to be a great increase in the number of displays of beautiful pictures or architecture and works of art," said Mr. Nimmons; "in the number of traveling exhibitions, the distribution of various kinds of literature, and the giving of talks and lectures on architecture and art, of which a series of lectures involving a tour clear across the country by one of the most distinguished authorities is already in progress.

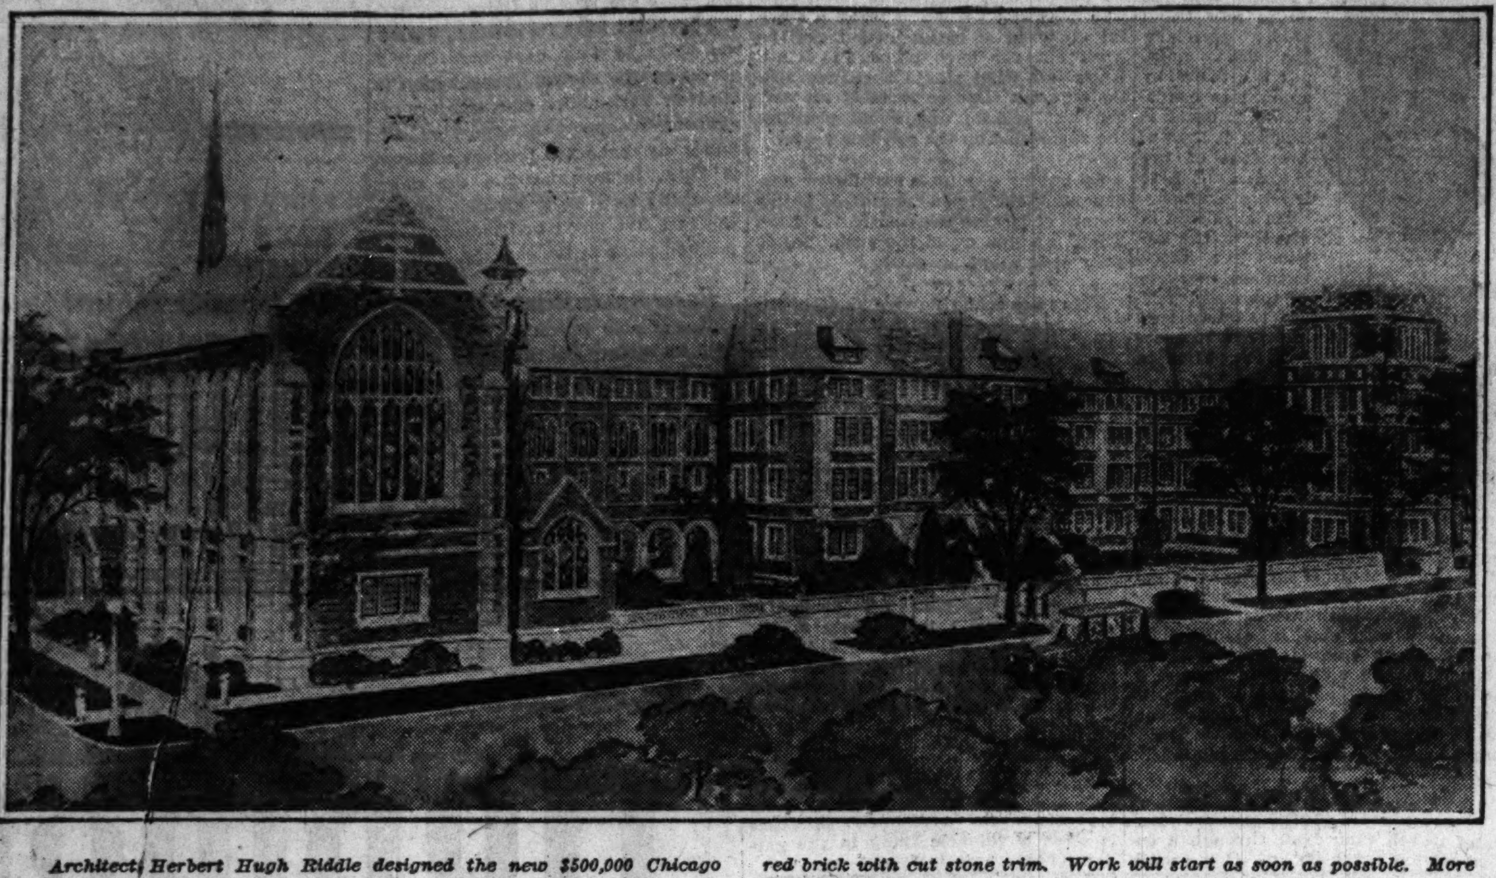
"It appears, therefore, that a movement has been started, with the whole profession of architecture behind it, which, if supported by the people, may lead to the creation of a truly representative American architecture and an American art that will equal if not surpass that of any other nation."

Chapters by Chicagoans.

The book, profusely illustrated and containing 483 pages, contains an introduction by Mr. Nimmons; a chapter on sculpture by Lorado Taft and one on city planning by Edward H. Bennett.

Chapters by artists and architects of other cities include one on classical architecture, by C. Howard Walker of Boston; architecture of the middle ages by Ralph Adams Cram of Boston; the Renaissance by H. Van Buren Magonigle of New York; modern architecture by Paul P. Cret, Philadelphia; painting by Bryson Burroughs, New York; landscape design, F. L. Olmsted, Boston; the industrial arts by Huger Elliott, Philadelphia; music, Thomas Whitney Surette, Concord, Mass., and an epilogue by C. Howard Walker, Boston.

Chicago Theological Seminary's New Home



Architect Herbert Hugh Riddle designed the new $500,000 Chicago Theological seminary to supplant the present four residences on 58th between Woodlawn and University now used by the institution. It will be of red brick with cut stone trim. Work will start as soon as possible. More is told in another column.

HARD STUDY REQUIRED TO MAKE REAL ESTATE BUSINESS A SUCCESS

PAUL STEINBRECHER.

"Success in the real estate calling is based on the possession of certain definite personal qualities, an intensive preparation and training, a broad experience and acquiring a vast amount of technical information," stated Paul Steinbrecher of Paul Steinbrecher & Co., in the first lecture of the second semester of the real estate class of the Central Y. M. C. A School of Commerce, on Tuesday evening.

"The day of the curbstone broker, wanting in education, lacking a true conception of honesty and possessing only a smattering knowledge of locations and values, is forever gone," said Mr. Steinbrecher. "He has disappeared with the barber-surgeon, the unregulated goldsmith, dealer in foreign coins, acting as banker; the lawyer with only a few weeks' study of Blackstone admitting him to the bar and the physician of the early eighties practicing after a two years' course of four or five months' study each year.

"It is now generally observed that the men coming to the front most successfully in all professions, particularly real estate, are the younger men of a high order of intelligence and character, who have been best prepared and most thoroughly trained.

"Strong proof of progress in our calling is the enactment in a constantly increasing number of states of license laws demanding certain qualifications and the growing number of real estate courses being offered in institutions of learning."

Loop Hat Concern Leases Shop on Milwaukee Ave.

The Brothers Hat company has leased a store in the four story building at 1236-38 Milwaukee avenue, from Joseph K. Ferguson, for ten years at a gross rental said to be $70,000. Isador Ferguson & Co., brokers in the deal, have charge of the remodeling and leasing of the building. A. Goldberg, who operates the Brothers Hat company, also has a store on Washington, near Dearborn.

WEST SIDE LEASE TRANSFERRED.

The ninety-nine year lease and building on the triangular corner fronting 72 feet on Ogden, 55 on Van Buren, and 52 on Wood have been transferred for $12,500 by John Rees and others to Mrs. Lillian A. Lewis. Oscar A. Lewis, who represented the buyer, says extensive improvements are planned. Frank Connor represented the sellers.

TURN DOWN MANY EXHIBITORS TO 1923 HOME SHOW

That the standard of the Own Your Home exposition, to be given in the Coliseum next month under the auspices of the Chicago Real Estate board, will be maintained at a high level is evidenced by the announcemnt that already applications for more space than now remains unallotted, have been turned down by the exhibitors' committee and the committee of administration.

"More than 6,000 feet of floor space in excess of that sold at this time last year already have been taken by exhibitors," said Harry Goldstine, president of the realty board.

"The board has set a high standard for exhibitors in order to protect the prospective home builders who will visit the exhibition," Joseph K. Brittain said. "We've limited exhibitors in the houses and home sites section to real estate firms which are members of the National Association of Real Estate boards. In every other section exhibitors must meet the approval of a committee composed of members of the leading trade organizations in its field."

Hayward Co. to Build Plant at Sheffield-Marcy

The R. B. Hayward company, makers of ventilating systems, tanks, etc., now at 849 West Ohio street, has leased the 22,000 square feet at the northwest corner of Sheffield and Marcy from Joseph R. McGlashan, for twenty years at a total net rental of $160,000, and will at once erect a $60,000 one story building from plans by Mundle & Jensen. According to J. H. Van Vlissingen & company, who represented all parties, the valuation of the property, based on the rental, is $1.75 a square foot for the first five years and $2 for the balance. This is said to be a record for the district.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR $500,000 SCHOOL GROUP

Work Starts Soon on Big South Side Seminary.

OZORA S. DAVIS.

Plans have just been completed by Architect Herbert Hugh Riddle for a magnificent new $500,000 home for the Chicago Theological seminary, to be erected on the site of the old residences now occupied by the institution, on the north side of 58th street, between Woodlawn and University avenues. The new group will be directly opposite the new Rockefeller chapel of University of Chicago.

According to President Ozora S. Davis the new seminary will have dormitory accommodation for eighty-two students, with an ultimate capacity for 107. In addition to the dormitory there'll be an office building containing an assembly hall and library. In the dormitory there'll be two chapels.

The seminary is one of the oldest of its kind in the country. It was founded in 1855 and up till 1915 it occupied quarters on Ashland avenue, overlooking Union park. The two most conspicous names identified with the institution in its early days were those of the Rev. G. S. F. Savage and Stephen Peet. Prominent laymen in the early days were Philo Carpenter, Col. C. G. Hammond, and E. W. Blatchford.

The siminary is supported by the Congregational churches of the middle west. Its present board of directors is headed by David Fales. Some of the other members are: Clarence Funk of Oak Park, Henry H. Hilton of Ginn & Co., John R. Montgomery of Montgomery, Hart & Smith, attorneys; Clarence Pellet, insurance; S. W. Chamberlain, and Prof. J. H. Tufts of the University of Chicago. There were 126 students at the seminary last year.

Escaping heat melted the snow on the roof of the house on the left. Note that the snow remains over the eaves where no heat came through. The roof of the house on the right is insulated with FLAXLINUM. No heat escapes. A striking illustration of fuel wasted and fuel saved.

Two Roofs—With a Lesson for Every Home-Builder

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.

For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets 1 inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.

As you walk down any residential street in snowy weather, you will see many roofs with the snow melted as on the house at the left in the picture above.

No matter how pleasing and attractive these houses may be, you will find that they waste coal—very likely, too, that they are uncomfortable houses in the extremes of winter and summer. The melted patch on the roof means that a large percentage of the heat from the furnace goes out through the uninsulated roof, instead of warming the house.

When you build, make sure that your house will conserve fuel and be comfortable the year 'round. Insulate the walls and roof with FLAXLINUM. It works on the principle of the Thermos bottle, sealing up the interior of your home and making it impervious to outside temperatures, hot or cold.

The saving FLAXLINUM makes in fuel bills pays for it in a few years. Thousands of home-owners throughout the Northwest have been using FLAXLINUM for twelve years—and every one satisfied. Come in or send for booklet showing sample of FLAXLINUM and telling all about FLAXLINUM.

$3,000,000 IN BUILDINGS FOR NORTHWEST SIDE

50 Stores and 400 Flats in Two Blocks.

Thirty-five years ago, St. Viator's Normal institute bought sixteen acres at the intersection of Milwaukee, School, and Crawford for $20,000. Three years later, however, real estate men persuaded them to sell the north six acres, fronting on Milwaukee and running from Crawford to Karlov, for $20,000, thus retaining the balance of ten acres as profit.

Yesterday George W. Prassas bought these ten acres for a price said to have been in the neighborhood of $250,000 and announces plans for improving the entire tract with a group of buildings to contain about 400 apartments, fifty stores, and a 200 car garage. The estimated cost is placed at about $3,000,000. Jens J. Jensen is the architect for the entire project.

The ten acre tract is bounded by Belmont, Karlov, and Crawford avenues and School street. There are car lines in Crawford and Belmont.

St. Viator's institute, it is reported by Mr. Prassas, will take its quarter of a million profit and build a new home in some outlying community, probably Kankakee.

CHICAGOAN LAYS OUT NEW CITY IN NEW MEXICO

George O. Garnsey, one of Chicago's oldest architects, has been commissioned by the National Bonding and Developing company, to build a new city on the old United States military reservation on the Santa Fé railroad, 150 miles south of the city of Santa Fé, N. M. There'll be a hotel, theater, school, railroad station, factory, two churches, a business block, and about twenty-five bungalows to start with.

"Work will be carried on as fast as the plans can be perfected," said Mr. Garnsey. "All of the buildings will be modern and substantial."

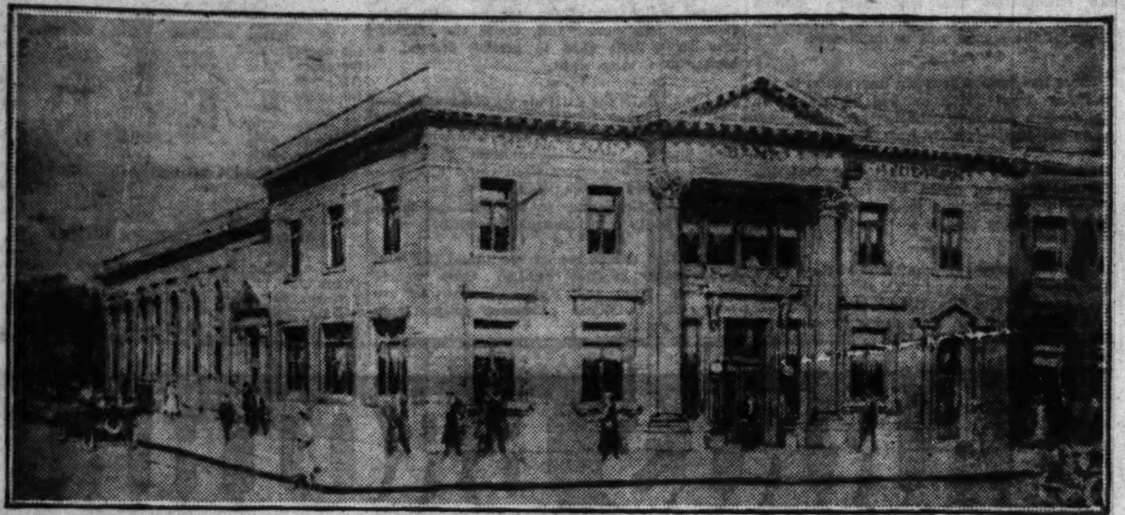
Architect Crowen Sells North State Residence

The George B. Harris residence, at 1431 North State parkway, purchased two years ago by Architect S. N. Crowen and extensively remodeled by him, yesterday was sold by Mr. Crowen to James W. Morrisson of the Fuller-Morrisson company, wholesale drugs, for $40,000. A. R. Tressler, of Rowe & Whitman, handled the deal.

Marquette Healy, of Lyon & Healy, has been occupying the house since last fall. Mrs. Morrisson is going to Europe, and about the middle of April Mr. and Mrs. Morrisson will move into their new home. The lot is 25x130.

Mr. Tressler also recently sold the three flat building at 55 East Oak for Laura Dean Hildebrand to Ernest I. Mitchell for $35,000. Mr. Tressler sold this same property nine years ago for $12,000, which shows how Gold Coast values are soaring.

Hyde Park's First National Bank



Above is how the new home of the recently organized National Bank of Hyde Park will look when completed. You'll have a hard time recognizing this as the one time Beach movie theater building at the northeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Harper avenue, across from the Hyde Park hotel. Architect Z. Erol Smith has designed a banking floor 55x125. There'll be room for 10,000 safe deposit boxes. The alterations will cost $100,000. The bank will use the entire building and will open for business about May 1. John R. Burgess, in the bond business, will be president. John F. Wallace of John F. Wallace & Co., realtors, will be vice president. These two, with Earl K. Stitt of Cooper, Stitt & Co., form the organization committee of the new bank.

Plan Building for Home for Convalescent Women

The Chicago Home for Convalescent Women and Children, now at 1516 West Adams street, has just bought the old residence of Mrs. Mary Allen Morgan on the north side of Washington boulevard, 266 feet west of Talman avenue, for $15,000. Mrs. W. D. McIlvaine, president of the home, admitted that a new building was to be built, but said details would not be given out till later. The site fronts 154 feet on Washington and extends through 193 feet to Park avenue, where it has a frontage of 138 feet.

Plan Sinclair Oil Station Opposite New Ford Plant

Sinclair Oil interests have bought four lots at 130th and Brainard from Lonnquist, Driver & Co. for $13,000, to be used for an oil station. This is the last of the business property on the south side of 130th street in the new Ford City subdivision of Lonnquist, Driver & Co.

C. E. Fox Buys Washington Park Warehouse; $165,000

Charles E. Fox of J. J. Carroll & Co., has bought the five story Washington Park Fireproof warehouse at the northeast corner of Cottage Grove and 52d, 100x120, from the F. W. Matthiessen estate, for an indicated $165,000. Albert H. Wetten & Co., associated with J. W. Dooley & Co., made the sale.

SEED MILLERS BUY WAREHOUSE.

H. C. Knoke & Co., manufacturers of feed and seed millers, who have been at the southwest corner of Halsted and Superior for the last forty years, bought from the Beckley-Ralston company the property at 5730 West Roosevelt road, with 45,000 square feet of ground and a two story warehouse, etc., for $85,000. E. H. List, associated with Louis B. Beardslee & Co., negotiated the deal.

PLANS AUTO DISPLAY ROOMS.

Charles Grede has bought from David Warsaw a site fronting seventy feet on both Elston and Lawrence, with a depth of 200 feet, for a reported $21,000, and will improve with a garage and auto display rooms. Charles J. Edenberg of the Hodel Realty Co. was broker.

At the monthly meeting of the Chicago real estate board on Wednesday, J. W. Belanger announced that within two weeks he expected to have rent insurance available for realtors. GRAIN MARKETS REMAIN BULLISH; VALUES BOOSTED

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish enthusiasm dominated the grain markets, and while there was heavy evening up for over the double holiday, September wheat and oats and all deliveries of corn advanced to a new high for the season and the close was about the top. Wheat gained ⅝@1⅝c, corn ⅜@⅝c, oats ⅝c, and rye ½@⅝c.

Grain values were on the upgrade the greater part of the week, and with lessened selling pressure and a strong belief that the foreign situation would change for the better, the advance was rather easily attained, with the best prices of the week made yesterday. For the week wheat was up 2¼@2⅞c, corn 2⅛@3⅛c, oats 1¼@1⅝c, and rye 1⅝c. Lard gained 15c, while ribs were very dull and 7½c higher to 2½c lower.

East Buys May Wheat.

Houses with eastern connections were persistent buyers of May wheat and while around $1.22 early there was free selling by scattered longs, the surplus in the pit was finally absorbed and prices advanced rapidly. Toward the last there was free buying by a commission house which was attributed to a large local short, which put May to $1.23, or within 3¾c of the outside figure on the crop. July at $1.15½ was within 1c of the outside price of the season. Foreigners bought September wheat early.

Strength in Liverpool, which was up ⅛@⅛d, and the better news from abroad, with the marked change in sentiment which has been noted of late, were the bullish influences. There was export business in wheat at seaboard with some sales to Denmark.

May Corn Leads Advance.

With a letup in sales of cash corn to arrive from the country, May corn showed more strength than the deferred deliveries and at one time was only ⅛c under the July, although closing ¼c under. Bullish sentiment was strongly in evidence, and while there was heavy profit taking early offerings were quickly absorbed, and the finish was ⅛@¼c under the best prices of the season. Purchases to arrive were estimated at around 1,000,000 bu. Exporters were after corn here with bids within ¼c of a working basis.

Speculative interest in oats broadened considerably, with a strong commission house active on the buying side and July and September sold at a new high for the season and the May within 1⅝c of the top. Scattered longs were the best sellers.

Less Pressure on Rye.

There was a letup in the selling pressure on rye and, with wheat strong, an advance was easily attained, although the spread between May rye and wheat widened to around 33½c at the last. Export demand was rather slow. Two northwestern markets received 75 cars.

Provisions were dull, but the undertone was firm in sympathy with an advance of 3d in lard in Liverpool and the strength in grains. Lard closed unchanged to 2½c higher and ribs 2½c higher to 5c lower. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the winter season to date aggregates 2,493,000, against 1,853,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of around 100,000 bu Manitoba wheat were reported at the seaboard, with Denmark taking a small quantity. A little business was put through in corn.

Chicago cash handlers sold 25,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn, and 75,000 bu oats to the domestic trade.

No change was noted in cash wheat premiums here, with No. 2 red 14@16c over May and No. 2 hard 1½c over to 3c under May. Receipts, 28 cars. Outside markets unchanged to 1c higher.

Offerings of cash corn were fair, but sold readily, with the basis firm as compared with May. No. 2 grades brought ⅝@1½c under the future, No. 3 grades 2¼@2¾c under, and No. 4 grades 2⅝@3½c under May. Receipts, 209 cars. Outside markets unchanged to ½c higher.

Demand for cash oats was only fair, with No. 2 white May to ½c under and No. 3 white ⅝@1½c under the May. Receipts, 50 cars.

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

With American grain markets closed Monday, a number of scattered longs in wheat evened up for the double holiday early, but the buying throughout the day was of an excellent class, and the finish was at the highest prices on the present upturn. Sentiment continues decidedly bullish, and, while many of the local traders are bearish, there is a growing belief in some quarters that a big bull market is getting under way, with a few anticipating that last year's almost straight advance of 46⅝c from the inside figure of the season will be duplicated.

There has been a growing impression in the last few days that a marked betterment in the foreign political situation can be expected in the immediate future. Export demand [illegible] to revive, and messages from the seaboard indicated that distressed wheat on ocean passage was being cleaned up rapidly, and foreigners are expected to commence buying for March shipment.

Corn bulls were very confident of their position after the close, and with all deliveries in new ground, and the outside trade rapidly broadening, they can see nothing except higher prices. Country sales of cash corn to arrive proved to be larger than expected, the late advance increasing offerings materially, and it is expected that fairly liberal purchases will be made over the double holiday. A material increase in the receipts is looked for around the close days of the week, as the bulk of the purchases were for shipment between Feb. 10 and 28.

Bull leadership is apparently developing in oats, and some of the leading commission houses are talking higher prices. It is the general belief that there are no large outstanding long lines, and, while the market may be a little slow in getting started, a higher level is in sight.

"Up to date the attitude of foreigners has not made much impression on the markets of any of the surplus wheat countries, and they may be compelled to make their purchases at higher prices than those now prevailing," said Charles Sincere & Co. "A change for the better in the political situation ought to bring increased buying."

Argentine cables report continued dry and hot weather in that country. Crop reports on corn from the Northern districts are poor and in other provinces range from fair to good.

· PRODUCE · MARKETS ·

Butter showed a rather easy undertone with prices here unchanged to ½c lower. Receipts, 8,603 tubs.

No change was noted in live poultry, and with receipts 1 car the market cleaned up readily.

Offerings of fresh eggs continue liberal, and with a slow demand prices were 1c lower on choice. Receipts, 13,894 cases.

While receipts of potatoes were light, the demand was rather slow and Wisconsin round white sold mainly at 80@85c per 100 lbs, a decline of 5@10c. Receipts, 26 cars.

"The MEETING PLACE is the MARKET PLACE"

FROM the very beginning of business, the meeting place—where the people congregate in large numbers—has always been the market place, where they buy—goods or expert services.

IT is estimated that 5,400,000 people enter this building to attend lodges, conventions, clubs, etc., every year. More people than live in Indiana and Wisconsin, combined.

Capitol Building
(FORMERLY the MASONIC TEMPLE)

FACTS and figures can not be successfully controverted—it is indisputably true that here in Chicago, the meeting place in the vortex of business is the Capitol Building, Chicago's most desirably situated building for high grade shops and offices.

IS your business location of the best? Is your volume satisfactory? Are you gaining prestige? If not, follow the path that leads to prosperity—house your business in the Capitol Building—in the heart of everything. Big sums being spent in permanent betterments. Desirable space now available to those who act quickly. Rents are reasonable.

Wipe Out Social Diseases Or They Will Wipe Us Out!

THAT, in effect, is the warning being issued by state boards of health and municipal authorities throughout the United States.

It is a warning which we must heed. Recent investigations, conducted by local authorities, disclose the startling fact that, at a very conservative estimate, there are no less than 250,000 Chicagoans who are afflicted with "social" diseases.

That the elimination of "social" diseases is one of the most serious problems confronting us today, is given additional emphasis in some recently compiled statistics. These diseases exact a yearly toll of 300,000 lives in the United States. In decreased efficiency they cost industry in this country upwards of $300,000,000 a year.

One of these diseases is responsible for 80 out of every 100 babies being born dead. Locomotor ataxia has its origin in this disease. Paresis, many cases of insanity, paralysis, heart disease, weak and diseased children are traceable to the same cause. In many cases the other disease causes sterility, rheumatism, blindness in infants, chronic joint disease and lifelong sickness.

In view of these appalling facts and figures, it is obvious that the wiping out of these diseases is a gigantic undertaking. It is equally obvious that treatment facilities and preventive information must be made easily and readily available.

For more than two years the Public Health Institute has been waging relentless warfare against "social" diseases. During that time it has made remarkable headway. Its ministrations have steadily increased in number until now its staff of physicians are treating approximately 800 men, women and children every week day—a monthly total of more than 20,000.

If you are one of the 250,000 Chicagoans afflicted with a "social" disease, the Public Health Institute is ready to help you as it has helped these thousands of others.

You need not worry about the cost. The Institute was organized by the broad-minded, public-spirited citizens named below and, under their direction, is operated not for profit, but in the interest of public health—to exert its utmost efforts towards wiping out social diseases. To this end the Institute is vigorously carrying forward its campaign of enlightenment and work of prevention and cure—the only means through which final elimination can be brought about. In order, therefore, that the benefits of the Institute may be as far reaching as possible, the fees are made very low. No one need stay away because of immediate lack of money.

Neither do you have to worry about being embarrassed in calling at the Institute. The utmost possible privacy is assured at all times.

Each patient, upon registering, receives a numbered card and thenceforward calls for his record by number only. Forty individual treatment rooms insure prompt attention.

The facilities of the Public Health Institute are unequaled. Patients are examined and treated by thoroughly trained, skilled physicians, whose broad experience in treating these diseases is the best assurance that can be given that every case coming under their care will be treated according to the most approved methods known to medical science. The Institute maintains, as an auxiliary, one of the most completely equipped laboratories in America for its special work, where every diagnosis is verified by exact chemical, bacteriological and serological tests.

Women and children are examined and treated by a woman physician thoroughly trained in this work. The women's department is located on a different floor from the men's department and is equipped to meet the special requirements of women and children patients. Trained nurses are in constant attendance to minister to their increased comfort.

If you come to the Institute you will find those in attendance kindly and sympathetic; you will return to your work with a heavy burden lifted, for you will know that the best that medical science and conscientious effort affords is at work to get you well.

If from any cause whatsoever you have reason to suspect infection from a "social" disease we urge the importance of an immediate examination. Even a day's delay is dangerous—not only to the patient, but also to those near and dear to him.

You can have the utmost confidence in the treatment if you but follow the advice of the Institute's physicians. The very first treatment many times helps to arrest the disease, and from then on it is simply a matter of gradual but sure eradication. One visit to the Institute will clear away your doubts and your worries.

PITTSBURGH PLUS IS TERMED PRICE JUGGLING SYSTEM

BY C. B. GLASSCOCK.

Accepting the opportunity due to the week-end and holiday adjournment of the federal trade commission's hearing on "Pittsburgh plus," W. E. McCollum, secretary of the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers, yesterday discussed for publication some of the alleged discriminations against the middle west attributed to this practice. Facts and figures submitted by him shed some light on the consumers' view of this practice as opposed to the producers' or mill owners' view.

Taking up the operators' contention that "Pittsburgh plus" is a natural economic development based on the law of supply and demand rather than an arbitrary price fixing arrangement imposed upon middle western farmers, manufacturers, and other business men, Mr. McCollum said:

"Their arguments sound plausible. That is because they ignore important factors in the case. They argue that when demand falls off, prices go down regardless of 'Pittsburgh plus'; that when demand is heavy this district cannot supply it, and purchasers go to Pittsburgh, and pay the freight to this district, thus bringing a competitive factor into this market which automatically puts Chicago prices up to the level of Pittsburgh prices, plus freight. That argument would be all right if Chicago sales were limited by natural economic laws to Chicago markets. We claim they are not so limited.

Figures Cited as Example.

"Take, for instance, the prices of steel at Pittsburgh, Chicago, and San Francisco. Assume the steel is sold at Pittsburgh at $40 a ton. According to the latest figures at hand, the freight by rail and water to San Francisco is $19 per ton. That would make the delivered price at San Francisco $59 a ton. The rail rate from Pittsburgh to Chicago prior to the last slight decrease was $7.60 a ton. Under 'Pittsburgh plus' this made a delivered price of $47.60 a ton in Chicago. But the rail freight from Chicago to San Francisco was $30 a ton. Yet Chicago sold in the San Francisco market at $59 a ton.

"The Chicago mills so selling received a net price of $29 a ton. Subtract this net from the $47.60 Chicago price and we find Chicago mills absorbing a differential of $18.60 a ton. Still these mills have sent steel to the Pacific coast, while defenders of the 'Pittsburgh plus' system insist this district cannot supply the demand here and must buy in Pittsburgh.

"Similarly, Bethlehem mills have shipped into Pittsburgh, selling at the Pitsburgh price, and absorbing the freight costs while Pittsburgh was shipping into the Bethlehem district and charging the Pittsburgh price plus freight. Such shipments are matters of record. They prove one thing: Prices are juggled.

Hampered in Operation.

"Perhaps the law of supply and deoperate so, and the 'Pittsburgh plus' defenders say, if it were allowed to operate unhampered, but it is not allowed to operate so, and the 'Pttsburgh plus' practice is what prevents it. It is obviously unfair to say that demand in this district in relation to supply fixes prices when our natural supply is shipped out of this district. Why should any mill ship to a market where its net returns are reduced? Only an artificial arrangement would induice it to do so. 'Pittsburgh plus' is this artificial and uneconomic arrangement.

"It is designed to give every mill, everywhere, a level market, without regard to its advantages of location, etc. It is designed to protect inefficient and high cost mills against the competition of efficient low cost mills. When defenders of this practice say that it protects small fabricators or consumers of rolled steel they are revealing a strangely altruistic attitude. If a small and inefficient factory cannot survive under a competitive system it should close. Perhaps 15 per cent of our midwestern consumers of rolled steel would face this situation. Is it fair that 85 per cent should be penalized to maintain 15 per cent? Is it fair that efficient steel mills, or, rather, the consumers of their product, should be penalized to maintain inefficient mills in operation?

Not Helping Chicago Development.

"The statement that only the advantages due to 'Pittsburgh plus' have inspired the development of mills in this district is absurd. It is in the record of the federal trade commission's case that the Jones & Laughlin company of Pittsburgh admitted that if this practice were eliminated it would be forced to build a mill in the Chicago district to hold its trade here. The company now owns 1,200 acres of land near Hammond. It is not holding it for a summer resort.

"As for the argument that the Pittsburgh base for steel is the same as the Chicago base for wheat, a glance at the day's market quotations, supplemented by freight rates, disproves that. Friday's closing quotations showed May wheat at Chicago at $1.21½; at St. Louis, $1.19⅝; at Minneapolis, $1.21¼. We have been told that 'the price paid by grain dealers west of Chicago, where wheat is produced, is day by day the Chicago price, less the freight from the point of purchase to Chicago.' What are the facts? Quotations above show a maximum difference of 1⅝ cents a bushel between the points named. Yet the wheat freight rate from St. Louis to Chicago is 6.9 cents per bushel, and the rate from Minneapolis to Chicago is 7.8 cents per bushel. It is obvious that Minneapolis and St. Louis prices are not 'the Chicago prices, less the freight from the point of purchase to Chicago.'

"No, 'Pittsburgh plus' is an artificial and arbitrary interference with the economic law of supply and demand. If it is not; if, as they say, prices are still fixed by supply and demand, why is the United States Steel corporation so vigorously defending this practice? If this district is so far under producing the necessary supply as they say why do we ship out of this district? How can the Bethlehem mills afford to ship into the surplus production district of Pittsburgh while Bethlehem prices are quoted above Pittsburgh prices?

"It is artificial and uneconomic. It is a tax upon efficiency and a drain upon consumers. It must fail."

U. S. Tobacco Men Seek a Monopoly in France

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Amerihave reopened negotiations with the have reopeneed negotiations with the government of France to obtain a monopoly of the tobacco manufacture and distribution throughout the French nation and involving the payment to France of $300,000,000.

This is the biggest tobacco transaction in history. It has been the subject of diplomatic and financial negotiations over period of three years. It will have the effect of helping the French government to balance its budget and thereby stabilize French exchange and prevent further inflation of the French currency.

Those involved on this side are James B. Duke, George J. Whalen, and Thomas Fortune Ryan, who control the greater portion of the tobacco business in America. An initial payment of $25,000,000 will be made to the French government as soon as the negotiations are closed.

U. S. Merchandise Exports for 1922 Less than in 1921

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The total value of American merchandise exports during 1922 was $3,831,932,193, compared to $4,485,031,356 in 1921. Although a complete analysis of merchandise exports during the year is not yet available, the annual total as made public today by the commerce department, indicated that a falling off in trade with Canada and European countries, together with a smaller falling off in trade with South America, was the cause of the decrease in exports for 1922 compared with 1921. The notable decreases were in exports to the United Kingdom, Germany, and Italy. Large decreases are also shown in exports to Mexico, Argentina, and Japan.

Pigs closed strong.

Receipts of hogs last week at 208,400, increased 5,900 over previous week, 30,400 over a year ago, and stand 6,000 above the ten year average. Estimated average weight at 236 lbs, stands within 1 lb of the heaviest week in about three months. Top price last week at $8.85, equaled the lowest week's top this year, being 5c below previous week, while average price at $8.10 stands lowest of the year, showing 10c decline, compared with previous week and $3.05, compared with the ten year average.

Closing cattle values were mostly 15@25c higher than a week ago, with general average price of good beef steers 20c above the previous week, at $9.00, against $11.15 a year ago, and $9.80 for the ten year average of corresponding week since 1912. Top prices dropped 40c in three days to $15.10, with average price at the close at $13.90, showing 20c decline, compared with Tuesday. However, market closed generally on a level with a week ago, in some cases showing a slight advance on strictly handy weights. Sheep and yearlings regained part of the decline experienced earlier in the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 52,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 13,928 cattle, 49,693 hogs, and 11,967 sheep a week ago and 19,937 cattle, 68,667 hogs, and 19,133 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. In the first of this series of articles on fraudulent oil stock promotions we described the method employed by some promoters to get their literature into the hands of the public under the semblance of an impartial medium by publishing their own newspaper, which carries the extravagantly worded advertisements of their own promotions and, under the guise of news items and editorial comment, lauds the promoter and his schemes to the skies. In this article, based as the others were on the reports of the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, we deal with another promoter who used his newspaper to exploit six of his own companies.

Col. B. M. Hatfield of Texas organized the Texas-Mexia syndicate and subsequently five other syndicates. These were:

- Sterling syndicate.
- Coöperative Oil Interests.
- Old Timers' Oil Pool syndicate.
- Mutual Oil and Potash syndicate.
- Big Dividend syndicate.

Because reputable newspapers do not print the kind of advertising used in selling the stocks of these companies, Col. Hatfield (he was never a colonel in the United States army) published his own newspaper, the Texas Grubstaker. The columns of this paper—which terms itself "a clean, reliable publication," are largely devoted to extolling the wonderful possibilities and success of these various companies. Practically every high pressure known to promotion is used.

According to the committee's report, Col. Hatfield first organized the Texas-Mexia Drilling syndicate, of which he was the sole trustee. Although not one cent of oil was produced by him or the property he claimed to own, this did not deter him from paying dividends. The other five syndicates appear to have been organized to perpetuate the original Texas-Mexia promotion. With the exception of the Big Dividend syndicate each of the five paid a 25 per cent dividend, and even that promotion advertised that a huge cash melon would be ready for payment within ten days or two weeks. To pay them Hatfield brought forth still another company, known as the Investment and Holding syndicate, which purchased a part of the holdings of the five drilling syndicates, paying a sufficient amount to provide for the 25 per cent disbursement in each instance. The purchase contract called for no specific acreage and the payment always was just enough to cover the required dividend. In a letter accompanying a dividend check the "colonel" said:

> Show this check to your close personal friends until you have induced three of them to take and pay for ten units.

The advertising of the Old Timers' Oil Pool in the Texas Grubstaker says:

> Enormous dividends ready—we are cutting a big melon.
> You are going to get the profits from a possible potash strike, a four foot vein of which, according to government experts, would mean the equivalent in value of all the gold produced in the United States.

This is merely a sample of the extravagant advertising with which his paper is replete.

Col. Hatfield, like scores of other promoters, essays to advise the public concerning the rules of sound investment. He even attempts to tie up the Texas-Mexia Drilling syndicate with the biggest of legitimate enterprises.

Our guide to the investor, whether he buys Texas-Mexia, Standard Oil, U. S. Steel, or any other stock, is to look into (1st) the integrity and the ability of the management, (2d) into the disposition of the capital stock.

Col. Hatfield claims that Texas-Mexia has paid dividends aggregating 145 per cent from November, 1921, to March, 1922. The national vigilance committee, after careful investigation, reports that not one cent of any dividend paid by the Texas-Mexia Drilling syndicate came from the production of oil, but that intricate manipulation in the purchase and sale of leases between interlocking units in the Hatfield promotion scheme made these ill advised dividend checks possible for a period.

Eight ways to test the safety of your investments are given in this interesting booklet, "How to Select Safe Bonds." This important booklet (the coupon will bring your copy) has been prepared from the long and successful experience of George M. Forman & Company. Every investor, large or small, should know the facts it gives about getting higher yields with positive safety.

HOW TO SELECT SAFE BONDS

EIGHT WAYS to Test the Safety of Every Investment

1 Is Your Investment Protected by Property of Permanent Value? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why investments should be protected by property having a permanent value well in excess of the amount of the entire loan.

2 Does Your Claim Command Payment Before Other Obligations? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells what securities come before all others in obligations to pay promptly and fully.

3 Has the Property Sufficient Earning Power? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why a safe property must have an annual earning power of at least two and a half times the total annual interest on the loan.

4 Is the Property Adequately Protected by Insurance? An important consideration, as fire often wipes out overnight a valuable property.

5 Is it Properly Managed? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why proper management is essential to insure prompt payment of interest and principal upon maturity.

6 Is the Title Clear? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells a sure way of insuring against loss through faulty title.

7 What Is the Moral Character of the Borrower? As important as proper management—explained in this interesting booklet.

8 Who Offers the Securities You Buy? "How to Select Safe Bonds" tells why even the experienced investor must depend for safety entirely upon the reputation and length of service of the Banking House offering the investment. It tells of the conservative policy, of painstaking investigation and selection which has made it possible for George M. Forman & Company to sell bonds for 38 years without loss to a customer, large or small.

7% GOLD BONDS

Unusually Attractive
First Mortgage Bonds

The First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds of the Leamington Apartments, Leamington Ave. and Monroe St., have proved so attractive that a large part of the issue has already been purchased by careful investors. Those who are now considering an investment should make their investigation and then send in their order without undue delay.

Like all Beak Plan Bonds, this issue is safeguarded in the most careful manner. The net earnings of the building, based on very reasonable rentals (from $50 to $75 a month for each apartment) are approximately $15,000.00 or about 3 times the interest charges.

The amount of the bond issue is only about 60% of the conservative valuation of the property. The location is most attractive for a building of this kind, and property values in this neighborhood (the Columbus Park District) are steadily increasing due to attractive surroundings, proximity for outdoor recreations such as golf, tennis, etc., and excellent transportation.

Call or use coupon for illustrated circular fully describing this sound first mortgage investment.

COURT DECISION ENDS LITIGATION IN GOODYEAR CO.

Stock exchanges, commodity markets and banks throughout the country will be closed tomorrow in observance of Lincoln's birthday.

BY O. A. MATHER.

An amicable settlement of protracted litigation growing out of the $80,000,000 refinancing of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company was approved yesterday in Akron, O., by Common Pleas Judge Ahern. All parties to six suits attacking the refinancing reached an agreement.

The settlement provides for representation of the original stockholders on the directorate, for retirement of $5,000,000 of prior preferred stock at $90.60 a share, for dropping a bonus to the Leonard Kennedy company during the rest of the management contract, for return and cancellation of 50,000 shares of common stock, and for the waiving of salary and expenses amounting to $30,000 a year to trustees of the management stock. The bonds and debentures originally disposed of in carrying out the refinancing program are not affected.

Litigation Ends on Sound Basis.

"Judge Ahern's decision has ended litigation and settled all matters on a sound business basis," a statement signed by all parties to the suits states.

"The common and preferred stockholders will have three additional members on the board of directors.

"In addition to the regular retirement of bonds and debentures, the company has retired $9,902,500 of prior preference stock and will retire an additional $5,000,000 within twelve months. Purchase at less than par of prior preference stock already retired and the additional stock to be retired, plus cancellation of accrued dividends to Jan. 1, 1923, will effect a reduction of charges prior to the preferred and common stocks of $4,280,360. In addition, management stock fees amounting to $30,000 a year will be canceled and the cost of management reduced from a possible maximum of $750,000 to $250,000 a year.

Reductions to Result.

"The peak amount of bonds, debentures, and prior preference issues was $87,402,500. On March 15 the aggregate will be $72,750,000 and on March 15, 1924, it should be $64,750,000. At that time the yearly disbursements on all three issues should aggregate $9,080,000, of which $3,600,000 will be in retirement of debt or stocks senior to the preferred and common issues. The net result should be a reduction of annual charges prior to the preferred and common stocks of about $1,212,200, with further automatic reductions each year thereafter."

Sugar and oil prices continued to climb yesterday. Raw sugar moved up to 4 5-16 cents a pound, a new high level for the present movement and about equal to the high record of the last two years, on an announcement by the department of commerce of a shortage of 250,000 tons in the world supply, which aggravated an already acute situation in the sugar market. Refiners suddenly moved up prices of refined to meet the higher costs of raw, fine granulated being quoted at 7.25@7.30c, with an urgent demand from consumers.

Crude Oil Again Boosted.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company advanced the price of midcontinent crude oil 10 cents a barrel. The new prices now range from $1.40 for oil of .28 gravity and below to $2.50 for .41 gravity and above. It is the fifth 10 cent increase since Jan 1. The Texas company posted a price of $1 a barrel on Healdton low gravity crude oil, an advance of 25 cents.

The prospects of the People's Gas Light and Coke company are encouraging, Samuel Insull, president, told the stockholders at their annual meeting yesterday. An increase in the volume of business is expected this year; the property is earning a 6 per cent return, under somewhat adverse conditions, and the company's relations with the public are pleasant.

"Our gross revenue is a little lower than it was in 1921, because our price for gas, as regulated by the Illinois commerce commission, was lower in 1922 than in 1921, except for one month," said Mr. Insull. "Our output of gas, however, shows an increase for the year, which is somewhat encouraging."

FINANCIAL NOTES

All of the principal sugar stocks yesterday soared to new high records for the year, some of them to the highest prices in more than two years. Cuba Cane Sugar preferred touched 59¾ and then fell back to 58, where it was up 4 points on the day; American Beet Sugar closed at 47⅝, up 4⅝ points, and gains of 1@2¾ points were made by Manati, Cuba Cane common, Punta Alegre, American, and South Porto Rican.

Gulf States Steel, which touched 92¼ and then fell back half for a net gain of nearly 4 points on the day, led the advance in the steel shares. Crucible was not far behind, with a gain of 3 points, while Republic and Otis Steel preferred each gained 2½ points. United States Steel closed fractionally higher.

United Cigar Stores, which jumped 24 points to 209, was the feature of the specialty list. Other strong spots were Underwood Typewriter, Tobacco Products preferred, Kresge, Lima Locomotive, American Sumatra Tobacco, Iron Products preferred, and Woolworth, all up 3@10 points.

Marked strength of Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Sugar company liens featured dealings in bonds. Buying of the B. R. T. issues was in response to the publication of the reorganization plan with its possibility of an early release from receivership, while sugar company bonds improved in sympathy with another increase in the price of the raw product.

Dun's reports 371 failures in the United States last week, against 437 in the preceding week and 581 in the corresponding week last year.

Van Sweringens to Spend Millions on Their Roads

Cleveland, O., Feb. 10.—Coördination of the six railroads controlled by the Nickel Plate interests to speed up traffic, effect economies not now possible, and improve the service generally through extensive improvements and millions of dollars' worth of new rolling stock is the program of the Van Sweringen group, it became known here today.

Already the Nickel Plate has purchased thirty new locomotives of the lighter Mikado type, but heavier than those now used on this road, to cost $1,800,000 and contracted for ten more, J. J. Bernet, president of that road, announced. Purchase of the new engines, it is said, is for the purpose of linking up the consolidated Nickel Plate lines and the Chesapeake & Ohio system, controlling interest of which recently passed to the Van Sweringens. The Chesapeake and Ohio at certain seasons, it was explained, has brought more coal west than the serving lines could take, resulting in the serving lines placing embargoes on coal from that road to prevent congestion. The Nickel Plate will increase its rolling stock to provide an outlet for this coal.

INVESTMENT DE WOLF APPROVED BONDS
Safe Investments Mean a Dependable Income
UNLESS your income can be counted on with certainty—unless it is dependable—your investments are not really safe. A wide margin of security alone does not make a safe investment. Neither do large earnings nor an able management.
Before a bond can be "De Wolf Approved" it must possess all three of these essentials of safety. That is why the income from "De Wolf Approved" bonds can always be counted on.
We recommend the following issues for safe investment. Use the coupon below for further information.

The New York Times.

New York, Feb. 10.—[Special.]—The somewhat unusual spectacle was presented today of practically all markets advancing at the end of a week to the week's highest prices. This happened not only as a culmination of a continuous rise in most of them, but on the eve of a double holiday.

In the stock market individual advances of a point or more were fairly numerous, and the total business done was the largest of any Saturday since the first week of October. Advances in bonds also were general. It was the rise of sterling exchange, however, which particularly attracted interest.

Franco-German Peace Forecast.

Today's highest price for sterling, $4.68 9-16, represented an advance of nearly ⅝ cent for the day, and brought the market within easy distance of the highest point yet reached on the recovery from the long post-war decline. The strength of sterling was associated by London chiefly with the house vote on the British debt settlement. Wall street was disposed, however, to draw the further inference that the movement indicated at least composure over the Franco-German deadlock.

The French republic's dollar bonds held firm around the best prices of the recovery, and the franc was only slightly lower. The German mark advanced again, today's closing price of .0035 of a cent representing a recovery of 75 per cent from the low price of Jan. 30. French government bonds also moved up sharply today; the 5 per cent war loan advanced 2¼ points for last week as a whole.

Unfilled Steel Orders Increase.

Aside from the foreign exchange market, Wall street's attention continued to converge on the home trade situation and its undoubtedly favorable aspects. One of the day's incidents in this regard was the monthly statement of the United States Steel corporation's unfilled orders, showing for January the first net increase in three months and bringing the total tonnage on the company's books to the highest figure since February, 1921, when the steel trade was feeling the curtailment of demands from consumers in all other industries and a continuous decrease in the order books' showing had been in progress since the preceding July. In the present case, the January increase of 165,073 tons would probably have been larger but for the extremely high rate of current production and shipment. The unfilled tonnage was 6,910,776 as of Jan. 31, as compared with 6,745,703 on Dec. 31, 6,840,242 on Nov. 30, and 4,241,678 on Jan. 31, 1922.

New York Reserves Rise.

The weekly statement of the New York clearing house showed a decrease of $56,360,000 in loans and a drop of $44,666,000 in demand deposits. Time deposits decreased $956,000. Excess reserve was $12,948,060, an increase of $18,678,170, a deficit having been reported last week. The statement, with comparisons, follows:

A better feeling prevailed in the public utility group, and the close found practically the entire list selling at new high prices. Standard Gas common and United Light and Railways common were the outstanding features, the former advancing some 6⅝ points to top sales and a close of 25¼@25⅝, while the latter after selling at 95 reacted to a close of 90 bid, offered at 91, a net gain of some 8 points. United Light 6 per cent preferred closed at 76½ bid, 77½ asked; 7 per cent preferred at 87 bid, 89 asked. Chicago North Shore and Milwaukee railroad issues were active, sales of the first preferred ranging between 57 and 60; second participation preferred between 44 and 47, while the common changed hands at 10 to 12. Arkansas Light and Power common again sold at 33 and 33¼, while the preferred was quoted 86 to 89. Cities Service common advanced some 5 points to 185 bid, 188 asked. Sales of the bankers' shares were confined to a narrow range, sales being made at 18¼ and 18⅝. Commonwealth Power Railway and Light issues were again popular, the common being wanted at 25, with the odd lot offerings at 26, while 66 was generally bid for the preferred. The new Commonwealth Power corporation preferred rose from 65 to 68 bid, 70 asked. Western Power common was quoted 35 to 36. Illinois Traction common after selling at 50 lost its entire gain and closed at 47 bid, 48 asked.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1923: By Fairchild News Service]

NEW YORK.—Half of the members of the American silk mission to the Orient leaves New York Saturday on the way to San Francisco and from there the entire mission sails for the far east Feb. 22. Many conferences between party and Oriental silk interests are planned. It is hoped the visit will result in improved methods of raw silk grading and stabilization of raw silk prices.

NEW YORK.—New prices were named on southern 32 inch dress ginghams, ranging from 17c to 18½c for the better grades.

NEW YORK.—Wide print cloths sell steadily for delivery through April.

NEW YORK.—Medium small caps are gaining ground in demand, wholesalers here report. Some sections of the country are creating much better demand than others. In Texas, for instance, big models still are leading.

Weil-McLain
SCIENTIFIC COMBUSTION BOILERS

Release Your Home from Winter's Icy Grip

Bitter winter weather brings no discomfort if you live in a home heated by a Weil-McLain Boiler. This scientific heating plant supplies abundant heat to every nook and corner of the house, even on zero days. The complaint that "our house is hard to heat" is never heard when there is a Weil-McLain in the basement.

And, best of all, the Weil-McLain provides its abundant warmth with the minimum of attention and with surprisingly little fuel. The fuel saving features of the Weil-McLain are particularly appreciated this winter when coal has been hard to get and high in price.

Many years of study by Weil-McLain have resulted in perfecting the two major functions of a boiler. These are: First, complete burning of fuel; Second, full utilization of the heat units developed.

In Weil-McLain Boilers every pound of fuel is completely burned—made to yield a maximum number of heat units. Waste is practically eliminated.

Then the heat thus created is fully utilized to heat your home or building due to three remarkable Weil-McLain features.

The Weil-McLain fuel-saving corrugated "double-surface" crown sheet gives double the usual heating surface directly above the fire. The simple candle test shows that this is the most valuable surface in any boiler.

All other heating surfaces are also corrugated. This further promotes economy of fuel and heating efficiency.

Round Type Boiler
For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; suitable for bungalows, residence and 2-flat apartment buildings.

A long "back-and-forth" fire travel holds the hot gases in continuous contact with all the fuel-saving surfaces, preventing heat being wasted up the chimney.

Other features of Weil-McLain Boilers are: large fire doors; handy front cleanout doors for each section; smooth, non-clogging surface of lower one-third of fire pot; triangular grates which cut and shake all ordinary clinkers.

Square Type Boiler
For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; suitable for apartments, factories, schools, theaters and all public buildings.

Weil-McLain Boilers also are more efficient when oil is used for fuel. The heat produced by the oil-burning device is fully utilized by the double-surface crown sheet directly above the fire, other corrugated heating surfaces, and the long "back-and-forth" fire travel.

Prompt deliveries of Weil-McLain Boilers can be made now. Large stocks are carried in Chicago and Michigan City, Indiana.

Write us for further information. We will send you, if desired, the name of a competent heating contractor who will serve you.

Fashions Beauty Contests

—How They Look in Civies—

THESE ARE ACTUAL SKETCHES MADE BY OUR ARTIST OF ACTRESSES IN CHICAGO LAST WEEK

MISS ANN ANDREWS of "The Twist."

MISS ANDREWS paused obligingly to be interviewed as she was about to leave her hotel. She was wrapped in a glorious mink cloak, the long, luscious folds of which enveloped her completely. The lines and marking of the fur run up and down and diagonally and up and down again, as carefully and intricately patterned as a piece of music. It is lined with golden brown striped chiffon velvet.

Her hat—she calls it her "funny little red Indian hat"—is bell shaped and close fitting, with a crown of deep Indian red suede and a black brim. Square cut fringe of the same red lies flat on the brim, reaching almost to its edge. A tiny steel buckle in front is its only ornament.

Her wrap covers her so entirely from her hat to her light wool stockings and tan oxfords that not a hint is given of the beige kasha frock in which she is here shown. It is a terribly smart coat dress by Frances, with vest, collar, and revers of cream flannel. They are outlined in narrow blue braid, supplemented at the top of each rever by a strip of gold and one of red. Long tight sleeves end in narrow bands of the flannel, catching tight about her wrists with square tabs sticking out. The braid on these matches that on the collar and revers.

Two tiny red edged pockets ornament the front of the dress, one high up on the right side of the blouse, the other directly beneath, below the belt.

MISS MARILYN MILLER of "Sally."

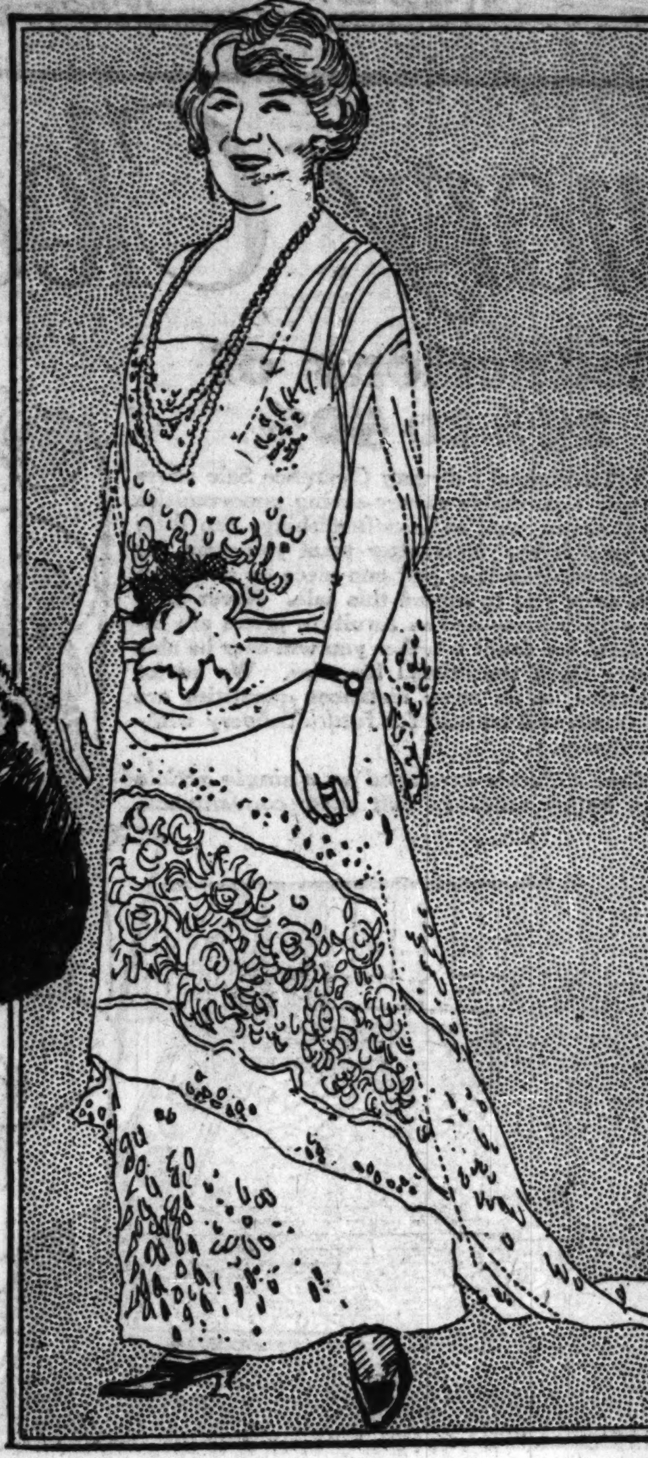
THIS dress of Miss Miller's—by the way, she likes to be called Mrs. Pickford off stage—is a demure little affair of soft gray wool, by Frances. It is a rather short, one piece frock, held in at the waistline by a silver linked belt. The round white collar and inserted piece in the blouse are of white kid. A narrow band of the gray, starting at the belt, drops to the hem and is turned under. A similar band hangs down the back from the right shoulder, but, instead of turning under, swings free, a bit shorter than the skirt. Across the loose end are narrow strips of blue and red braid, the latter color being repeated in bone buttons, which fasten through the turn back cuffs.

The real feature of the dress, however, is a great round monogram on the left of the blouse. The background matches the collar, and is outlined in red. The blue embroidered initials are her new ones, "M. M. P."

Mrs. Pickford's pearls, a double string of them and a crescent shaped pin, are exquisite against the gray. Her suede slippers, low heeled as always, and her sheer stockings match the dress, the former being trimmed in kid of a little deeper shade.

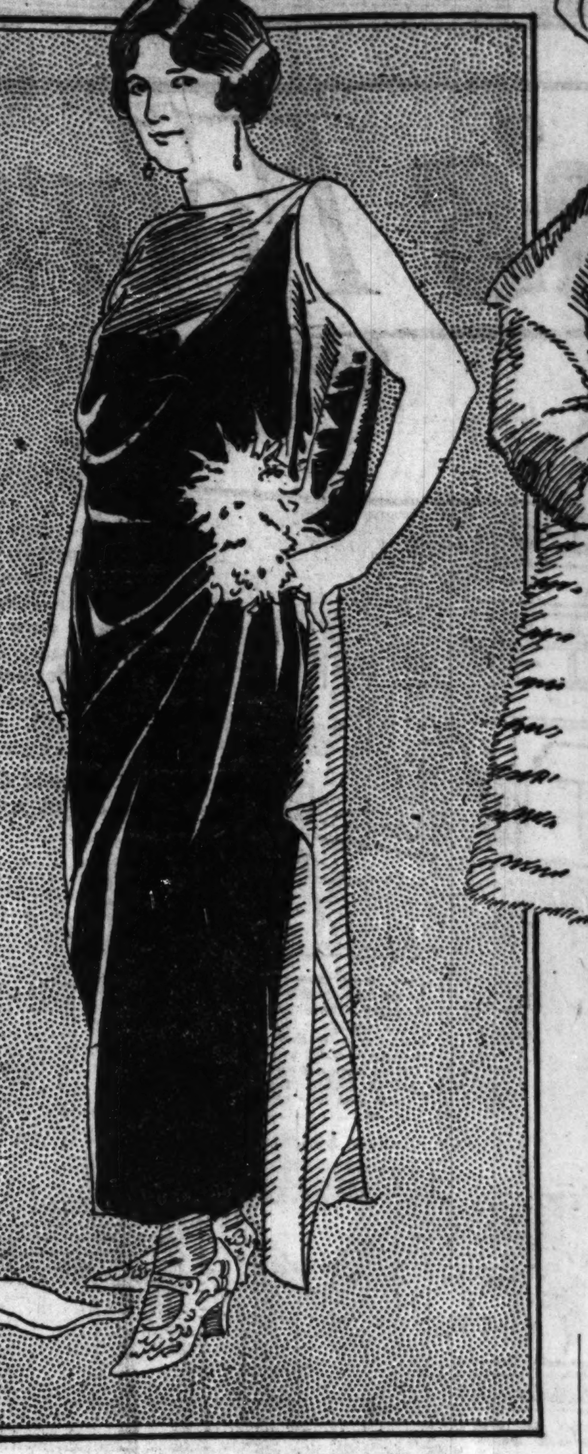
In spite of the fact that she had an appointment with her dentist, where, she says, she spends most of her time these days, she had her maid bring out armfuls of fascinating dresses, coats, and negligees, and even took time to slip on a short crystal buttoned ermine coat and hat. The lining of the jaquette coat is jade green and silver brocade, and shows about her wrists, where the sleeves turn back. The crown of the hat is ermine, and the brim black velvet, with black velvet and chenille loops hanging over the right ear.



MME. HOMER.

MME. HOMER says she has a terrific time deciding what she wants and doesn't want, but that she is fond of the dress she wears here. It isn't difficult to understand that, either, as the delicate coloring is wonderfully becoming to her. The foundation is of cloth of gold, long and stright lined. Over this is draped pale gray tulle and gold lace, almost covering the skirt and hanging in two small, pointed trains, one at each side of the back. Gray tulle covers the gold bodice, coming up to a straight-across neckline, but so soft and sheer that from a distance it gives an effect of decollete. From the shoulders at the back hangs a cape-like piece of the tulle and lace, the points of which fall well below the waistline, corresponding to the diminutive trains. The sleeves are of tulle and are open from shoulder to elbow, on the under side of which they are knotted into a soft loop.

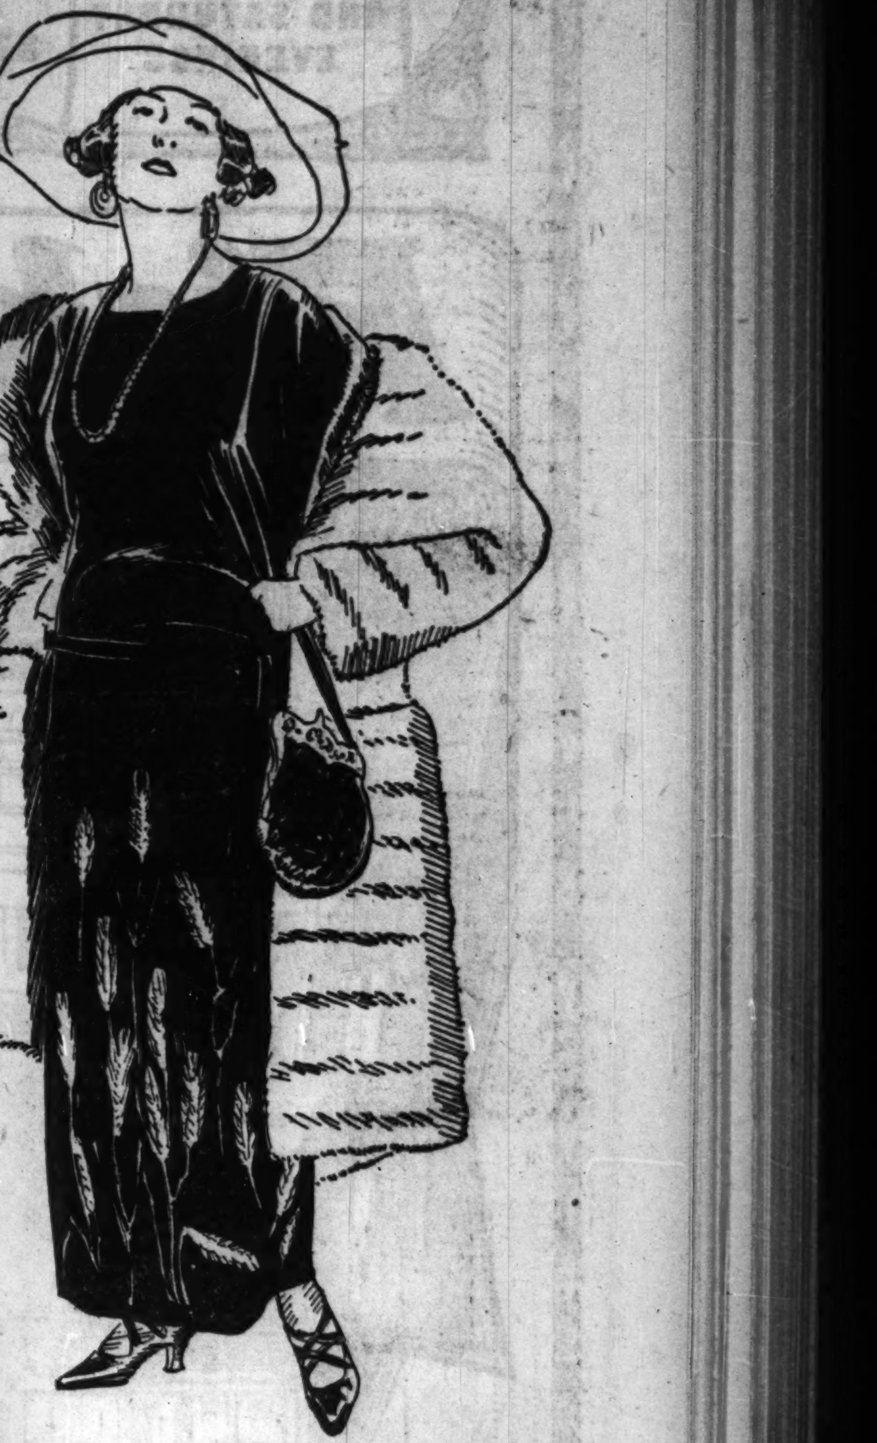
A double string of crystal beads and a great golden flower tucked in at the waist catch and reflect stray gleams of light. Pale gray stockings and unadorned gold opera slippers complete the costume.



MRS. LOUISE HOMER STIRES.

IN contrast to the pale glinting costume of her mother, Mrs. Stires is shown in chiffon velvet of scarlet vermilion.

The dress is charmingly simple, sleeveless, and with a bateau necklace. Drapery at the side is caught up by a chrysanthemum chou, shading through cream and geranium pink to a color just lighter than that of the dress fabric. The red is repeated in two jeweled pins which Mrs. Stires wears in her hair and in her pendant earrings. Her stockings match the gown; her slippers are gold.



MISS MARY NASH
of "Captain Applejack."

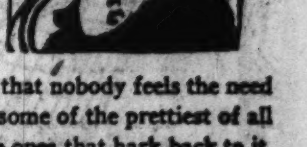
"MY dressmaker says I'm a perfect joy because I always know just what I want," said Miss Nash when asked about her favorite modes and colors. "I like velvets and furs in winter—lots of them. They're warm and so flattering!" She smiled. "In summer I want just the opposite—fluttering, soft things, chiffons and laces, anything filmy and floating. Except, of course, for sport clothes. When I wear them I want them to be strictly that."

She slipped off her mink wrap to show the sapphire blue velvet gown shown above. Its lines are simple, with a moderately long and moderately full skirt, and a rather tight, basque-like waist part. The only trimming is embroidery, slim sprays of wheat done in wool of the same and a lighter blue, starting at the hem and growing gracefully up the skirt almost to the waistline. The three-quarter length sleeves are unusual only because there is nothing unusual about them. Wide sash ends, attached at the sides, are tied in a plain bow at the back.

The hat is a Bendel model, and would be tailored if it were not for layers of brown tulle covering the wide brim. These flutter up when Miss Nash moves, making a becoming, halo-y effect about her head. The beautiful way Miss Nash carries her head, incidentally, is one of the most noticeable things about her.

With this gown Miss Nash wears brown chiffon hose and strapped brown slippers, guiltless of buckle or bead. Her only jewels are a long string of pearls and earrings of cut steel, great triple hooped ones that glitter as she moves.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions



MUCH ADO ABOUT RUFFLES.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS. — (Special Correspondence.) — When Cheruit discovered the ruffle a few seasons or so ago she contributed one of the important offerings that go to make life of today graceful. She launched her discovery at just about the time Mr. Einstein was trying to get a hearing for his theory and radio was bidding for popularity. There are those in and around Paris who would say her idea was the more important and necessary; certain it is it has gained perfection first. Out of the turmoil and the din of the spring openings it has risen supreme as one of the pronounced features of the styles just coming in.

In the first illustration the trimming takes the place of a ruffled box plait, which would seem to be a trimming on top of a trimming. The artist tells me the idea takes its inspiration from the time of Louis XIV. I should have said that surely this was a new one. But nothing is, you know. I think the dress is interesting for the manner in which it bows to the present call to action of the godet line or the flare, while all the time stoutly defending the straight silhouette.

The dress here shown is of Havana cigar brown in softest moire, and owes its great chic to this rather heavy ruffle round where the costume flares. Of course, the technique for obtaining emphasis consists in part in repetition, and the French couturiere has made use of this rule by running a similar ruffle round the long, tight sleeve and making it another into a shell shaped ruff round the collar.

The hat accompanying this creation is of brown silk also, and depends for its trimming on a spray of clipped goose feathers. Of course, the small dog contributes his modicum to the sum total of chic of the costume.

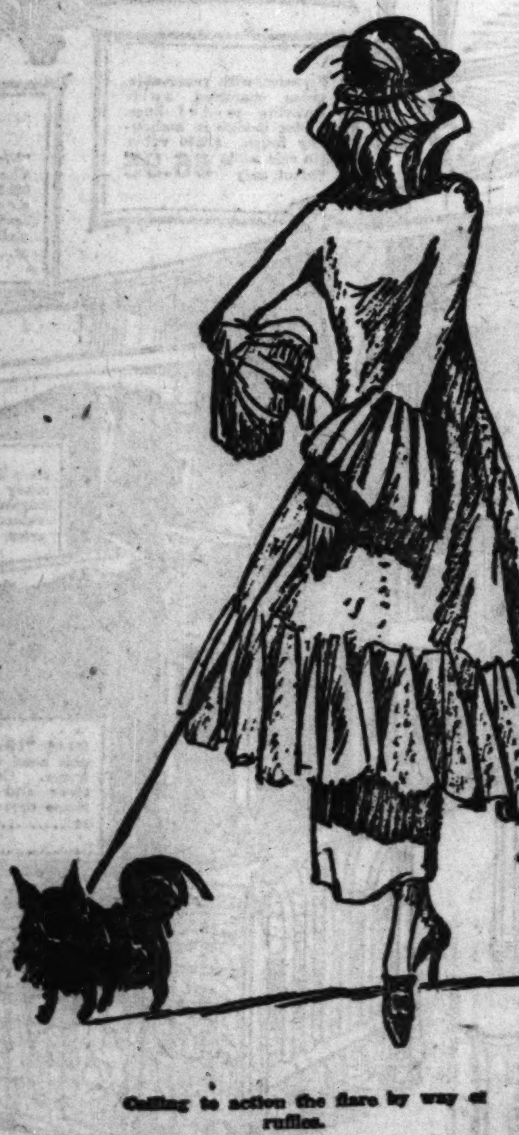
Trust Poiret to put the finishing touch to a new fashion. Don't you think the skirt hiked up in front and dragging on the floor in the back has chic? You can see for yourself it is the slant of the ruffles that carries it. Here again the artist has come to my assistance and informed me that M. Poiret is indebted to Spanish inspiration for this. I always feel it is dangerous for anybody to draw on it for fear Lanvin might get after him. She uses Spanish effects so freely and so well. And yet there lies such a profound well of inspiration in the ancient Spanish art of costuming that nobody feels the need of restricting it. I think some of the prettiest of all the French dresses are the ones that hark back to it.

Isn't it strange that the Spanish cannot make use of their inheritance and create their own costumes? They are so passionately fond of dress, and constitute the best clientele of the Paris couturiere. Yet they, like all the rest of the world, have to turn to the French for their lovely creations, and they turn for so many of them that every large house of Paris keeps what they call "succursales" or branch houses in Spain.

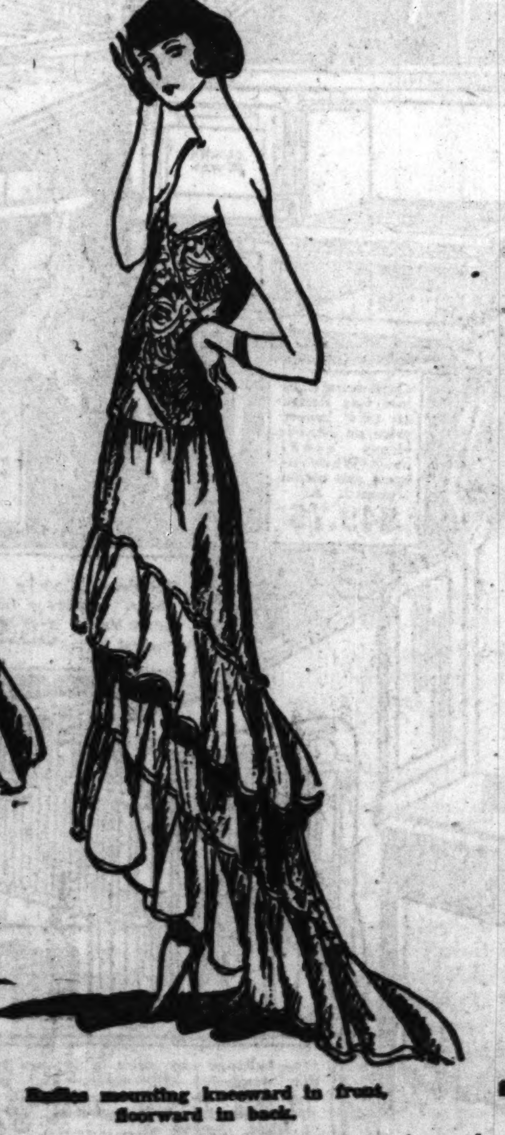
The evening dress up for dissection is of brilliant green satin, with a double ruffled skirt that mounts kneeward in front, and drags into a train en arriere. The bodice is rendered effective by the artful use of wide bands of gold lace that cross over the front, like the surplice dress of old—only in reality not at all like our ingenuous conception, which crossed demurely into a capital V at the neck. This surplice ignores the neck altogether, and begins lower down, just under the arms, crossing where it naturally would cross in any gently graded descent that started there.

If you have been erroneously thinking that the straight silhouette is dead, let the accompanying illustation reassure you. It shows this in addition to the use of the ruffle and the use of the slant. The dress is of blue chiffon broadcloth. It has a high collar, and, following the slant of the ruffles, is tracery of embroidery in delicate silver threads. The hat owes its distinction to a succession of tubes covered in black satin and sewed in rows round its turnup brim.

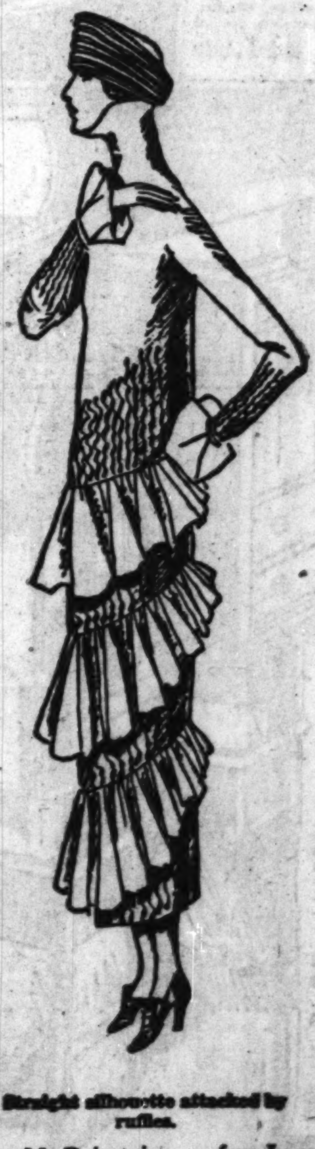
Again ruffles—this time in gold lace, as used by Lanvin. Surely you are convinced by this time how much of a feature they are of spring styles. This dress is one that Spinelly is wearing in bottle green velvet with gold lace ruffles round the full skirt and the 1830 neck line. And there is a ruffle in the bottle green velvet round the waist.



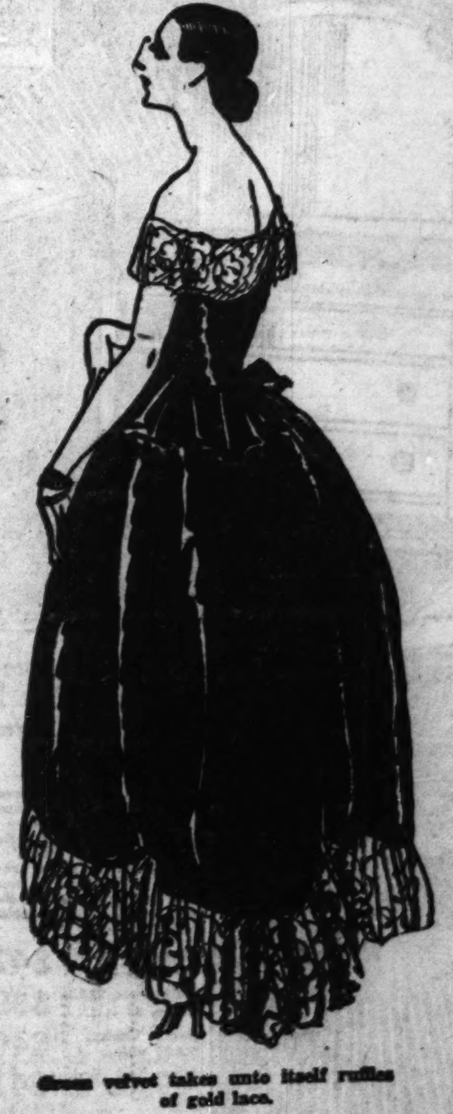
Calling to action the flare by way of ruffles.



Ruffles mounting kneeward in front, floorward in back.



Straight silhouette attacked by ruffles.



Green velvet takes unto itself ruffles of gold lace.

WRINKLES, LINES and FURROWS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Life seems just one grand succession of ironing out the lines and the furrows and the wrinkles we put into it. That is, if we are bent on making a success of life. There are the debt wrinkles, the wrinkles we made by silly mistakes, the wrinkles we made by foolish enmities, those made by lack of concentration and concerted effort, all of which have to be treated wisely and sanely if we would get the best out of life.

And how do we get them ironed out? First, by acknowledging them and then realizing it is not fate but we who are to blame. And then a change of tactics.

Reasons for Lines and Furrows.

Facial markings must needs come in for the same face to face analysis. We make so many of them by our mistakes. Take the lines around the eyes. Eye strain or lack of sleep invariably is the story there of neglect and carelessness. The lines around the mouth, the droop at the corners—are they not more often than not a badge of disillusionment with an overdose of self pity thrown in? The lines in the cheeks? Often due to neglected teeth, to loss of sleep, to carelessness of diet and general upkeep? They are.

To facial contortions, frowning, sulking, worrying may be credited further reasons for lines and furrows.

When a person who has been plump becomes extremely thin there is always a tendency to bagginess and to the development of deep wrinkles or folds, particularly manifest about cheek and neck.

Years Bring Them, Too.

Then, too, there are the wrinkles incident to advancing years, due to natural loss of the subcutaneous fat and in part to the fact that the skin in later life tends naturally to become somewhat relaxed so that it does not maintain the tension of youth.

It is a biological fact that in women the skin of the face tends to preserve its youthful freshness further along in adult life than is the case with men. A woman need not accept wrinkles resignedly, then, until she is quite old.

But, first, she must bear in mind that the influence the nervous system has over the nutrition of the skin by regulating its blood supply must be preserved first by the rebuilding of the general health or preserving its high tone. In other words, massage of the skin is of secondary importance, but not a negligible virtue by any means.

Secret of Prevention.

The real secret of prevention lies in the secret of perpetual youth. And perpetual youth is had only by easy, rational forms of living and a cheerful philosophy of life. A salutary mode of life that preserves the body and mind will prevent wrinkles and lines and furrows and other old age advertisers.

Of course, wrinkles come earlier and are more distinct in some persons than in others. Sometimes it is an individual or family trait of the tissues, just as other premature senile changes, such as baldness or grayness, may characterize an individual or family.

For a few premature wrinkles in otherwise tense skins something can be done toward their effacement by massage which not only encourages the suppleness and freshness of the skin tissues but provokes activity of their functions. And, too, the cream used in massage provides the necessary lubrication of the epidermis to keep it supple and resistant. When the natural fat of the skin is abstracted the horny scales of the surface become brittle and dry, drop off, cracks occur, and the skin loses a large part of its resistant quality.

"You Make Your Mouth Yourself."

Before we go into this matter of massaging I want to call your attention to the vast power of will in combating certain lines and furrows—particularly those around the mouth—due, as I have said before, almost invariably to the mental condition and it a sad and unhappy one. An epigrammatic Frenchman said: "God gives you your other features, but you make your mouth yourself."

The simple expedient of throwing off years—O, many of them, too—is to turn the corners of the mouth up, even if you have to practice it daily twenty times before the mirror. Curious thing, that will turn up the corners of the mind at the same moment. It is almost an inhuman possibility to keep the corners of the mouth up and the mind sad or sour, grouchy or ill dispositioned.

Keeping the Corners Up.

I am going to set out one of these days on a Coue expedition, preaching this gospel of keeping the corners of the mouth up, because I think it has more health and beauty virtue in it than any other will power cure in captivity. For a wrinkle cure it hath magic powers.

If you have been wearing yours down for months or years, say, you would better put a little skin food or a good cold cream on your finger tips as you apply the corner lifting mental cure, and pat gently or mold the furrowed spots as you move in upward and outward line. You will thus exercise the muscles and tissues beneath the skin, stimulate the circulation and increase the blood supply to nourishment.

Muscles that have become soft can be developed and made taut by massage. All facial massage movements must be upward and outward; an imperative rule, this. The movement is better when semi-rotary, crawling, moving in half circles without removing the fingers, pressing them gently but firmly into the skin.

Upward and Outward.

For sagging mouth corners use the first two fingers on both hands to work from the side of the mouth upward and outward to the middle of the ear or tip thereof; remove the fingers and go back to the point of starting again. Don't work back and down on any facial movement.

For the lines at the sides of the nose begin at the wing of the nostril, move up and out toward the outer corner of the eyes and over into the hair line.

For the crow's feet at outer corners of the eyes work from their base up on forehead and out to hair line.

For lines between the eyes, which usually extend up on the forehead a trifle, begin at the bridge of the nose one finger—or at most two—were better used in circular movement right up the center of the forehead to hair line. Do not work back on this line, but begin at base again and up, always feeding with a bit of skin food or cream on finger tips. For lines under the eyes, work from the inner corner of the eye out and up to the hair line.

For Sagging Cheeks.

For sagging cheeks, you may take fingers of both hands, begin at chin and work in wider circles up and outward to above the ears.

The same upward and outward movement is advised for neck and chin lines, beginning at the base of the neck.

After the face has been gone over in this manner, wipe off the cream and rub with ice.

As I have said before, if ill health, insufficient sleep, eye strain, or peculiar facial expression is responsible for your lines, depend upon effacing the trouble first before looking for a magic potion in massage manipulation.

Beauty Answers by Antoinette Donnelly

MRS. H.: IT IS TRUE THAT EMOTIONAL and other mental trials will gray the hair perceptibly. It is not uncommon to see it develop from grief, great business anxiety, or other conditions of intense mental strain. Why grayness occurs under normal conditions no one knows. Sometimes it is a hereditary strain, just as other changes show a family type. Whether to dye it or not is something no outsider may advise, because it is a gamble just how much it will alter one's appearance.

J. L.: FOR COARSE, DRY HAIR which you would keep smooth and tidy I urge brushing twice a day for five full minutes. That will help to bring out the oil in the scalp, distribute it over the hair, and make it more manageable. Then you might grease the scalp lightly with vaseline, olive oil, or sweet almond oil before the brushing once a day. And when you do the hair up, top it with a hair net. You must be getting the nets too small, or you do not adjust properly. With a little rehearsing you can arrange a net loosely over the hair and still tuck all the short ends under. A net is a necessity nowadays to that well groomed look about the head.

M. G.: THOSE SO-CALLED COLD sores are ofttimes fever blisters, due to some slight digestive troubles. Some persons are susceptible upon the slightest provocation. Prevention naturally means regulating food and observing rules of hygiene to keep the intestinal tract clean. Softening the lips with vaseline, cold cream, or spirits of camphor once or twice a day is a good local help.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Foolish But Dear.

My husband always remembered my birthday, but this year not until evening did he put into my hands the gift I had looked for all day.

Quickly I took off the wrappings, opened the box and read the card, "Many, many happy returns of the day, in honor of which I give you a likeness of the most beautiful woman in the world."

There was a jealous pang in my heart as I removed the tissue paper, lifted out the frame and looked at the picture—my own reflection in a most beautiful old mirror, with a wonderful hand carved old gold frame.

Dear, dear, foolish husband.

P. M. C.

Made An Impression.

My little daughter spent the night with a friend, whose mother I scarcely know.

The next evening she said: "Mother, I have a compliment for you. Hazel's mother says she remembers the first time she ever saw you. You came to church, and you wore a suit of soft green wool. She thought you were the most beautiful woman she had ever seen, and she says she thinks you still are."

Now what could be more satisfactory than that?

G. S. G.

An Eye for Beauty.

I was doing my first teaching in a first grade class, and was quite disturbed because one little gird constantly watched me instead of doing the work which she had been directed to do.

I called her to me and said, "Why do you spend so much time looking at me, Adele, when you should be working as the other children are?"

She raised her honest blue eyes and said seriously, "'Cause you're pretty."

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bea, The Tribune, Chicago.

Buddy, who was much excited because there was a new baby at his friend George's house, hurried into the house and put on his best suit.

When his mother asked why he was all dressed up he said: "George has invited me to call on his new sister."

Mrs. P. M. C.

The family was all enjoying the cartoon where the child trailed toothpaste through the house, and as Bobbie had recently had a similar experience with dire results, he looked at his daddy's mirth in disgust, and said: "You're funny. You laugh and spank for the same thing."

E. L. R.

Billy's mother was going through the contents of a trunk and showed him the first clothes he had ever worn. A little later his aunt arrived, and Billy, eyes shining, brought out the dress and announced: "Look, aunty! This is the clothes I was borned in!"

A. C.

My boy slipped off his high chair one Kenneth is beginning to grow skeptical concerning some of the usages of babyhood.

Bringing a scratched finger to his mother he was told, "Too bad, sonny. I'll kiss it and make it well."

"All right, kith it if you wants to," he agreed; "but you'd better put on some salve and tie it up, too."

G. F. M.

Friends of mine invited me for a drive. Returning home they had considerable trouble, the machine stopping every now and then.

After many starts and stops their son remarked: "Daddy, does this auto know where it's going?"

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

FIRST LINE DEFENSES.

THIS week I wish to point out a misunderstanding that has cost life after life in Chicago during the last two weeks of zero weather.

When we think of helping the poor against icy blasts of zero weather we think first of coal, then of more coal. That is fine, but how many of us overlook the many other things that can be done?

Do you realize, for example, that hundreds of families, many of them with sick and ailing children, have been fighting the cold weather in damp, cement floored basements without a carpet to stand on? If you have discarded rugs or carpets, worn out but still sound, every one of them is worth practically as much as a ton of coal to such a family.

Another device the poor have for surviving in zero weather is to bear the cold during the day and get warm in bed at night—but many a family in Chicago can't muster an average of one cotton blanket to each member of the family! Do you see where every old blanket you have, if it is sound or can be made sound, becomes a veritable life saver under such conditions?

Old beds, which enable people to cease sleeping on damp and freezing floors—heavy draperies and portieres to ward off wintry blasts that otherwise swoop through cracks in decrepit wooden walls—all these are worth nearly as much as a coal wagon at the door to many and many a family on the verge of perishing with cold. Therefore, I ask, how many of these life savers can you spare? Let's make it a life saving week by giving all these first line defenses against King Winter that we can muster!

Couple in Need.

"I am sending you herewith the names of a couple much in need. The man, an invalid, is 63; his wife, 55, is ill, but has to earn the living for both. They would appreciate any kindness shown them. "MRS. K."

Probably their chief needs are clothes and comforts for the home. To those interested we shall be pleased to give this name and address.

Ill for Months.

"I have been ill for sixteen weeks and will be for some time to come, the doctor says. If any of your readers have books or magazines they will send or loan I will be more than thankful for them. If they do not want me to return them I will pass them on to some other shut-in. Also, could some kind reader give me an old sweater coat, size 42 or 44? My little girl also needs a sweater, size 9. I can fix over anything.

"MRS. E. W."

Surely it will be easy for some one to make this mother's long illness brighter by giving these simple articles.

Home Is Bare.

"I know a widow with four children under 12 years of age to support. She cares for her children excellently and keeps her home in splendid condition, but it's a bare home at best. The only furniture consists of a couple of beds and chairs. Can some one supply this family with rugs so that the home may be made more comfortable and the floors warmer? The two girls, 12 and 11, are badly in need of dresses. The boy 9 needs waists and stockings and the smallest child, a boy of 5, needs a coat. All need stockings and underwear. C. P. P."

Here is a case where almost anything you can give will help!

Mother Is Ill.

"My mother has been in bed since October. For a little while she seemed to be getting better, but now she is worse.

"She caught a cold because I have not enough bed clothes for her, and in case she gets up during the night she has to walk across a cold floor.

"I cannot afford to buy blankets or covering for the floor, and I make just enough to give her proper food. I wonder if any of your readers have any blankets or pieces of rugs or carpets they could let me have. I surely would appreciate them. V. P."

This sort of thing must not be—when we can relieve it so easily.

One Girl to Another.

"I am the president of a girls' club. The ages range from 14 to 17 years. Some of these girls are employed in factories and some are schoolgirls. We should like to correspond with girls of our ages and older, all over the states. We are part of the girls reserve, belonging to the Y. W. C. A. Please have all girls write to me, and I shall give their addresses to the girls here, so every letter will get an answer.

"MISS T. K."

Surely this is an opportunity which will appeal to many lonely girls throughout the country.

Tomorrow we are not going to stop at $75,000. We beat that figure last year, and bargains are so much greater this year that we expect to sell $100,000. In fact, we have been known to sell as high as $180,000 in one day. This is a big city, it is filled with shrewd people. They know values. They have confidence in this Furniture Department. Great preparations have been made to serve you promptly tomorrow. If salesmen are not available just write your own orders, everything is plainly marked. There is but one price. We regret that we cannot take care of telephone or mail orders tomorrow. Large purchases may be held until May 1st for those who go to housekeeping at that time. For single suites we prefer to deliver promptly. Small articles will be delivered within one week. If you please, we must have it understood that we cannot on a busy day like tomorrow sell furniture subject to cancellation. Please be prepared to pay one-fourth cash, balance may be paid monthly.

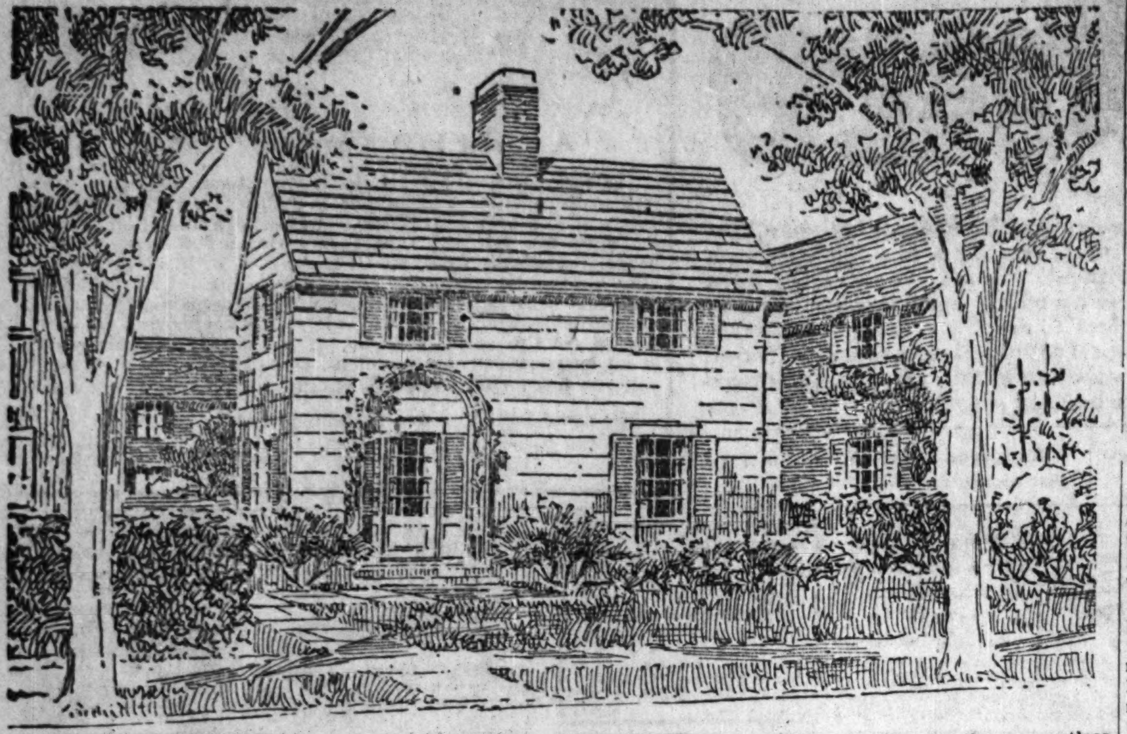
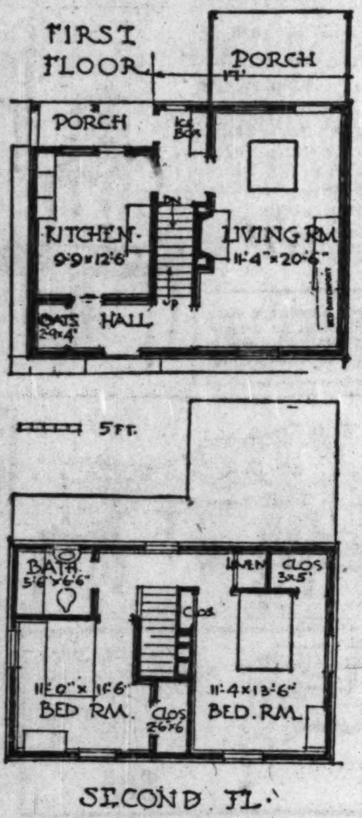
Many Flat Dwellers Can Now Plan for Homes of Their Own



By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



THE turning of the new year brings to the mind of apartment dwellers consideration for the renewal of their leases for another term. Many of them may have decided to alter their present situations and are contemplating severing themselves from the decorum and narrowness of apartment house life by building homes of their own.

It is not too early in the year to proceed with the planning of a new home. The necessary consultation with the architect or builder, in order that the plans may reflect the owner's needs in every respect, and other preliminaries before work can be started, will consume some time.

The early part of the year, before the actual building season opens, is the best time to go ahead with construction work. Prices are undoubtedly lower in February than at any other time, and as contractors have not signed up all of their work for the building season they are in better position to accept new contracts. Indications point to the continuance of building operations on the present unusually large scale for this season, and prices of building materials and wages in the building trades, instead of declining after February, will probably show a substantial increase. So the man or woman who is contemplating building should lose no time but should make the necessary arrangements at the earliest opportunity.

An important point to consider is the desirability of the building site. In cities especially, satisfactory locations are rapidly increasing in value, and the early buyer will have the advantage. As a matter of fact, the continued increase of ground values for desirable property is bound to compensate those who build now for any possible slight decline in values of building construction, such as might possibly occur three or four years from now, when the housing shortage will have been overcome. With the great dearth of desirable homes still existing, it is not likely that this condition will be reached until 1926 or 1927, and those who build now will have saved a substantial sum in the intervening time, considering what they would have paid for rental of equally desirable quarters.

Architect Olaf W. Shelgren of Buffalo has prepared the design for the four room clapboarded cottage which is shown today. This attractive little home contains four good sized rooms and can be built conveniently on a 35 or 40 foot lot, still leaving space for a large garden and a garage in the rear.

The entrance is surmounted by a curved trellis. There is a convenient coat closet just to the left. To the right is a combination living and dining room, with an interesting real fireplace. In small homes the combining of living and dining rooms is advisable, as this concentration of space permits of having two bedrooms. Undoubtedly the extra bedroom is more useful than a separate dining room.

The location of the kitchen is such as to make it convenient of access to the dining portion of the main room. It is also within easy access of the front door. This point is particularly desirable in the servantless household. The kitchen has a large built in cabinet, with the sink probably placed directly under the wide double windows. The ice box is near the entry, which opens out on to the service porch.

Upstairs are two bedrooms and a bath. Each of the bedrooms is a well lighted and ventilated corner room, has a clothes closet, and has been planned so as to permit an attractive grouping of furniture. There is also a linen closet within convenient reach of the bath and bedrooms. Advocates of better construction have advised the use of fire resistive metal lath and plaster on the under side of the stairs leading to the upper floor, and on the partitions surrounding the stairwell in order to provide a fire safe and ready means of exit, should a conflagration occur. This is in line with the recent investigations of fire prevention engineers on this important phase of home building construction.

In the basement there are a furnace room, fuel storage, laundry, and coal room. Dust tight partitions separate the fuel and the furnace rooms from the others. This is of great help to the home owner in reducing the upkeep of decorating necessary for the upstairs rooms. It also provides a clean space to be used as a drying room.

The cold room is now recognized as an essential convenience for the storage of potatoes, other vegetables, and preserves, and will be prized by the saving housewife who puts in a supply of vegetables in season, when they are most plentiful.

For the exterior, Mr. Shelgreen has specified the clapboards to be painted cream color, and the blinds blue green. The roof of taupe shingles will form a pleasing combination with the other parts. A building of this type could be satisfactorily built at a moderate cost, the price depending upon the locality, and the type of plumbing, lighting fixtures, millwork, trim, and other details used in the interior construction.

Answers to Queries.

P. L.: Striped silk rep, repeating the colors in your living room, would be attractive as window drapes. If you wish to have figured drapes in your bedroom, nosegay chintz would be nice. So glad the articles are of interest to you. Thank you for your complimentary appreciation!

H. W.: Two toned gray walls with old blue drapes would be attractive in your living room.

E. A. A.: Carry out a color scheme of jade green and silver in your bedroom. Have the walls done in two toned gray paper and the woodwork enameled French gray. Use silver gauze glass curtains, with jade green taffeta drapes and couch cover. Make shields and lamp shade of Chinese pink silk. Paint the floor a deep taupe.

H. U.: Chinese rugs, with a preponderance of dull rose color, would be attractive in your dining and living rooms. For glass curtains have ecru silk gauze, and use striped casement silk, combining the colors in your rug, for drapes.

E. M. D.: Have your walls calcimined ecru. Use ecru voile glass curtains, with drapery rose, sage green, dull blue, and old cretonne on an ecru ground for drapes. Du Barry rose rep could be used for bed and dresser covers. A small desk and chair, in walnut, would be attractive in your room.

ADRIFT.

DARLING: I have no right to call you that, but tonight I am held by the spell of the glorious eastern night and am not responsible for what I say. By tomorrow I shall be a stranger in a strange land, and my heart grows sick as I think of our parting.

I know you have already forgiven me, Diana, but you can never forget, neither can I. You were like a frail and beautiful flower, your superb beauty dazzled me, and my reasoning failed. I knew I could never marry you, yet, abominable fool that I was, I made you love me, only to break your heart.

Diana, little sweetheart, the night winds are softly murmuring your name, and my heart cries out with passionate longing to take you in my arms once again and tell you how much I love you. If only for one moment, I know I should never again be strong enough to put you aside. Nationalities nor accursed wealth should ever come between us again.

If you had reproached me for deserting you, it might have been easier, but you were silent. I can see you tonight as you looked at me, your great dark eyes filled with unshed tears, the ache in your heart showing clearly in your beautiful face—but I must go no further, tomorrow we reach the Land of the Lily, and tonight I must turn over the last page of my dream book and lay it aside forever.

I shall never cease to pray for the forgiveness I know I do not deserve. I must go adrift on the sea of life, a ship without a sail.

Fleeting years can never erase your memory, Diana darling, but they may bring you to my arms again in that blessed beyond, where I shall tell you how I loved you, loved you to eternity.

My beautiful little Italian flower, farewell!

RICHARD.

CARAMELS AND CUSTARDS.

THE uses of caramel are many and its history more interesting than many who use it realize. Custards are dainty, and perhaps caramel custard may be the daintiest of any. At any rate, when turned out of a mold with a light brown sirup around it the appearance has been such as to gratify the lover of sweets of the entremets order.

One sees endless caramel custards in the city of Paris, where the caramel custard is called "crême renversée," that is, a cream turned bottom side up. An inverted custard does look like molded cream and suggests something quite different and more elegant than the custard served right side up. This is supposing it comes out of the mold without breaking.

If we look around our battery of kitchen utensils perhaps we shall not find in all the list a single utensil for making a caramel custard of the French type, which turned out of its mold looks much like a round cake two inches or more high and six or eight inches across. Individual molds need to be rather deep to be effective, and with a flat bottom.

Since the caramel is to be made in the pan in which the custard is to be baked, there is no utensil so good for this purpose as aluminum. Tin will blacken above the sugar when the latter gets hot enough to brown, and you may ruin a fine tin mold in that way.

Making the Caramel.

The custard itself may have these proportions: One egg to one cup of milk and perhaps one tablespoon of sugar. If considerable caramel is used to a single mold no plain sugar is really required, but a bit of salt with the milk and egg brings out the flavor. Set mold in which it is baked into a pan of hot water.

Now as to the making of the caramel: Recently there was an article printed in caramel making in which the writer rather goes into ecstasies about making caramel in the pan in which custard is to be cooked, and rolled around after made so as to line pan perfectly, in the proportions of one-fourth cup of water to one-half cup of sugar.

Now, as everybody knows who has cooked sugar with water alone without an acid or some glucose to soft ball, and to hard ball or crack stage (this is caramel or fifth degree stage), a mere touch or stir will make it at some point turn back to sugar. You can melt sugar in a perfectly dry utensil and it will not do that, and you can stir it all the time to keep it even before and after it begins to brown, when it rapidly colors all through and must be removed from the fire quickly.

Uses Are Varied.

Carameled sugar is broken up and used for flavor; it is combined with nuts for brittle or nougat; it is used to glaze nut meats like those of walnuts; it is poured in a fine stream and crisscross to ornament a cream or cake with a cover; it is used for sticking pastries together; to flavor a cooked cream, and from a few quotations we may show what innumerable uses it has.

But as to its history! One pastry maker writes: "Not only cooks but many others likewise ought to feel grateful to Count Albufage Caramel of Nismes, who invented caramel. It is used for giving a brown color to an immense number of eatable and drinkable articles, and is not only harmless but gives an agreeable flavor in some cases, as in creams. Put some sugar in the frying pan over the fire, let it burn darker than browned coffee, then fill up the pan with water, boil, and strain."

Colors Soups and Sauces.

Of course, this caramel is almost burned and when wet up is used for coloring soups and sauces rather than creams. Salt, vegetable seasonings, etc., are added to it to make what is often called "kitchen bouquet."

Another cook writes thus: "Caramel.—Burnt sugar. Said to have been named from a Viscount Caramel. It is the stage in boiling sugar when the boiling ends and it begins to turn brown. At that stage it has a pleasant taste like some brown candies. Caramel coloring.—Sugar burnt in a frying pan until it smokes and turns black, water then added, boiled, strained, used in giving the brandy color to soups, jellies, and spirits. Caramel pudding.—Sugar melted down in a mold and run all over the interior while cooling; filled up with a custard of cream and yolks; steamed. Caramel ice cream.—Brown almond nougat, made by melting sugar to caramel with almonds mixed; when cold, pounded fine and mixed in ice cream instead of sugar."

The dictionary forgets or never heard of Count Caramel and gets the "mel" from mellis, meaning honey, from which originated our English word mellifluous (of speech). As to coloring spirits, any one who was ever in the town where old bourbon whisky was made in the old days, knows that it came out from manufacture as white as alcohol and was then put into barrels which had been carameled, as it were. They were of sweet wood burned out, and even the cellulose of the trunk of a tree contains a sort of sugar which may be caramelized by fire.

Old Days Extravagant.

In the quotation above it says "cream" for custard. In the extravagant old days that was what they used. I have an old cook book containing many custard recipes, and all call for cream. The great cooks use only the yolks for custard, since they can manipulate them without getting bubbles, although by beating a youlk with cold water we can get as many bubbles as with the white.

And about that almond nougat. It is just almond brittle or melted sugar poured over cut up almonds in some cases or with the almond stirred in for other uses. In the first case it is broken fine for flavorings and may be sprinkled like crumbs over butter icings in whipped cream, etc. In the other case it is kept warm and manipulated by rolling out in a thin sheet and cutting into forms. Cups, with a saucer, may be made of it in which to serve whipped cream, or the French make it up into resemblance of books, fans, furniture, etc., and I once saw a triumphal gateway made of it with the four horses and chariot on the top of the same material. This is what the French would do where the Italians would use chocolate for myriads of forms.

Sugar Must Be Watched.

It is not necessary to oil a mold in which a caramel to be turned out is cooked, but some of the old recipes read thus: "The insides of well oiled molds are often ornamented with this sugar, which with a fork should be spread over them in fine threads or net work. A dish of light paste, tastefully arranged, looks pretty with this sugar spun lightly over it. The sugar must be carefully watched and taken up the instant it is done."

In describing the making of caramel this recipe said: "Keep it boiling until the sugar snaps, when a little of it is dropped in a pan of cold water." In making a considerable quantity this test might be used, but in making small quantities it browns so rapidly that it is not well to stop for this, nor necessary. But the snapping as caramel cools is interesting, and is prevented say when you are putting a layer over the top of a nut garnished cake by spinning it over.

In another book in which caramel is misspelled, or written "carmel," and given as the fifth degree of cooking sugar—the other degrees are called [1] smooth, [2] bloom, [3] feathered [4] crackled—it says you must "prove it by dipping a stick, first into the sugar, and then into cold water, but this you must observe, that when it comes to the carmel height, it will the moment it touches the water, snap like glass."

Barley Sugar.

In a good old cook book it tells how to make caramel by cooking sugar with water and a little acid, and defines it as "barley sugar," which is often lightly carameled. In one great book of cookery definitions it defines barley sugar thus: "Old fashioned sort of clear stick candy. No particular reason for the name, but taste resembles barley malt."

In making this some lemon juice was added to the melted sugar when it began to form large bubbles, and after the lemon juice was added it was stirred all the time. The acid is added to keep it from becoming sugar again. The directions about the stirring are "If wanted for candy it must be stirred without ceasing [after the lemon juice is added] until it rises almost to the top of the pan, in one large, white mass, when it must be used immediately or ladled out into paper cases or onto dishes, with the utmost expedition, as it passes in an instant almost from this state to one in which it forms a sort of powder, which will render it necessary to add water, to stir until dissolved, and to reboil it to the proper point."

Sugar is cooked to the caramel stage, but not browned, for spinning as well as for barley candy, and the test is that when at the right stage it falls into water with a bubbling sound and cracks. For sugar spinning it is taken instantly from the fire and the utensil set in cold water.

"The Quickest Way."

The old book last mentioned gives "the quickest way" of making caramel, and so the quickest, of course, for barley candy and spun sugar. This is: "Put into a brass skillet or preserving pan, some sifted sugar of the finest quality, and stir it softly with a wooden spoon or spatula, over a gentle fire until it has become a liquid; a pale or a deep tint may then be given it, according to the purpose for which it is required; so soon as it is entirely melted and looks clear, it is ready for use. Pastry cooks glaze small pastry by just dipping the surface into it; and they use it also for nougat and other confectionery. When the sugar first begins to melt, it should be stirred only just in that part, or it will [illegible] equally colored."

In making the famous gateau St. Honoré, the tiny patries, or little balls of cream puff paste, are covered with and fastened together, and on to a round of plain cooked pastry with barley sugar or caramel, and there are a number of French confections of a similar sort built up this way, particularly holders for whipped and cooked creams.

In reference to using melted sugar just before it caramelizes (barley sugar stage), the old cook advises pouring it out on a marble slab or a shallow dish slightly oiled, and "when it begins to harden at the edges, form it into sticks, lozenges, balls, or any other shape at pleasure. While it is still liquid it may be used for various purposes, such as Chantilly baskets [holders for whipped cream], palace bonbons, etc."

Syrup Pepsin Helps Nature Give Relief

Try it when a Laxative is needed and see the wonderful results

IT is not necessary to take a violent physic for so simple an ailment as constipation. Yet many thoughtless parents give mercury in the form of calomel, and coal-tar in the form of phenol when a natural vegetable compound like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do the work equally well and without danger. People should realize that mercury may salivate and in certain conditions loosen the teeth; that phenolphthalein, by whatever name known and however disguised in candy, may cause dermatitis and other skin eruptions; that salt waters and powders may concentrate the blood, dry up the skin and cause lassitude.

You can take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin yourself or give it to a babe in arms, as thousands of mothers do every day, with the confidence that it is the safest and best medicine you can use for constipation and such complaints. A teaspoonful will relieve you over night even if the constipation has been chronic for years. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, and does not cramp or gripe. Every druggist handles it, and bottles are so generous that the cost amounts to only about a cent a dose. You buy it with the understanding that if it does not do as claimed your money will be refunded. The names of all the ingredients are on the package.

Mrs. A. Arceneaux of Orange, Texas, suffered from constipation for six years and found no relief until she took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin; and Mrs. Gus Anderson of Ball, Kans., corrected her bowel trouble so that she now eats and sleeps normally. Bring a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin into your own home and let the family use it for constipation, biliousness, wind, gas, headaches, flatulency, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

The flavor of Vermont maple—at its best

WHY the sap of Vermont maples produces syrup more exquisite in flavor than that from any other part of the country is Nature's secret. But whatever the reason—the fact of its perfection remains and it is that which makes Mayflower Syrup so different from other pancake syrups.

Mayflower Syrup is made right where this "best-of-all" maple can be obtained for it—right where men who know the art of maple syrup making, as it is known only in Vermont, can blend it.

Just enough refined granulated sugar is added to make Mayflower Syrup a trifle more syrupy and richer looking. The utmost care is taken to retain the rich taste of the maple. Vermonters are too proud of the flavor of Vermont maple to spoil it.

You can buy Mayflower Syrup in either cans or bottles in pint and quart sizes. The half-gallon, gallon and five gallon quantities are put up only in hermetically sealed cans. The gallon contains a full eleven pounds; and a pint, one and three-eighths of a pound. To be sure of getting full measure, buy Mayflower.

You can keep this syrup indefinitely, but you'll want to eat it and get more instead of "keeping" it. Be sure to order some today at your grocer's.

PERHAPS you have thought it no longer possible to buy pure maple syrup or sugar. But if you ask for the Green Mountain Boy brand you'll get the old-fashioned kind—entirely pure product of Vermont maples.

Soft maple sugar is now put up in cans under the name and a wonderful delicacy called Maple Sugar Cream, made exclusively by the Welch Bros. Maple Co. It is in the form of a smooth paste, with the "grain," which is characteristic of maple sugar, removed—perfect for fillings, icings and candy.

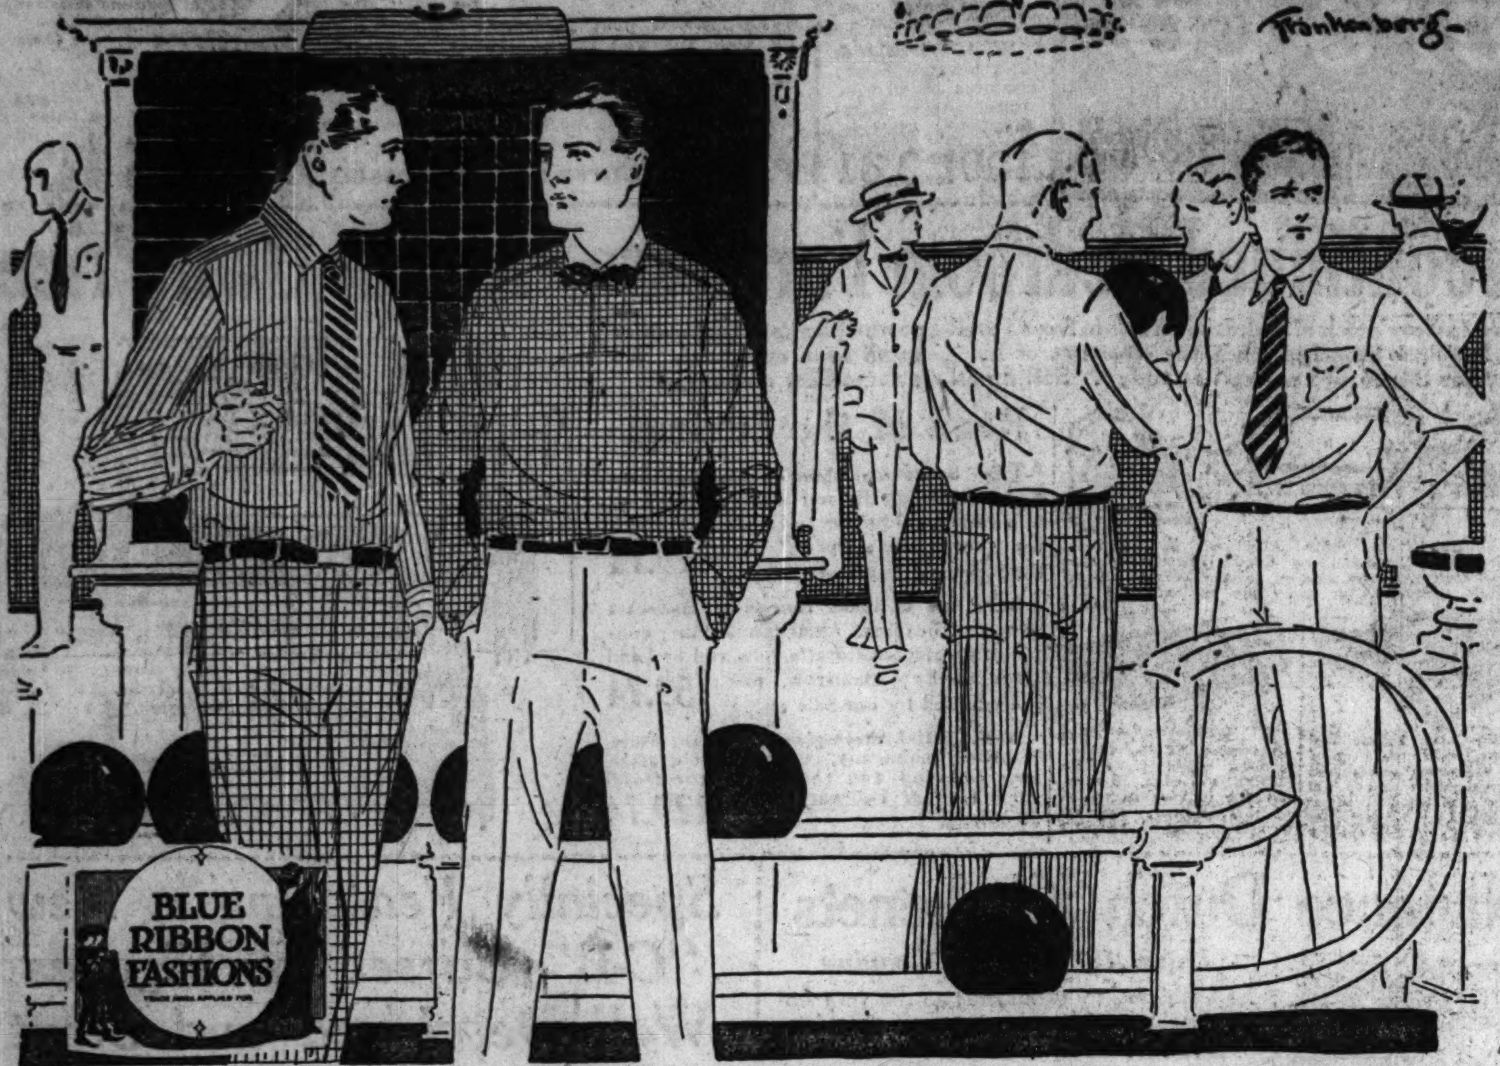
MEN'S FASHIONS



SHIRTS MEN ARE WEARING.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—When you pull a clean shirt out of your shirt drawer in the morning and nonchalantly put it on you are doubtless quite unconscious of the details which surround its evolution as a garment. The story of the shirt is, of course, not as fascinating as that of shoes or gloves, for it always has been and still is a more or less retiring object of apparel, as shirts, like small children, should be seen and not heard.

That is, the well dressed man of today uses his shirt as a background for the rest of his clothes, or as a pleasing touch of color, and does not indulge in loud patterns or colors, while the article of older days, with the exception of certain heavily embroidered models of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, was always of pure white, of the finest cloth. However, one should be interested in the beginnings of anything, and so, enter a few facts about the shirt.

Although there is no definite proof, it is probable that linen shirts were worn by the Anglo-Saxons as far back as the eighth century. About what they wore before that no one has done much theorizing. That linen shirts were worn by at least the wealthier classes in the tenth century is an established fact. To which we might add that the price of linen must have been a great deal lower in those days, or we would be absolutely sure that it was only the wealthy men about town who were proud owners of linen shirts.

Shirts were always made of the thinnest and finest white materials, including linen, lawn, and cambric. Silk shirts appeared for the most part in poetry. Woolen shirts were worn only as a most severe penance, being enjoined by canonical law. Evidently men didn't "put them on" in winter, and "take them off" in spring in those days, or they wouldn't mind a little thing like a woolen shirt.

Shirts were pretty much hidden under doublets and coats until the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, when they began to cut the doublets lower in the neck and open in the bosom in order to show the finess and whiteness of the shirts. The origin of the laundry bill can probably be traced back to this same time. Not satisfied with plain fine white cloth, the dandies began to have their collars and shirt fronts embroidered with black or blue silk, or silver and gold thread. Plaited shirts also began to make their appearance. But all these fancy tricks were limited to the élite. During Henry the Eighth's reign an order was passed forbidding every person under the dignity of knight to wear "plaited shirts, or plain shirts garnished with silk, gold, or silver."

In the time of Charles II. the shirt became quite a conspicuous part of man's costume. Full shirt sleeves were displayed above the elbows and the jerkin became short, allowing the lawn shirt to show between it and the breeches. At the end of the eighteenth century and during the first part of the nineteenth, frilled or gathered shirt fronts were the last word in style, although the large stocks which were the prevailing neckwear often covered up most of the shirt which was left to sight after the high cut waistcoat was put on.

The stiff fronted frilled shirts, shared honors soon with plaited fronts, which have survived to this day. Plaits have softened down a little, but they are the same plaits, and form a frequent addition to a man's costume, both in the evening with dinner coat, or with the day time sack suit. Today the plain white shirt does not reign supreme, as it has through the past centuries, but it holds a most important place, for it is the only possibility for evening wear and extremely formal day time affairs, and for wear with business suits it is the favorite of a great many men.

However, the solid colored shirt with collar to match is becoming rather a powerful rival, especially in the pastel tints of blue. It is also popular in light gray, tan, green and heliotrope. Although the plain bosom is the most common, plaited bosoms in colored shirts are often seen and are quite proper. Shirts of solid color may be bought with collar attached or with attachable collar to match. The fact that these shirts come with only one collar should not be an objection, for when the collar has become worn, as it will before the rest of the shirt has, a white collar may be substituted.

The most popular materials for these colored shirts are a sort of pongee, and English broadcloth. The latter is one of the best sellers in the plain white shirt, along with the ever popular oxford weave. English broadcloth is made entirely of cotton, and due to a special treatment, possesses a silklike sheen and a remarkable endurance. The best English broadcloth is made of an Egyptian cotton, but domestic brands are successfully manufactured from the native cotton.

Figured shirts are pretty much in the background these days. The tendency in figures is towards neat small designs. There are always a certain number of striped patterns, but they are not as universally popular as formerly, the solid colored shirt having put them out of business.

Believe It or Not.

No one ever believes us when we tell this story, but Mary and I did experience it, and although it happened years ago when we were in grammar school, we laugh over it to this day.

We were at a most impressionable age and had heard that the reason English girls have such lovely complexions is because there is so much rain in England and rain is a great beautifier. We resolved to see what it could do for us. Accordingly, one drizzly summer day we set forth in hiking regalia, minus hats, since we wished our hair to get the full benefit of the experiment.

The rain not only became decidedly uncomfortable; we found we were attracting the attention of passers-by. Eventually we passed nothing but broad grins, and some people walked backwards in their anxiety not to miss anything. Finally, glancing behind, I saw two squirrels—not just one, but two—walking side by side in our wake.

You may believe me or not, but those squirrels followed us for two blocks, not running, but walking sedately behind us, as a fitting climax to our ridiculous procession. M. E.

One Never Knows.

It was miles and miles from civilization in the Rocky mountains. My fiancé and I were traveling to father's ranch. We had seen no one for hours. Bill stopped the horses on a curve of the silent, pine edged road, and looked out across the valley to the snowy mountains beyond.

He said, "Sweetheart, we're all alone on wonderland. I love you." And he leaned over and kissed me.

"Toot, toot!" honked a car, startling us. We turned around. A car, filled with fishermen, had slipped calmly behind us. The passengers were enjoying the little scene. The road was a narrow, one way mountain one, so we were forced to go on, listening to the laughs behind us, until we came to a wide spot where they could pass. G. S.

Full of High Spirits.

About 5.30 the other night I hard some one at the front door. Being busy in the kitchen and thinking it friend susband, I called out the usual "H'lo, dear."

No answer.

"H'lo, old dear," I varied the formula, and our 2 year old cyclone went racing in with her usual "Daddy, dear; daddy, dear!"

She stopped half way and all I heard was a sort of "hm" sound. I went to investigate, and there stood, not my husband, but a young man with his cap clutched in one hand and my vacuum cleaner, which had been sent to the shop for repairs, in the other.

The worst of it was that he was the same chap who had come to the door a few days before to get the cleaner and was greeted with "Come on in. 'Tisn't locked. Why all the sudden cold formality?"

I had mistaken him for a young neighbor with whom I am on familiar terms.

He no doubt considers me a mild sort of lunatic. I hope he won't spread the idea too far. G. F. M.

LINEN NAPKIN CASE.

HANDSOME dinner napkins that are not in constant use will keep beautifully white if laid in dark blue linen. And while one may simply fold a piece of the linen over them, entirely covering, most women prefer a case. The pattern shown here is a good one and doesn't take long to make.

Two lengths of linen are cut, measuring when finished 8 by 24 inches. If they are cut 8½ by 24½, that extra half inch will allow for a narrow hem, measuring about ⅛ inch in width, down both edges. Pull a thread to cut by, so it will be straight.

The first thing to do, after the strips are cut, is to lay the hems down the long sides of both pieces and stitch. Then put the same width of hem across the ends.

You will see, by looking at the diagram, that the ends of one strip are finished in points. Fold in place to form points and overhand the edges together. Lay the strip with ends pointed over the other strip, exactly as the drawing shows, and baste together on three sides. Holding the two pieces so that the strip with the square ends is uppermost, overhand or hem the two pieces together on three sides. Turn the other side up and cut a thin piece of pasteboard exactly the right size to slip into the edge that has been left open. This will be the bottom of the case, and the pasteboard will hold it firmly in place so that the napkins cannot be wrinkled.

Now with small stitches overhand the four sides together from the bottom up for three inches. You will see you have a regular box. Fold the square ends across one another and over these lay the pointed ends—these ends being held in place by a buttonholed loop and small button. The picture will show the position of the button and loop.

A case of this kind is easily laundered. Simply remove the pasteboard bottom. Shrink the linen before making the case so it will not shrink later.

When the First Gray Hair Shows—Use Sage Tea

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Complexion creams, soaps, [illegible] mines and such things come and go out. Stuart's Calcium Wafers keep right on as the rational way to clear the skin of pimples, redness, roughness and such imperfections. Their first action is to aid the system to get rid of the mass of waste products that seep into the blood and are apt to be absorbed into the tissues.

Then the Calcium itself is one of the essential elements that the system naturally absorbs and utilizes, particularly in keeping the skin in health. Thus there are decided benefits to be had from these wonder wafers, for no matter how pimply the skin, a box or two cannot fail to show marked changes. There begins to show the delicate rose-tint of the skin, it is smoother, of finer texture and with any ordinary attention to bodily hygiene the complexion soon shows wonderful improvement.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers of any druggist, and then you may count on a complexion worth having.

Try This Newer Form of Iron at Our Expense

Quickly Increase 'Pep,' Strength and Energy

"You cannot be well and strong and full of vigor, force and power unless your blood is rich in iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician in Bellevue Hospital (out-Door Department), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is your red blood that enables you to resist and overcome disease and that nourishes every organ in your body. Without iron your blood becomes thin, pale, and watery. Poor blood cannot nourish your vital organs and as a result you may have pains in your heart or kidneys, indigestion, headache, and feel all run-down and tired out."

When your blood lacks iron, do not waste your time taking stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, but directly enrich your blood with the newer form of iron, known as Nuxated Iron. You can obtain from any druggist the regular full-sized package on two weeks' trial. Tear out the coupon below and get your trial bottle of Nuxated Iron today from your own druggist. Take it for two weeks and if you have not, like thousands of others, obtained most surprising new health, strength and energy, your own druggist will promptly refund your money.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the outside wrapper to your own druggist, who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

GREAT

for a short time only, of genuine latest model NAPANEE DUTCH KITCHENETS

An Opportunity Unequaled!

The facts are these: We, the above listed dealers, by joint action have secured direct from the factory—at most advantageous concessions—two entire train loads, literally thousands and thousands of the finest Napanee Dutch Kitchenets ever produced!

To quickly dispose of this enormous purchase, we realize that we must sweep away every obstacle which previously has compelled you and other women to struggle along three times a day without the most necessary of all labor-savers, a modern kitchen cabinet.

Accordingly we announce this Great Co-operative Sale with every cabinet drastically priced. Furthermore, we have made the down payments and terms so ridiculously low that any woman—regardless of circumstances—can now beautify her kitchen and commence to save herself time and steps without another week's delay!

Do not fail to visit the nearest store this week—run no risk of missing this opportunity of a lifetime! Come, if for nothing more than to admire the beauty and convenience of these wonderful cabinets—every one a brand new, latest model Napanee Dutch Kitchenet.

Do You Know Why We Chose Napanees?

We could easily have obtained any quantity of ordinary kitchen cabinets for a sale like this.

We wanted, however, to feature nothing short of the best—on a basis to outrival even the regular run of cabinets.

We consider ourselves fortunate in being able to offer Napanee Dutch Kitchenets for they compare with Steinway Pianos in their field.

They Hold the Record for Saving Steps

Of course you have known of Napanee Dutch Kitchenets for years. But are you aware that they hold the world's record for saving time and steps?

Harrington Emerson, the great efficiency expert, demonstrated this. By scientific comparisons, he proved that a Napanee—due to its superior arrangement and exclusive conveniences—actually saves a woman an average of 1,592 steps a day in her kitchen! That stands as the record.

So you see you are being offered more than the finest looking, best finished and most durably built of all kitchen cabinets.

You are also being offered the champion time and labor-saver, the cabinet that will render you the most assistance three times a day, twenty-one times a week and over 1,000 times a year!

The Cost is Less Than One Cent a Day!

Life's too short to spend it needlessly in a kitchen for the sake of saving less than one cent a day! Spread over the years of daily help it affords you, actually that is all a Napanee costs!

Why, it's ridiculous to be without a Napanee! Would any man trudge all day across a kitchen floor to save a cent? Then why should you?

You simply can't afford to—it isn't right for you, to go on day after day, walking your strength away, a prisoner in your kitchen, now that it has been made so absurdly easy to have a genuine Napanee at once.

$39.75 is the amazing price

at which genuine latest model Napanee Dutch Kitchenets can be bought during this unprecedented sale. An almost unheard-of price, of course, made possible by the above reasons and because we are absolutely determined to make this sale the talk of the country. It is your chance! Seize it!

Terms too easy to think about

Special Exhibits All Week at Above Stores

Visit the nearest store listed above. Admire the Napanees shown in our windows. Then step inside and examine the cabinets more closely. You will be cordially welcomed but not urged to buy. If these marvelous labor savers, at their special sale prices, on the ridiculously easy terms we are offering, can't interest you, all we can do is to thank you for calling. May we suggest, however, that you drop in this week while our exhibits of the various models are complete? Catalog gladly mailed if you write Coppes Bros. & Zook, Nappanee, Indiana.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

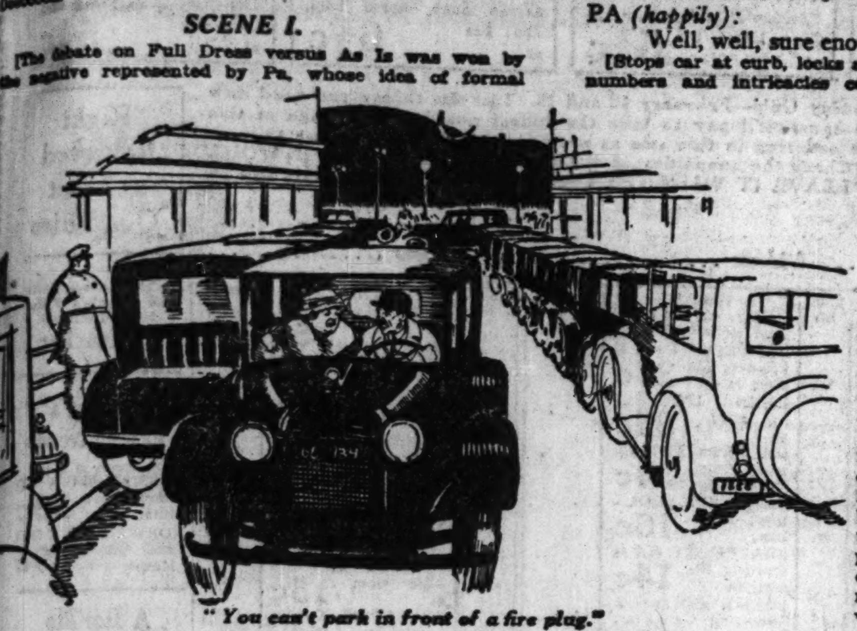
ILLUSTRATIONS—BY—J. H. STRIEBEL

PROLOGUE.

It is opera night for the Potters, an event which in chronological importance can be compared only to the night of the big wind . . . no easy task to pry Pa loose from twelve dollars for two seats to anything . . . ordinarily Pa wouldn't pay that much to see the twelve apostles in a relay race, but he must do something out of the ordinary to pacify Ma for his part in Bill's disappearance from home . . . well, Challapin in "Mefistofele" is something out of the ordinary, sure enough . . . and Bill Potter, ushering at the same opera in a dress suit, may provide the Potters with an additional thrill which they do not expect . . . suppose Ma should see Bill right in the middle of an aria? Oooooooh!

SCENE I.

[The debate on Full Dress versus As Is was won by the negative represented by Pa, whose idea of formal attire consists of taking off his wrist watch and transferring his fountain pen and pencil from his coat pocket to his vest . . . we will not go into the harrowing details of Ma's preparation for this event, as the object of these articles, if they have an object, is merely to reflect with gentle sympathy the infinite absurdities and complexities of life . . . let us then wave a magic wand over the painful sartorial preliminaries and discover Ma and Pa arriving at the theater in their car and trying to find a place to park it.]



"You can't park in front of a fire plug."

MA (indicating opening):
Park it there, Pa.

PA (querulously):
I told you four times already tonight you can't park in front of a fire plug.

MA (calmly):
Well, don't bark at me. I didn't put it there. (They drive on.) What's the matter with that place over there?

PA (as taxi hooks his fender and jerks loose):
Dad blast you!

MA (indignantly):
How dare you talk to me like that?

PA: I'm not talkin' to you. See what that taxi done. Bluh, bluh—— (Swears elegantly and with intense emotion to himself.)

MA (they are still riding 'round and 'round the entire parish looking for a place to settle):
There's a good open spot.

PA (mad clear through):
That's a loadin' zone. Don't you know a loadin' zone when you see it?

MA: How should I know a loading zone?

PA: You might learn how to spell. L-o-a-d-i-n——

MA (interrupting blithely:)
Look; there's a place.

PA (happily):
Well, well, sure enough.

[Stops car at curb, locks all of the various locks—their numbers and intricacies constituting a subtle symbol of Pa's faith in humankind . . . locks door and turns to walk six blocks to theater.]

RUDE VOICE:
Hey, there!

PA (with secret misgivings, affecting not to hear):
Come on, Ma; we'll be late.

R. V. (louder and ruder):
Hey, you! Getthahell outta dis taxi stand.

[Pa does so, after a few remarks appropriate to the occasion . . . conceives brilliant idea of parking in nearby alley . . . leaves it in the middle of the blackest part and skulks out of bright end with Ma, to be met by a majestic officer of the law with cold eyes, heavy lidded with malice.]

MAJESTIC OFFICER OF THE LAW:
Well, what's the big idea? What's your racket?

PA (who can always talk much better to an officer when he isn't there):
Who? Me?

OFFICER:
Yes, you; sure. Waddye doin'?

PA (confused):
What am I doing?

OFFICER (aggressively):
Yes. Waddye doin'? You, I'm talkin' to.

PA (getting scared, babbling):
Who? Me?

OFFICER (angrily):
Stop that who me stuff. What business ya got sneakin' out o' that alley? It looks suspicious to me.

PA: We parked our car there. We're going to the opera.

OFFICER (laughing mirthlessly):
Goin' to the opera. Haw! Haw! Thass rich. You parked your car in the alley, did ya? Well, you can take it right out o' the alley again. What do ya think o' that?

[We shudder to tell you what Pa thought of that, and as for Ma—well, she told that majestic officer to his face all the things motorists usually say to officers when they're a mile away.]

SCENE II.

[Meanwhile Bill Potter in his capacity as usher has been helping the late arrivals supply to the overture a few distinctive contrapuntal noises of their own. The curtains part disclosing prologue in Heaven. Clouds. The sound of seven trumpets. Seven thunderbolts. The celestial phalanxes invisible behind clouds. Mystic choir. Cherubim. Penitents. Then Mephistofele alone in the shadow.]

PHALANX (with the solemnity of a Gregorian chant):
Ave, signor degli angeli e dei santi,
E dei volanti cherubini d'or.

BILL (crisp and business-like to new arrivals):
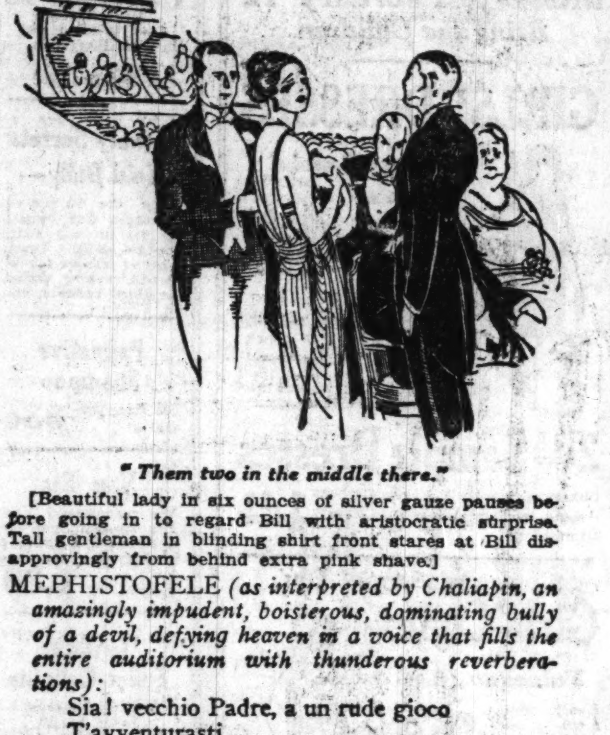
Them two in the middle there.



"Them two in the middle there."

[Beautiful lady in six ounces of silver gauze pauses before going in to regard Bill with aristocratic surprise. Tall gentleman in blinding shirt front stares at Bill disapprovingly from behind extra pink shave.]

MEPHISTOFELE (as interpreted by Chaliapin, an amazingly impudent, boisterous, dominating bully of a devil, defying heaven in a voice that fills the entire auditorium with thunderous reverberations):
Sia! vecchio Padre, a un rude gioco T'avventurasti.

[Surely he's a devil after one's own heart who can plant himself on a cloud and address the Creator off-hand as "Old Pop."]

BILL (to Fred, fellow usher, as Mephistofele roars his eternal defiance to the somewhat fatuous angelic hosts):
Ain't he a wow!

FRED:
Cripes, what pipes!

CHERUBIM (behind clouds, singing sickly sweet . . . one muses upon an eternity of such entertainment with vague misgivings):
Siam cori di bimbi, d'amori.

(Free translation):
We are a choir of babies, of little loves.

MEPHISTOFELE (sardonically):
E' lo sciame legger degli angioletti
Come dell'api n'ho ribrezzo e noia.

(Free translation):
It's those pesky little angels yapping again.
They give me a pain!

[Hisses and whistles at them with magnificent scorn and derision. Disappears in tremendous uproar of drums and cymbals . . . curtain falls, house lights go up, explosion of deafening applause from timid souls vicariously thrilled by a defiance which they have often felt but never dared express.]

SCENE III.

[The applause has subsided and the huge audience is tense and still, awaiting the parting of the curtains for the first act. The conductor stands with baton poised. Well down in front Bill Potter is seating a late arrival, blissfully unaware of fate coming down the aisle with dramatic momentum.]

PA (to Ma):
Here's the aisle; where's the usher?

[Pauses undecided—he can never remember whether the man should precede the lady going down the aisle or follow her. Ma takes the bit in her teeth and proceeds.]

MA (checking stub with letters on seats as she goes along):
It must be away down. Come on, Pa.

PA (checking stub with seats on his side):
'Tain't here. Must be further down.

[Season subscribers glare at innocent Potters with well bred annoyance. Potters continue journey down aisle, oblivious to their unkind sneers.]

MA (triumphantly—tenth row from the orchestra, in the middle of the white shirt and shoulder zone):
Here it is, Pa.

[Straightens up just as Bill turns around. Face each other for one unbelievable moment.]

MA (with a wild cry of recognition throws her arms around Bill's neck):
My boy! My baby!

PA (amazed, baffled, confused, embarrassed):
Bill! My gawd!

[A wave of excitement sweeps through auditorium . . . look! look! What does it mean? An opera patron with her arms around an usher, crying, "My boy! My Baby!" Another opera patron, presumably the husband, fidgeting beside her, looking unutterably foolish . . . necks are craned, shirt fronts crackle . . . astonishment sweeps the first floor . . . batteries of opera glasses are leveled in well bred amazement from the boxes . . . bewilderment in the balcony . . . curiosity in the gallery.]

BILL to Ma, in stupefied embarrassment):
Ma, everybody's lookin' at us. Here, sit down quick.

PA (whose delight in seeing Bill again is swamped in painful confusion):
Come on, quick, Ma; sit down.

MA (hysterically to Bill):
Come on; we'll go right home.

PA (thrifty soul):
Say, I paid twelve dollars for these seats. We'll see Bill after the show.

BILL (anxious to promise anything to get out of this predicament):
Sure, I'll see you after the show.

MA (clutching his sleeve in death-like grip):
Honest? You won't run away again?

BILL (who is just as anxious to get home as she is to have him):
No, I'll wait for you in the lobby.

[Sensitive ears cringe as the word "lobby" impinges on their delicate tympani.]

MA (straining him to her bosom for one more kiss, which Bill vainly fights against):
All right, then; after the show. My baby!

[Ma floats into seat oblivious to the consternation she has caused . . . Pa slings in after her, burning bright with blushes . . . Bill hurries out and changes back to his civies . . . going home tonight! . . . good-by, World . . . you'll remember the sturdy wallops Bill gave you while he was battling his way to fame and fortune . . . what will Pa say? And Ma? And Mamie? And, most important of all, Anabelle?]

And That's That Until Next Sunday.

Fortune Telling by Cards

by DORIS BLAKE

Do you want to tell fortunes by cards according to an astrological system—one which identifies the inquirer more closely with the workings of fate because his day and month of birth are registered in this system?

Take a full pack of fifty-two cards. Choose a card to represent the inquirer, which is settled according to complexion—a diamond if he or she be fair; a heart for those of medium coloring; a club for a medium brunette, and a spade for those of extremely dark complexion; a king to represent a man; a queen a girl or woman.

Ask inquirer the day and month upon which he or she was born.

Thoroughly shuffle the cards and have inquirer cut them with left hand. Extract card to represent inquirer and place at left of the table. Then count off cards until you reach the number registered by inquirer's birth month; as, say, if she were born in June that would be the sixth; in January one, February two, March three, and so on. If born in June, we will say for example, place the sixth card face up next to the representative card already on the table. After you get this month card thoroughly shuffle pack and count off to day of the month; if it were the twelfth day, count to the twelfth card, and place this card face up next the month card.

Thoroughly shuffle remaining cards again, then count off three cards in top of pack in your hand, and lay aside for the surprise, not to be read till the last.

Shuffle remaining pack in hand again, and have inquirer cut with left hand; count off the first twelve cards on top now, and lay them face up in a row, following the cards already on the table. These twelve represent the twelve signs of the Zodiac.

Then read from left to right, weaving your own fanciful tale and exercising your own lively imagination with the aid of the card meanings I give below.

Read the surprise last after the card meanings given.

If there is a preponderance of hearts in the layout on the table, you may forecast that affairs of the heart and the home have much influence on the fortune; if diamonds, financial matters obsess the inquirer; with a generally favorable signification; clubs stand for prosperity, pleasure, and successful undertakings; spades forebode disappointment, losses, and anxieties and love unaccompanied by respect.

Meanings of cards:

DIAMONDS.

Ace: A ring or parrot. King: A light married man. Queen: Fair woman married or single, according to next card. Jack: Fair young bachelor. Ten: Money; falsehood when next to a male face card. Nine: Enjoyment. Eight: A parcel. Seven: Money. Six: A gift of money. Five: Children. Four: Marriage. Three: A surprise. Two: A visitor.

HEARTS.

Ace: Large dwelling or large building. King: Medium complexioned man; more red than sandy. Queen: Medium complexioned or rather red haired woman. Jack: Medium young man, red sandy hair. Ten: Proposal, either of business or marriage. Nine: The wish card. Eight: Pleasure. Seven: A new friend. Six: Gay society. Five: People. Four: A strange bed. Three: A strange country or a drive. Two: A kiss from a traveler or a short journey for yourself.

CLUBS.

Ace: A letter. King: Brown haired man. Queen: Brown haired woman. Jack: Brown haired young fellow. Ten: Either deep water or a long journey. Nine: Crosses. Eight: A disappointment. Seven: Troubles. Six: Eating and drinking. Five: Falsehoods and deceit. Four: Tattle. Three: Tears. Two: Little space of water.

SPADES.

Ace: Travel if point is up; package if point is down. King: Very dark man. Queen: Very dark woman. Jack: Dark young man. Ten: Sickness at distance. Nine: Anger. Eight: Vexation. Seven: Unexpected annoyance. Six: A quarrel or anxiety. Five: A death or drunkenness. Four: A sick bed. Three: Sorrow. Two: A coffin or an accident.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when properly prepared and taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest quality Willow charcoal powdered to extreme fineness, then compressed in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continuous use, but on the contrary great benefit.

Many physicians advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat. They are also believed to greatly benefit the liver. These lozenges cost but thirty cents a box at drug stores, and you get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

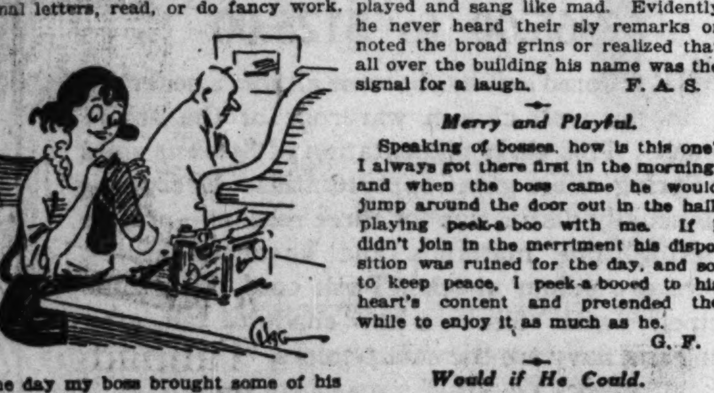
Queerest Boss I Ever Knew

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities and the frowns and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Time to Burn.

I worked in a small office which during dull seasons, I could write personal letters, read, or do fancy work.



One day my boss brought some of his socks for me to darn, and from that time on, even though he had a wife at home to do such things for him, he brought his shirts and socks regularly for me to mend.

M. K.

Averse to Effort.

Some time ago I was secretary to man who delegated all of his persona mail to me. I had to remember who he addressed as "Dear T. A." "Dea Chuck," "Dear Charlie," etc., and i was tragic if I failed to remember Even the complimentary endings were individual, and if I happened to forge which it should be I had to rewrite the letter. It got so I even had to sign my boss' initials or first name.

E. L.

Hated His Profession.

My queer boss was a middle aged optician. Although an expert, he hated his profession and dreamed of a musical career. Talent was sadly lacking but he took both vocal and violin lessons daily and made no progress whatever. However, he practiced incessantly, often keeping a room full of patients waiting for an hour while hideous discords poured over the transom. He craved an audience and utilized every one as such, often assembling janitors, elevators boys, and scrubwomen in his sanctum while he played and sang like mad. Evidently he never heard their sly remarks or noted the broad grins or realized that all over the building his name was the signal for a laugh.

F. A. S.

Merry and Playful.

Speaking of bosses, how is this one? I always got there first in the morning, and when the boss came he would jump around the door out in the hall, playing peek-a-boo with me. If I didn't join in the merriment his disposition was ruined for the day, and so, to keep peace, I peek-a-booed to his heart's content and pretended the while to enjoy it as much as he.

G. F.

Would if He Could.

I am chauffeur for a widow, and she is eccentric, to say the least.

If I have a puncture or blowout while on the road, she will invariably say, "Why, for pity's sake, William, didn't you fix it before we started?"

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

How to Use the Patterns

HOUSE dress patterns are probably always in demand, for most women have found out how attractively they may dress for home work in lovely gingham, percale ,or chambray. Pattern No. 1,588 is a design that has several unusually good points. It opens down the entire length of the front, which will make the laundering easy; and the skirt part, flaring slightly as it does towards the bottom, will give plenty of room to walk in easily or to move quickly in any direction.

The pattern shows a one piece back—from neck to hem—and the front, of course, is in two lengths, as it buttons down the middle of the front. The sleeve pattern provides for a long sleeve, gathered at the lower edge into a narrow wrist band; or a shorter sleeve, finished with a straight band that laps over and ends in a point. Then the belt does not go across the front, but buttons at each side—the belt ending in a point at each end, to match the sleeve bands.

The neck is cut square in the front, and the pockets complete the dress. The pattern, for size 36, measures at the bottom about 1¾ yards.

Where the belt buttons to the dress small pieces of tape should be hemmed on the under side of the fronts for sewing buttons to; or, better still, after hemming the tapes in place, use a stilletto to punch holes in each side, and work the eyelets in a fine over and over stitch. Use pearl buttons with a shank—use the same kind of buttons on the front of the dress, making eyelets on one side and buttonholes on the other. Then the buttons can be removed before washing—making it possible to put the dress through the wringer without danger of breaking anything.

Pattern No. 1,617 is for a child's dress and bloomers, and the straps that are used for trimming the front make it quite different from most little dresses.

The bloomers pattern is the usual one, with the ends of the legs gathered into bands, and the elastic used about the waist.

The dress is in two pieces—front and back—and buttons down the back. The trimming straps are stitched in with the shoulder seams and are slipped through slashes cut in the front of the dress.

The sleeves may be long or short, and the neck is finished without a collar.

Chambray in tan, brown, blue or green would be pretty for this dress, and the straps may be made of pin checked gingham and the neck and sleeve edges finished with the same check—putting it on as a narrow binding. Or, if one preferred, the same material could be used throughout, and the strap edges, sleeve edges, neck and parts of the front that cover the straps at the waist line could have some narrow cross stitch border design done on one or more contrasting colors.

Pattern No. 1641 is cut in such a way as to make it particularly becoming to the full figure; for while the long lines give it the slender effect that all of us prefer, the plaited sides will give ample room to walk in easily and will take away from that too tight appearance that one sometimes sees in plain skirts on really stout women.

Dark colors and dull finished materials will be more becoming, and in this design especially one material may be used to good advantage. The most difficult part of making this dress will be to lay the plaits, and this needn't be hard if done in the right way.

Perforations are made on the pattern, showing exactly how to lay these plaits, and a basting thread or French chalk should be used to mark each perforation. After the pattern is removed start with the plait at the right-hand end and pin in place from the top down. Look at the wrong side and see that the plait is as smooth as on the right side, then baste in place from the top to the bottom. Do this with every plait and leave the bastings in until the dress is finished and pressed.

The pattern gives a choice of a long, dart fitted, flaring or shorter length sleeve, and the opening at the neck, coming as it does to quite a deep point, is a becoming feature.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

You Ought to Be.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a fellow for five years. I love him dearly and I know my love is reciprocated. I am 20 and he is 22.

"I promised him I would not go out with other boys, which I have not done. And he promised me the same.

"At times I hate to decline invitations from other fellows and would just love to go out with them, but I feel that I would be doing him an injustice. Kindly advise me what to do, and please don't tell me I am only infatuated with him, as I really love him dearly. We are not engaged.

"C. S. K."

Don't you think you ought to be engaged if you have been going together for five years, and he exacts a promise like that from you? I do. At least you should have that feeling of security when you turn down all other invitations.

Torn Between Two.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 18, going out with a boy two years my senior whom I love dearly. I use rouge which he has great objection to. What would you advise me to do—give up the rouge or the fellow?

"CURIOUS."

As some of our novelists might say: "Torn between two loves," or "No mother to guide her." I might advise you to write out the first letter of the rivals on a slip of paper, toss them up in a hat, and draw. Instead would rather suggest you choose the youth, take long hikes with him, and the false blush will no longer need to come between you.

HOW DID HE PROPOSE?

Do you remember—of course you do—how your husband proposed to you? Where and how did it happen? Was he scared to death and weren't you on the verge of nervous prostration too? For Of course you knew he was going to do it—or didn't you? Perhaps he isn't your husband, but one of the fellows you had to "turn down." How about that? Tell us about it? This goes double for we want to hear from the men, too. A dollar for every letter printed. Address Proposal Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Hitting the Target.

I met a charming, athletic young man at a ball and at once we became interested in each other. He went with me for some time, and at another ball he invited me to go with him to his father's estate and practice archery. I accepted, and the next day he came after me, per schedule.

I do not know the reason, but the unexpected always happens, I believe. He made several nice shots and then endeavored to show me how. Owing to my extreme ignorance, he was forced to demonstrate with great care the manner with which the bow should be held. After some manipulation I made the shot, and by some miracle or other I managed to hit the target.

I thought it peculiar, but he did not comment on the marvel. I prepared the bow for the next shot and stood ready for some more help. He came to me and, instead of holding the bow, he held me, and tightly, too. After I had given up trying to get away he said: "Did you know that arrow went straight to my heart? I want you."

The "this is so sudden" line didn't work with this bold youth, but I have never regretted the outcome.

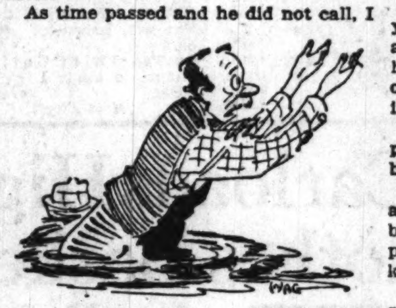
Wanted to Die.

Jimmy Davis was a prosperous farmer who had been persistently popping the question to me until I had lost my patience and told him never to mention marriage to me again. It hurt him so he never called on me thereafter.

As time passed and he did not call, I grew lonesome and realized how much I loved him. One day while taking a canter on horseback over the farm, I heard cries from a nearby swamp. As it was a treacherous place I rode gingerly forward to investigate, and found Jimmy up to his waist in the mire.



Hurrying home I returned with a rope which I threw to him, intending to pull him out with my horse. Grimly he looked at the rope without touching it. Angrily I told him to take hold—that I would get him out.

He replied, "Mabel, if you won't marry me I don't want to be saved, I'd rather sink out of life."

Desperate because he was sinking fast, I pleaded, "Jimmy, if you'll only let me save you, I'll marry you."

I pulled him to safety without further ado.

J. D.

Couldn't Be Otherwise.

After being my constant attendant during the entire summer vacation, Lewis was spending his last evening with me before returning to law school. We were both rather depressed at the prospect of another ten months' separation and were making each other comforting promises.

"Whatever happens to you this year, I want to be the first one to know about it, Lewis," I said. "If you win honors or are ill or become engaged or—or—anything, you'll let me know it first, won't you?"

It wasn't leap year, and I wasn't prepared for the answer my question brought.

Lewis turned and took my hands and said, "Of course, dear. When I become engaged you will be the first person in the world to know it. You know that, don't you, dear?"

And it turned out just as he prophesied.

E. T. A.

Absence Makes Him Bolder.

One day I heard a man's voice on the phone saying, "When shall we get married? Name the day!"

The voice was strange to me and I thought he had the wrong number, but I love a joke, so I answered—"Tomorrow!"

He hung up without a word, and I laughed to think of his saying that to a perfect stranger. However, next day my most bashful admirer came over with a ring and a license and we were married! He explained that he just couldn't ask me face to face, for I was always laughing at him, and excitement disguised his voice over the phone.

Anyway I love him and tease him just as much as ever!

Fleeting Glimpses of Adored Son of Italy in This Film

"THE ISLE OF LOVE."

Directed by Fred Balshofer SUPPOSEDLY featuring Rodolf Valentino.

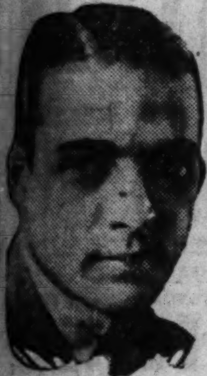
By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Motion picture producers have a new little game. It is called "Find a Picture with Rodolf Valentino SOMEWHERE in It."

They are frenziedly pawing among films they had thought shelved forever, in the hope that they shall discover—even though it be among the "extras"—the glowing countenance of the favorite of the hour.

"The Isle of Love" was once called "An Adventuress," and Julian Eltinge was ONCE the hero. Now, behold! we have "another Rodolf Valentino picture," and Mr. Eltinge, while mentioned, is MERELY mentioned. (Wonder how much they had to pay him to play second fiddle!)



RODOLF VALENTINO.
[Evans Photo.]

If I were you, in the future I'd find out just WHEN these "Rodolf Valentino" pictures were made. Then, if you are crazy enough about your idol to see him in bygone clothes, wearing a mustache, appearing once or twice, or maybe three times, in a film, and, when he DOES appear, doing practically absolutely nothing, I SAY—spend your money; for if you don't, somebody's baby is going to reach out and take it away from you.

It is by handing out such films as "The Isle of Love" in the way the picture is handed out that producers and exhibitors are queering the picture game. The public wants an honest deal, and will see to it—in time—that it GETS an honest deal. But UNTIL the publicly openly and unitedly refuses to be imposed upon—why, it's going to be the goat.

A man who knows much more about pictures than I do listened to me rave on the subject we've just been discussing. When I had finished he nodded.

"You're right—absolutely right," he said. "We picture people are queering our own game—to a certain extent. I admit it. BUT—we aim to give the public what the public demands. Just now the girls are Rudy-mad. All right—if they want to see Rudy, we'll help 'em along."

The present production is brought up to date by an amazingly clever subtitle writer, who rings in mention of "The Sheik," "The Young Rajah," and "Blood and Sand," with the apparent idea of convincing you that young Mr. Valentino made "The Isle of Love" LONG after the other films were released. That boy was clever (subtitle writer) and evidently convinced Mr. Barbee that the picture was a drawing card. Mr. Barbee believes, anyway, the saying of his famous ancestor that there's one born every minute.

And what is the picture all about? Well, my dears, a revolution is due to happen in one of those little countries that are always having revolutions in stories and on the screen, and Mr. Eltinge, who has a friend there, goes over to see what he can mix up in. He says, via a subtitle:

"Let's get dear old Jacques to go over, too!"—or words to that effect. Dear old Jacques is Mr. Valentino, who, when the picture was made, probably drew about $2 a day as an extra.

Pretty soon you see dear old Jacques, who is discovered writing at a desk. You see him later smoking a cigaret. You see him again riding in an automobile. In other words, he bobs up now and then as scenery, while Mr. Eltinge and the others do all the work.

The ladies who witness the picture will be able to tell how old it is by the clothes worn by the fair ones in the film.

The acting is all pretty good. Mr. Eltinge is a nice looking man and a beautiful woman. To him belong what honor and glory the film boasts.

Scenery, sets, and photography were probably considered quite the berries when the original picture was made. Now—well—yawn—not so good.

It's up to you. If your yearn for Mr. Valentino is so great that you feel you must see him, no matter how, when, or where—why—there he is, in "The Isle of Love."

But I'll tell you ONE thing—if it weren't my JOB to see everything that comes along, I certainly wouldn't be wasting time and eyesight on little old last year's films.

See you tomorrow!

ASK ME! ASK ME!

WANNAKNOW: A minaret is the balcony that is built on the outside walls of the temple of those who worship Allah. From this place the priest calls believers to prayer.

MEDICINE MAN: I feel all comfy about you again. The black streak's passed, hasn't it, and you're your own sunny self again? Pitching on the world in general doesn't especially hurt the world, you know, but it DOES make the pitcher himself mighty miserable. [Don't ask me HOW I know, but I DO know.] A personal letter will follow soon.

AN ADMIRER: O, I guess she's just resting. You're not the only "admirer" who's been inquiring about the lady.

TED P.: Just received your nice, racy letter about the mayor, et al. Ah—could HE only realize how you feel! Sapristi! Or words to that effect.

HARRY B.: Have the clipping, but it doesn't make sense to me. Please come across with a diagram.

OBSERVER: Seven expressions pored over with much interest.

JEAN U.: Well, wasn't Rodolf sweet! My dear, of COURSE it was not a slam! What handsome hero would slam such a devoted admirer? And in a foreign language, too. Yes, a hearse does make one think, but so does a taxi meter—so why worry? Come against, Jean. Glad you wrote.

SASSY B.: I understand that Mary Pickford has shelved "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" for the present, in order to make "Faust." She'll probably get around to it in time, however.

GEORGE H. W.: You were mighty nice to write that letter. Thanks awfully for what you said. No, quoth the lady, blushingly, I hath never had a book of short stories published. But you give me an idea. Why not? Won't you write again some time, please?

TENNESSEE JOE: No chance!

KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT—OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Tinée: Before I begin kicking, let me say that I am very sorry you were sick (you were, weren't you?), and extremely glad that you are again on your feet, although I'll wager you aren't really well enough to be. I think I can sympathize, for I know how the "flu" (it was the "flu," wasn't it?) feels.

My kick isn't much of a kick. One might say it is merely the wiggling of the toes, which itch for something to kick. Thus: In "Peg o' My Heart," in the wee, small hours of the morning, when Brent had been asleep in his car for several hours, and none, presumably, had been near, a half smoked cigaret lay smoking on the ground beside the car. One of the little things, to be sure, but they are important, don't you think?

Thank you for your time.

DON JUAN.

[Editor's Note: Yes, little things ARE important, including germs. Thanks awfully for your sympathy—but I'm a great big husky guy now.]

Dear Miss Tinée: Is a high class picture really appreciated in Chicago? There are times when I have my doubts. Not long ago I visited one of the smaller downtown theaters, and saw a picture which is rated as being the best shown here in months. The house was fairly well filled, and in the lobby I met one of the members of the company which was handling the Chicago distribution of the feature. He surprised me a lot by saying that they had a difficult task in securing a downtown theater in which to give the picture a first run showing.

During the same week the big downtown theaters were knocking them dead with pictures of the "sausage" variety—the kind the big studios grind out strictly on schedule. What's the answer?

There is no use in kicking about poor pictures if we refuse to patronize the theaters which show the good ones. Right now there are at least a dozen high class pictures which are unable to secure Chicago showings, and every one of the dozen is a recognized hit in other cities.

There was a time when Chicago fans were rated as the most discriminating in this country, but "them days are gone forever!" Our speed now is an organ solo, an overture, a few acts of vaudeville, and about seven reels of

Mr. Stock and the Civic Opera, an Ideal, if Improbable, Alliance

By Edward Moore.

DURING one of the Chicago Symphony orchestra's most recent "pops," a question arose with many interesting possibilities clinging comet-wise thereto. Mr. Stock conducted a pair of excerpts from the music dramas of the late Richard Wagner and did them so superbly that they have stuck in the memory ever since. Out of all the times that Wagnerian music has been played here in the last two decades, either as operas or in concert form, these ears have never heard it played so brightly, so joyously, with so much regard for what is in the score itself and so little regard for the dreary conventions that have sprung up about it. So the question began to shape itself something like this:

FRITZ KREISLER,
Master Violinist, playing in recital today.
[Kosiba Photo.]

"Wouldn't it be a great experience to hear Mr. Stock conduct a whole Wagner opera?" A moment later it took more concrete form:

"Suppose the Civic opera could see its way clear to invite Mr. Stock over as guest conductor, preferably in 'Siegfried.'"

The only trouble with the plan is that it is a beautiful ideal, and beautiful ideals are seldom attainable. Everything else points directly in favor of it. There is no question that Mr. Stock is one of the great Wagnerians of the age. Also, it is perfectly possible for the opera company to occupy the same position that the orchestra has held for years, a factor in making the city a great music center; in fact, it has a good start toward that position now. Why, then, should anything stand in the way of one organization's borrowing a great talent from the other, and thereby shedding glamour, reputation, and the reward of high artistic achievements on both?

It would be a performance worth going many miles to hear. Mr. Stock has the great art of vitalizing music while still giving it proportion. He recognizes and welds together musical and dramatic values. For another thing, he would cut the score until it could be treated like other music. For Mr. Stock does not believe in unabridged Wagner. In his own language, he is disinclined to kiss every note just because Wagner wrote it. He realizes that there is a point beyond which the human mind cannot absorb, whether the music of Wagner or any other composer, and the great movements of Wagner are too great to deserve to be obscured by cluttering preparation or long winded monologues. Wagner at his best touched the stars, but he probably had less sense of proportion than any one who ever wrote for the stage.

Why Not a Showman in Opera?

In other words, Mr. Stock has a shrewd sense of showmanship, and showmanship is quite as important in music as musicianship. The editorial columns of THE TRIBUNE touched the point in nonserious manner, but with serious point, the other day when they suggested that Mr. Ziegfeld be induced to transfer his abilities from the business of producing Follies in New York to the business of producing opera in Chicago. Mr. Stock sees the point plainly. He realizes that Wagner belonged to another generation, and that the present generation looks at things quite differently. He points out that musicians have left off going to Bayreuth, where "traditions" are sacred. Only those who are engaged there have been in attendance. The others have found more enticing points of interest.

Do I hear an objection, something to the effect that Mr. Stock is a symphony and not an opera conductor, and that the preparation of opera needs a different sort of training? Wait a moment. He was an opera man before he got into symphony. He studied his opera in the most practical possible manner, by playing in an operatic orchestra before he ever came to Chicago, and he learned his Wagner scores by heart then.

Also, cast your mind back for a moment to April, 1917, when he brought out the Mahler Choral symphony at the Auditorium. There were ten soloists, an orchestra of 150, and a chorus of 1,000, which included 200 boys, and Mr. Stock conducted it in the most brilliant manner after one general rehearsal, and that considerably shorter than most operatic rehearsals. By the side of that achievement, an operatic performance seems comparatively simple.

Perhaps all this is a dream and too good to be true. But if ever there seemed to be a place for Frederic Stock, musician, showman, and man of ideas, this is the place. If there should still be any question, go to the

John Barrymore Breaks Hamlet Record, and Sails for Europe

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We had been to see the Theater guild's production of "Peer Gynt," and we did not think much of it. And we were going back to the Lambs club, where he lives, or where he might as well live, seeing that he spends all his time there.

"You need a cup of coffee before you start on 'Gynt,'" said he. "Come on up and I'll give you the coffee, and it may be, a tip or two."

"On Gynt'?"

"On anything you care to know about, I'm feeling that generous."

His is a likeable eagerness. Always has been. Years ago we dubbed him the "Lambs club gossip." Not with any intention of picking out one where so many flourish, but because he so perfectly represents a common type.

"Funny about Jack, isn't it?" he demanded, declining a good cigaret in favor of one he picked out of a package he had slit down its middle, so that when he pressed its sides it opened like a trap. A new trick, he explained. New, at least, to him.

JOHN BARRYMORE.

"Jack who?"

"Barrymore."

"What has Barrymore to do with 'Peer Gynt'?"

"Nothing. That's why I want to talk about him. You know he sails for France Saturday."

"What's particularly funny about that?"

"Nothing—except he's breaking up the most prosperous run 'Hamlet' ever has had, or is ever likely to have in this country; throwing away, you might say, $18,000 or $20,000 a week—all for the love of a woman."

"Tut—tut! If not, fie! fie! If you must play, come out on the lawn. Leave the dirt court alone."

"No! No—o—o! You have me wrong. The woman's his wife. He's quitting his job because Michael Strange Barrymore is in Europe and he would rather spend the rest of the winter with her than make money. If that isn't love—what is it?"

"It may be good sense. Barrymore isn't over strong, for one thing. Better a good heart and a good color in Europe than pneumonia and a fortune in New York. Particularly when you don't need the fortune."

"Sure—from your point of view."

"But how about Arthur?"

"Arthur who?"

"Hopkins. Spends, how much? Twenty, thirty thousand dollars on the production, takes the risk of failure (and even a Barrymore can fail; O, brother, yes, you know he can; remember Lionel and 'Macbeth,' not to mention Ethel and 'Juliet'?). Hoppy finally finds one that is good for the season and the greatest Shakespearean record known to the stage—and—blah! Jack goes to Europe to see his wife! Why didn't she come to New York to see him?"

"I suspect she didn't want to."

Breaks Booth's Record.

"Evidently. Anyway, if he was going to quit why not a day sooner and let the Booth record stand—as Deems Taylor suggested."

"I don't follow you."

"Taylor had a great idea and told the World, and the World, I hear, put it up to Jack. So long as he wasn't going through anyway, Taylor said, why wouldn't it be a graceful thing for Barrymore to play 'Hamlet' for ninety-nine performances and then step out and, with a graceful gesture to the memory of Booth, say, friendly-like, 'Old top, you win!'"?

"And what did Jack say to that?"

"Deponent sayeth not, because deponent doesn't know. But deponent suspects he told them, politely, that, being the party of the first part, it was his pleasure to establish a new 'Hamlet' record of 101 consecutive performances on Broadway, and that they, as the party, or parties, of the second part, could jolly well go jump in the icy Hudson if they did not like it."

"Well, after all—it's his record. He made it. The laurel and the bay—he's earned them."

"Yes, I know. But—just the same—if I'd been Jack——"

"Aw—— You probably would have gone exactly what Jack's doing. What

Mystery Plays Find Happy Hunting Ground in Chicago

By Sheppard Butler.

EVERY day, in every way, we are getting nuttier and nuttier. The cordon of mystery plays closes in on Chicago, and within a week or two we shall be all but completely surrounded. Creeping tarantulas and disembodied cats' eyes amplified the tale of horrors last week at the Blackstone. Tonight, at the La Salle, we confront the airy spectacle of a maniac physician preparing to cut a young woman to pieces in a subterranean operating room. Ghostly apparitions we are accustomed to; murder and shrieks in the dark are as familiar as the nightly round of holdup men. The question is, what next? Reason totters on its throne; the dramatic editor faces the horreadous future and trembles. He has to see them all.

HELEN GILL
an attractive villainess in "Zeno," the thriller at the Great Northern.
[White Photo.]

And they all are finding their way to Chicago. Here by the lake, it seems, is the happy hunting ground of the thrillers. Let's see. We have had "The Bat," "The Nightcap," and "The Charlatan." We now give shelter to "The Cat and the Canary," "Zeno," and "The Last Warning." This week comes "The Monster." Soon "The Rear Car" and "Whispering Wires" will arrive. When the last two are duly installed, six of the town's sixteen standard theaters will be devoted to the single business of scaring their patrons within an inch of their lives.

No other city is in the throes of such an epidemic. New York, with sixty "legitimate" playhouses, has but three of the shockers. Boston has one, and Philadelphia one. They take their terrors in moderation; our appetite for awe appears to be insatiable.

It is strange that the craze does not peter out. These dramatic monstrosities are all more or less alike; one would think playgoers might tire of them. The managers thought so long ago. Each succeeding thriller has been brought forth with trepidation. They hesitated about sending "Zeno" to compete with "The Cat and the Canary"; "The Last Warning" to compete with "Zeno"; "The Monster" to compete with the rest. But they keep on prospering. Only "The Charlatan," thus far, has failed here. So the showmen's problems are simplified. When in doubt they send another mystery play to Chicago.

It makes a grisly season, and it must be disturbing to those who take their theater seriously. Spiders and ghosts and tricks—what would William Winter have thought of them? What does the Drama league think? Thespis, already picking at the coverlet, heads for the psychopathic hospital, and I get such letters as this:

> I was so thrilled by your account of "The Last Warning" that I attended the play last night, and either because of my excitement or the incoherence of the actors, or both, I missed the most important part of the solution and am writing to ask if you would be kind enough to answer the following questions:
> Why did Bunce murder Woodford?
> Why, if he was so anxious to get money, did he try to scare tenants from the theater?
>
> Why was Carleton murdered—and how was this murder discovered in the dressing room when the stage was dark?
>
> How was it that Wilkins escaped, and how were the doors so mysteriously locked and unlocked?
> I will surely appreciate your kindness in giving me this explanation.

Such questions! As I remember it, it was perfectly clear that—well, you see now—come to think of it, why was Woodford murdered? Pondering the matter, I perceive that I haven't the faintest idea. Nor can I answer any of the other questions. Nor, except for my correspondent's peace of mind, do I care. I am quite ready to admit that "The Last Warning" may be wholly unintelligible, but I still solemnly aver that it is a good show. That's what the mystery plays have done to me. It's great to be crazy.

"To Love" Increases the Hazards of Criticism.

Miss Grace George and "To Love" went away last night, to an accompaniment of muttered imprecations from Mr. William A. Brady, Miss George's husband, manager, guide, philosopher, and, no doubt, friend. It is Mr. Brady's conviction that the Chicago critics' prevailing state of mind, if any, is completely blah. This thought he expressed in a curtain speech at the Playhouse, the day after he read the papers, presumably bringing thereby some measure of solace to his troubled soul. It seems, however, that words were inadequate to voice his feelings. Action followed, and Miss George's Chicago engagement was abruptly terminated. She was to have stayed until Feb. 24, or perhaps longer.

What exasperated Mr. Brady in this instance was not so much condemnation as faint praise. Here, he said, was a glittering masterpiece from Paris, decorated with an authentic prize and faultlessly acted—and all we observed about it was that it was nice but contained a great many words. We admired its language, but found it uneventful. We used moderation where we should have been ecstatic.

Well, I confess that, along toward the end of the second hour, I found this beautifully phrased discussion of love and its whys and wherefores a little somnolent. I asked myself, "Why don't they stop talking and do something?" They didn't stop talking and they didn't do anything, and that's what I said in the paper.

Then, a day or two later, along came a hard boiled man of the theater—the kind, you would think, that regards the "Follies" as the height of dramatic achievement and might drop in of an afternoon at a burlesque show. He borrowed a match and sat down to discuss plays.

"You know," he said, "the best thing I have seen in years was Paul Geraldy's 'To Love.' I'm always looking in at the theaters, seeing a little snatch of this or that, and going on about my business. Usually a few minutes is all I want. But 'To Love' held me absorbed to the end. I had other things to do, but I simply couldn't tear myself away. Greatest play I've seen in I don't know when. Yessir, a great show."

So there you are. What, in the circumstances, can one do except be humble? There is no accounting for tastes.

This curious diversity of opinion seems to pursue certain plays. "The Torch Bearers" is one of them. I know people who have seen it twice and have been more rapturous in its praise the second time than the first. I know others who have found it inane and have been inexpressibly bored. There is no middle ground; they either love it or hate it.

It was so with "The Beggar's Opera." It was so with "The Silver Fox," and a few others—not many. Mass psychology affects audiences in most cases. Enthusiasm breeds enthusiasm; what one likes, the rest usually like. Hence such long and prosperous careers as those of "Lightnin'" or "Sally." Now and then comes a play which proves a hopeless bone of contention, and then the poor critic—where is he? Whatever he says is wrong. Readers write scathing letters, friends are friends no more, and if it be a Brady production—zowie! The only consolation is the occasional emergence of a sterling character like Mr. Richard Bennett. He makes curtain speeches every night, but he scolds audiences, not critics. Why can't the others do that?

The "Pool" in Action; Gossip of Plays and Players.

"Elsie" leaves the Illinois at the end of this week to make way for what appears to be the first outward manifestation of the newly made Shubert-Erlanger pooling agreement. "In Springtime of Youth," which follows at the Illinois, is a Shubert show; the theater is a stronghold of the Erlanger interests. Not in many years has an "opposition" play been booked at a "syndicate" theater. Suspicion that the "$100,000,000 merger" was more of a gesture than a reality seems thus in some degree set at rest.

Another new alignment develops this week in the withdrawal of Shubert vaudeville from the Englewood theater, on the south side, and the prompt taking over of the playhouse by the Orpheum circuit, which operates the Palace, Majestic, and State-Lake. A novel schedule will be observed under the new régime, combining some of the features of "continuous" vaudeville and some of the more patrician variety known as "standard." There will be three performances a day—at 2:30, 7:30 and 9:15—and prices of admission will be low, but, instead of the "any seat you can find" plan in effect at the Majestic and State-Lake, all seats will be reserved. A complete change of program will be made each Sunday and Thursday.

"Extra," a new play of newspaper life, written by Jack Alicoate and sponsored by William Collier Jr., the comedian's grown-up son, seeks admission to Chicago and will arrive shortly if a theater can be found for it.

"The Rear Car," due in two weeks at the Cort, has put into New York for repairs. Trial performances indicated that some of its rôles were badly miscast and various changes have been made, including the engagement of Miss Edna Hibbard, last seen here with Barney Bernard in "Two Blocks Away," as leading woman. Taylor Holmes, of course, still heads the company.

April 9 has been set as the date for the production of Booth Tarkington's "Bristol Glass" in Chicago, probably at the Illinois or the Blackstone. Gregory Kelly and Miss Ruth Gordon, now playing in "The First Year" on the road, will have important rôles.

Miss Frances Starr, finding the fates unpropitious, has abandoned "Shore Leave" and returned to New York, ready for another play whenever Mr. Belasco shall find one to her liking.

"Dulcy," too, was to have wound up its career last night, but it will go on touring. George Tyler, the producer, has turned over the play, scenery and all, to Miss Lynn Fontanne and her fellow actors, and they will conduct their affairs themselves, sharing profits on a coöperative basis.

Those solemn assurances that the "Chauve-Souris" would never be seen in America outside New York were, it transpires, to be taken with a grain of salt. Now it comes out that plans are under way for bringing the players back next season (they sail for Russia in May) to appear in Chicago and elsewhere.

Theodore Kremer, author of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" and many another durable melodrama of the old days, is dead in Cologne, Germany. He was all but forgotten in recent years, but one of his plays lives after him. When we saw it at the Colonial recently they called it "Good Morning, Dearie." That entertainment, though few people knew it, was no more nor less than "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," set to music.

Statisticians at the Woods announce that the last Chicago performance of "The First Year" on March 10 will be the 1,000th performance of the comedy since it began its career in Baltimore Oct. 9, 1920. The play had an uninterrupted run in New York from Oct. 20, 1920, to June 12, 1922.

Cyril Maude is coming over from London in the spring to act, in America, the stage version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, "If Winter Comes." He may also appear in Lord Dunsany's "If."

Porter Emerson Browne, who wrote "The Bad Man" for Holbrook Blinn, has a new one in rehearsal. "Ladies for Sale" is its title, and its principal rôles will be played by Vincent Serrano, Malcolm Williams, and Miss Carlotta Monterey.

Chicago probably will not see Miss Billie Burke this season in Booth Tarkington's "Rose Briar." Arrangements have been made for her to take the play to London when she completes her current New York engagement.

Production of Augustus Thomas' new play, "The Song of the Dragon," has been deferred. When it does come to light, perhaps next season, its leading rôle will be entrusted to Miss Flora Sheffield, who acted here in "The Nightcap" during its run at the Play-

Wilson Collison has written a new play called "Débris," which, he hopes, Richard Bennett will act this spring in San Francisco.

E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe have returned to America from France and Switzerland to arrange for their return to the stage next season. They have adopted definitely the plan of appearing only in alternate years.

John Barrymore Breaks Hamlet Record, and Sails

you think of the no applause until the last curtain idea? For it?"

Applause Moscow Style.

"Certainly not. If you can restrict applause sensibly—great. I'm for that. But what these birds want to do is virtually to cut out applause entirely."

"'These birds' meaning whom?"

"These Moscow Art theater fanatics. Because the Russians do it; because they print a note in the program asking the audience kindly to forget the actor during the performance and do all their applauding after the final curtain—'when the assembled company, if called, will be glad to appear,' they think everybody should do it. They fill me with many localized pains."

"It might not be a bad experiment. It seems to work very well with the Russians. And there certainly——"

"Work with the Russians? Why shouldn't it? Those Muscovites don't want to be happy. Tell them they're good and you spoil their whole evening. Applaud them and they just shrivel up. I'll bet they have been crying in each other's laps ever since Morris Gest translated the New York critics' reviews to them. They're not used to being happy and it makes 'em miserable."

"No—but, seriously. You know; I know; everybody knows that when an actor (or actress) stops to acknowledge applause at his entrance, for example, he not only halts the play but plays hob with the illusion."

"That may be. I'm for cutting out that—although let me tell you something, young fellow my friend. Applause means a lot more to the actor than you think it does. It's his life and you do take his life, as Shylock says, when you do take the prop that doth sustain his life."

"That may be. But why should the actor always be considered? Why not the audience—that pays, and pays, and——"

"All right—all right! Cut out the reception applause and cut out curtain calls. I'm an actor, but it pains me to see them straighten up from a tense scene at the curtain and begin smiling broadly. It's bad. But don't stop encouraging the individual performers. Don't kill the actor by killing that which doth sustain——"

"I know. We'll let that pass. But you've really given me an idea. And I thank you. If, by cutting off the actors' applause we can rob the stage of its devlish fascination for the immature and mildly insane:

"If, by insisting there shall be no applause until the end of the performance, and then only for the assembled company as a whole, we can curb the cheaper managers' ambition to create a new star of every little Tom, Dick, or Harriet who happens upon an actor-proof part and makes a hit;

"If, by sanely directed and carefully restricted applause we can do those things we have never been able to do——"

"Yes, yes——"

"I say, if in that way reformation lies we will start our no applause campaign tomorrow."

"Why not today? You will finish at the same time."

"When?"

"The year they put rubber tires on the subway."

More Shadow than Substance.

"And what, if anything, has that to do with 'Peer Gynt'?"

"Nothing at all. And neither will I have anything more to do wth it. You may go now—and Gawd have mercy on your poor old soul."

As a matter of fact there is not much that we feel need be said in this column about the Ibsen drama, which has not been attempted since Mansfield tried it fifteen years ago. It is a play of intriguing shadows and blessed little substance for the average American audience.

The scenes do not cohere and the drama is constantly wavering. We found it excessively uninteresting, save for the exceptionally vigorous acting of Joseph Shildkraut, who has been playing "Liliom" for a couple of seasons. And the unique and fascinating setting achieved by Lee Simonson—a combination of hazy lantern effects against a gauze background and modified cubistic foregrounds jumbled to suggest the mountains and fjords of Norway.

HEROINE OF ANOTHER THRILLER

MLLE. SUZANNE CAUBET.
[White Photo.]

She is a niece and former protégée of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, and comes tonight with her husband, Crane Wilbur, to act in the latter's play, "The Monster," at the La Salle. Fright, denoted in the picture, is an important phase of her rôle; she has a terrible time, they say, but is duly rescued from the perils that encompass her.

THE NEW PLAYS

First Aid for First Nighters on Attractions Scheduled for the Coming Weeks in the Theaters.

OPENING TONIGHT.

"The Monster" [La Salle].—A melodrama by Crane Wilbur, setting forth certain adventures with a surgeon gone mad. They found it a hair raising thing in New York, but some changes have been made with a view to lightening its horrors. Howard Lang has the title rôle, played first by Wilton Lackaye and then by Emmett Corrigan, and others in the cast are Mr. Wilbur, the author; Mlle. Suzanne Caubet, Frank McCormack, and Walter James.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The Awful Truth" [Powers', Feb. 19].—Miss Ina Claire in a comedy by Arthur Richman. Bruce McRae heads an excellent supporting company.

"In Springtime of Youth" [Illinois, Feb. 19].—A musical comedy of varied authorship, with George MacFarlane, Miss Olga Steck, Harry K. Morton, Miss Zella Russell, Harry Kelly, and Robert Halliday as its chief performers.

"Peter Weston" [Harris, Feb. 25].—Frank Keenan in a new play by Frank Dazey and Leighton Osmun. The cast includes Miss Marie Nordstrom, Miss Judith Anderson, Jay Hanna, Thomas Irwin, and many others.

"The Rear Car" [Cort, Feb. 25].—More mystery melodrama. Edward E. Rose is the author, Taylor Holmes will have the leading rôle, and Miss Edna Hibbard will head the feminine contingent.

"The Blimp" [Olympic, Feb. 25].—Herbert Corthell in a new comedy by Conrad Westervelt—something about a fat man. Miss Ann Davis and James Dyrenforth will be among those present.

"Light Wines and Beer" [Woods, March 11].—A comedy by Aaron Hoffman dealing with prohibition, and known on the Pacific coast as "Now and Then." Joseph Cawthorn and George Bickel will be in it.

"The World We Live In" [Auditorium, March 19].—A play at once fantastic and philosophical by the brothers Capek of Czecho-Slovakia. Most of the characters are insects.

"R. U. R." [Cort.]—A satirical melodrama by Karel Capek, one of the brothers aforesaid, dealing with a race of automatons. To arrive at the Cort, probably, when "The Rear Car" departs.

"Romeo and Juliet" [Selwyn].—The fine production headed by Miss Jane Cowl as Juliet, tentatively scheduled to come to town on April 1.

"William's Wife" [Powers'].—Miss Ruth Chatterton in a new play by Eugenie Senecal Courtright, appointed for arrival late in March or early in April.

Urging Mr. Stock to Take Up Baton in Wagner Opera symphony concerts Friday afternoon or Saturday evening. Mr. Stock plans to conduct a set of excerpts from the second and third acts of "Siegfried," also the prelude to "Die Meistersinger." This department is willing to predict that hearing will be believing.

Opera in the Future.

Is grand opera as an art form wearing out? G. Jean-Aubry, writing a review of a new opera bouffe, "Isabelle et Pantalon," by Roland-Manuel, in the Chesterian, seems to think that it is in danger. Be it known that the Chesterian is one of the few publications dealing with new music and new conditions in music sanely and without inundations of adjectives of panegyrics on the one hand or malediction on the other.

He says: "There can be no doubt that the opera seria has for some time shown signs of an exhaustion which has been averted neither by the ardent transports of Italian naturalism nor by the indisputable beauty of a few works such as 'Pélléas et Melisande' or 'Ariadne et Barbe-Bleue.' The opera form as conceived by Verdi or Meyerbeer, or even Wagner, seems as arbitrary and obsolete to the majority of theatergoers of today as the tragedies of Schiller or Voltaire.

"Shall we see a rejuvenescence of opera in the shape of a diversion that will unite the discoveries of the modern ballet with the traditions of the eighteenth century? Or shall we find its salvation in the music-drama following the paths indicated by 'Boris Godounow,' and more clearly still by Malipiero's 'Sette Canzone,' works couched in a form that is free of superfluous detail? The question is hard to answer, but it is certain that opera, as it was left to us by the last two generations, no longer satisfies the musical public."

Radio and the Symphony Orchestra.

Inquiry comes through the mail as to the possibility of broadcasting the Chicago Symphony orchestra concerts. The answer from Orchestra hall is to the effect that it is not unwillingness on the part of the orchestral management that prevents this for the present, but a desire to study the question more thoroughly. They point out that broadcasting orchestral music is a much more complex proposition than broadcasting opera, where the voices of the singers are the principal matters desired. In an orchestra there are many voices of varying timbres, and while some of these may be transmitted and picked up clearly, others are not so plain. Indications are that further experimentation will be necessary before the orchestra as a whole can be transmitted in a wholly satisfactory manner.

Chamber Music Informally.

Believing that chamber music will be more enjoyable if it is informal, the Beethoven trio has adopted an effective method to register its belief. Its second concert will be given at 5 o'clock this afternoon at the Cordon club, but instead of appearing upon a stage before set rows of seats the trio merely takes its position in the middle of the room, while the patrons group themselves about at their own pleasure. The first concert, given a month ago, was such an improvement upon the formality existing at the ordinary musical event that a feeling of gratitude has persisted ever since. This afternoon the organization will play trios by Rubinstein, opus 52, and by Gretchaninoff, op. 38; also a group of "Miniatures" by Bridge. In all respects an advance view of it looks attractive.

Fund for a Good Cause.

Mrs. Edward MacDowell was severely injured in an automobile accident in New York a few weeks ago, suffering three broken ribs. She is recovering steadily but slowly, but will be unable to resume her lecture recitals on the works of her late husband, which has been her work for many years. The income from her tours has been devoted to the support of the MacDowell colony at Peterboro, N. H., which for some seasons has been opened to the visits and work of those engaged in the creative arts.

As the income from that source is now cut off, the Musical Courier of New York offers itself as collector and repository for a fund to be contributed both as a testimonial to Mrs. MacDowell and to avoid closing the colony. Contributions may be addressed to the Mrs. MacDowell Fund, care Musical Courier, 437 5th avenue, New York.

Here and There in Music.

The attention of those who would make researches into music of various ages and schools may be commended to the Chicago public library. It is not so many years ago that one would have found difficulty in locating anything of any particular interest, but times have changed. The new catalogue of the music section is a volume 269 pages long, and it indicates a collection of 7,000 bound volumes and 14,000 pieces, songs, operas, and instrumental works that spread through the alphabet from accordions to wood winds. There are over 110 scores for full orchestra, something like 250 operas, and a highly interesting collection of folk music of many nations. This catalogue deals with actual music. Theoretical, historical, and reference books must be sought in another department.

Theodore Stearns, whose opera, "The Snow Maiden," was brought out by the Chicago company this season, has taken to the Fox river district to labor on the score of his new three act work, "Co-o-za." He sends word that the book—he is responsible for both words and music—is based on the theory of reincarnation, and ties up the fall of Atlantis with the Broadway of today.

Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa went to Philadelphia the other day to conduct a performance of his own comic opera, "The Bride Elect," revived by the Philadelphia Operatic society. The newspapers there say that he contributed to a success that was as pronounced as any ever made by that organization.

Mr. Sousa will begin his band season in July, as usual, at Willow Grove park, near the same city. He will tour to the Pacific coast in the fall, then across Texas to Florida, down to Havana, then back north to Washington, where he will close his season March 16. In all he plans 350 concerts, and 100 bandsmen will be under his baton, the largest number in his greatly loved career. The tour will be his thirty-first, and the fourteenth that has taken him from coast to coast.

The Civic orchestra of Chicago will give a concert this afternoon at Hyde Park High school. Other concerts of the day under the auspices of the Civic Music association will be by Mildred Anderson, contralto, and Minna Krokowsky, violinist, at Palmer park, and by Ira Hamilton, pianist, and Gwendoline Gower, soprano, at Hamilton park. These will be free of charge. The orchestra concert will maintain an admission fee of 20 cents.

The Sinai Symphony orchestra announces a program of Russian music for its concert at Sinai temple tonight. Arthur Dunham will conduct a series of works by Tschaikowsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, and Votichenko. Nita Obrassova, announced as a coloratura soprano from the Moscow Grand Opera company, will be the soloist, departing from the Russian trend of the program to sing the "Bell Song" from "Lakmé," but also some Russian songs.

Evidently the Opera in Our Language Foundation, Inc., has thought better of ending its activities, for word comes that another performance will be given at the Playhouse next Thursday afternoon. Instead of an American opera, this one will be "Cavalleria Rusticana" in English. No word has been sent as to who will sing it. There will also be a ballet by Lora Shadurskaya and some of her pupils.

In addition to the Wagnerian numbers scheduled by Mr. Stock for this week's symphony concerts he also announces John Alden Carpenter's delectable "Adventures in a Perambulator." A Bach concerto—the third, in G major—is on the program; likewise "The White Peacock" and "Clouds" by Griffes. This program will be without soloist.

The Zoellner quartet, at one time announced to play here during the season, has gone from concert appearances into teaching. The members of the organization recently opened a conservatory in Los Angeles, giving it their name. Each member is in charge of a department and Charles Wakefield Cadman has joined the faculty as instructor in composition and orchestration.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Now That War's Over, On with Full Dress, Men

By Mme. X.

THERE are many important questions before the world today, questions whose decision will affect the course of history for untold ages to come. Never was there a more critical period in the development of our Caucasian civilization. These decisions no one of us can hope to shirk. The burden is on us and the blame will be on us, too, whatever we do. So open discussion in open meetings, if possible, the open air should be our chief work for a long time to come or until the era now beginning shall have taken such form and shape that it can be trusted to walk alone and unaided.

For instance, there is the inescapable and dynamic problem of the proper attire for men after 7 p. m. Moot is the only adjective that describes the all important and oft debated question as to whether a man invited out to dinner should wear his dinner jacket or his full dress suit with its complication of white tie, swallow tail coat, and immaculate white waistcoat. The salvation of our mental stability is only secured by the fact that in this momentous decision there is no question as to the trousers. The same pair can be worn with either of these elaborate and highly ornamental upper costumes.

The war nearly destroyed the custom of full evening dress for men. In the fierce fury of the contest many a man lying in the miry trenches "over there" derived a pale consolation from the thought that probably he never more would be required to wear that painful, distressing outfit, even if he were spared by Black Berthas and airplane showers.

Hostesses in Revolt.

At the close of the war, when the warrior returned and chucked his unspeakable uniform into the dark closet under the attic stairs, he enjoyed a period of undisturbed peace. The dinner jacket, black tie, and blacker waistcoat were the thing to wear to no matter how formal a function.

Alas, that those stressful days of the last decade are indeed a thing of the past! This is all too clearly manifested by the fact that there is a rising revolt on the part of many a hostess against the male guest who comes to her ball or her opera dinner or other serious and expensive entertainment in the simple, unostentatious, tidy dinner coat. No matter how brave a soldier a man was, how much he suffered in that dire period of the nation's anguish, he is not to be spared the ordeal of full dress. Henceforth, hostesses require such acknowledgment of the importance of their hospitality as can be conveyed by wearing the traditional forked coat, the stiff high collar, the perishable white tie, and the still more frail and snowy waistcoat, with a flower in the buttonhole to complete the story of care and attention on the part of the privileged guest. Those who omit these details will in the course of time find themselves gently but firmly dropped from the lists kept by popular and influential social leaders.

This devotion to easy informality in dress is more characteristic of the young than of their elders. At balls and big dinner dances it is not the older men who appear in dégagé attire. It is the youth of society. And the further west you go in this country the less attention is paid to form. In England the full dress for evening entertainments, however small and informal, is once more the prevailing rule for both men and women. In the eastern part of the U. S. A. full dress is much more the custom than here, while west of us fashion gets increasingly easygoing as it follows the setting sun.

Taking the Eastern Way.

This column holds no brief for either side of the controversy. It merely takes occasion to chronicle the fact that the question is a topic of conversation at many a social gathering and that most of those who discuss it show an increasing disapproval of the careless, lax, inattentive, and easygoing members of society who saunter late to balls clad as if for a picnic Sunday supper or a men's "smoker," as the British call their club nights.

Modern man's outer garments are not beautiful in themselves. Never in the history of the human race have they been so hideously ugly. They have not a redeeming characteristic, for they are not even comfortable. The high collars and stiffly starched shirts make comfort impossible. But they are symbolical in their intent, and if by your garments you say to your hosts, "I don't think much of you or your party. It is not an occasion which excites my gratitude or which entitles you to any honor I might show you," it is sure to wound, disturb, and trouble those who are offering you hospitality.

For a guest wantonly to inflict this on those who show him kindness puts such a guest outside the pale. Also, it may in time make him unpopular.

Rules Might Help.

Is it aggressive or untimely to suggest that now is the moment, a fluid instant in our social shaping, when certain guiding rules can be laid down which should govern the attire of men invited to entertainments that take place after 7 o'clock? If it be decided that an occasion styled by the host or hostess "informal" calls for a dinner coat; that an invitation to an 8 o'clock dinner requires full dress; that an opera or ball automatically summons the same attire from its seclusion, then how easy for the average man to address himself to the task of arraying himself for the evening! No longer need he debate with the wife of his bosom as to whether or no to wear this or that. Such debates frequently remind one that "acrimony is the sequel to matrimony."

If, in addition, it could become the accepted custom for men to wear the neat and comfortable dinner coat to evening theater parties, even when dinner precedes the play, how much happier would be the lot of man! It is those tails that complicate the pleasure of an evening at the theater. If he doesn't have to sit on them, "the tired business man" can enjoy much more wholeheartedly any performance.

Apparently nothing so completely takes the edge off an evening's enjoyment as to find one's self the only wearer of full dress, or the sole guest to sport a dinner coat, so completely are we "bound on the wheel of things."

Courtesy and Etiquette.

The whole discussion is merely a part of that larger question which I have from time to time brought up in this column; courtesy, with its many ramifications into the realms of etiquette and established custom. If a people as supremely rich and powerful as we are today could develop into the most instinctively courteous nation that flourished on this green and cheerful globe, then indeed would we have all the rest of the tribes of men at our feet and we should have to look out into the firmament on high for new worlds to conquer.

It will probably be pointed out by the student of history that power and wealth, as a rule, have engendered arrogance, superciliousness, and bad manners. This may be true, but the fact that this has been the case in the past is no reason for its being so again. We have upset many precedents and undoubtedly will upset some more before we get through.

Chicago's "beau monde" is pretty well scattered at the moment to the four winds. Last Wednesday an impressive band of this division of society set sail from New York on the Mauretania for a six weeks' cruise of the Mediterranean. Mr. and Mrs. John A. Spoor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinde, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Linn, Miss Mabel Linn, Mrs. Watson F. Blair, Mrs. William Gerrish Beale, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, her son-in-law, George Hyde Clark, and William B. McCluer, one of Chicago's most popular bachelors, are probably at this moment emerging from their cabins and venturing forth to look on the blue and tumultuous sea pathway known to travelers and mariners as the gulf stream. They are undoubtedly commenting on the increasing balminess of the air and congratulating themselves at not being within the grip of our bracing and nipping breezes.

If you abandon your comfortable beds, your own and well known belongings, for the smelly discomforts and narrow surroundings of even the largest steamers afloat, you have to keep up your spirits by running down what you have left behind and by extolling the clammy sea air, the heaving decks, and the collection of weird fellow travelers, which are the lot of the wayfarer. In short, you have to Coué yourself into the belief that you are happy and comfortable.

History Repeating Itself.

As that amiable and simple Frenchman said, imagination is more powerful than will, and should be cultivated above all other human attributes. If you took only your critical faculty with you to one of his lectures you missed all the point of the occasion, its significance, and its relation to past ages. You saw only the little, rather pathetic chemist from Nancy talking platitudes in broken English. You saw only specters of humanity sitting about waiting for impossible miracles. You saw only large, curious, rather unsympathetic crowds skeptical as to whether they were going to get their money's worth of sensation.

But if you went fortified with imagination you saw representatives of a world waiting and eager for a new spiritual force. You saw history repeating itself and scenes being reproduced from Bible times and from the dark ages of medievalism when the only light in the world was held up by such simple and holy folk as St. Anthony, St. Cecelia, St. Jerome, and the rest of that pious company who devoted themselves to relieving the unspeakable misery of their times by appearing to the imagination. Very much in the same fashion does Coué today.

The crowds attending became merely the descendants of those early gatherings depicted by Raphael in the famous "Ascension' in the Vatican galleries. The lad in that great canvas who stands in epileptic ecstasy in the foreground of that painting was in the front row of those seated on the platform at Orchestra hall the other night. But him the French chemist could not help.

Reduced to its simplest expression, the message of this latest comer in the world of auto-suggestion was: "Chew your food thoroughly and always say, 'I can, I can, I can' and you will (if nothing organic is the matter with you) secure health and happiness."

This may be news to some. We had long suspected that this combination of mastication and courage was a workable one. But, as for miracles, we were, as usual, unlucky. That evening the crippled hobbled off stage with much the same leg action that had been theirs in the beginning, in spite of the hypnotizing and repetitious "ça passe, ça passe," which was used by the Gallic healer to lay at rest the devils of paralysis or rheumatism. We never get in on the supernatural or mysterious. For us ghosts never walk. Voices from beyond the grave never so much as whisper. The unseen world remains unseen. It's lack of imagination, I suppose.

The powder puff will be plied in many dressing rooms on Tuesday evening to make ready the fair ones for the Mardi Gras Bal Poudré which the Alliance Française is promoting at the Congress hotel. On Ash Wednesday morning the floor of the gold ballroom will probably be white as the fields along the north shore after of snowfall.

The ball is to open with a pageant at the court of Louis XVI. There will be a minuet danced to music especially composed by John A. Carpenter. Mrs. Milan H. Hulbert and the French consul, M. Antonin Barthelemy, are co-chairmen, with Mrs. William S. Monroe vice chairman and Charles L. Hutchinson treasurer. Mrs. Walter Brewster heads the advisory committee and Mrs. Potter Palmer is chairman of the patronesses. Mrs. John A Carpenter is in charge of the decorations and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham is head of the publicity committee. It will be a gay and pretty ball and will close the season 1922-'23 with a pleasant bang. It is a winter that, socially speaking, will go down in history as one of the liveliest on record. Society has danced and dined and played harder than during any season in years. The pace has been swift and steady ever since early in November.

Report Opera Box Sales.

There was a large meeting of the opera box sale committee last Wednesday at Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's residence at 1,000 Lake Shore drive. About thirty women met and gave in reports as to their progress in disposing of boxes for next year's opera season. Mrs. Jacob Baur is chairman of this committee, to which she is devoting all her time and strength. Usually among the front ranks in any political campaign, she is this year taking no part in the coming mayoralty contest because she wants to give all of herself to this opera business. It is the hope and expectation of this committee to make a better showing than has ever before been accomplished since Chicago first set up in the grand opera business.

Last week there were several notable foreigners sojourning in Chicago. Lady Donegall, widow of the Irish marquis of this name, was much entertained during her short stay here. Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank gave a luncheon for her last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer gave a tea for her later that same day in the Palmer mansion on the Lake Shore drive. On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker entertained her at dinner in their house, 3030 Lake Shore drive. On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill gave a dinner in her honor in the new home of the Fortnightly in Bellevue place, while that day at the Casino Mrs. William Nitze was her hostess at a small and informal luncheon.

Lady Donegall is a Canadian by birth and is the mother of the present marquis, a young man who is still pursuing his education at an English university.

She is a quiet, self-contained woman, who gives much of her attention to what others say to her, but does not herself, as the phrase is, "lay all her wares on the counter". This is so contrary to our American way that it is somewhat disconcerting at first. To foreigners we often seem guileless and overchatty, an impression which is dispersed when they find that much of our friendliness is just the ebullition of the moment and does not carry with it any permanence of devotion. If, as Emerson said, every Englishman is an island, we are a continent with an accessible coast line that sometimes leads to nothing.

Skeffington's Widow Here.

Another interesting and unusual personality who lately settled for a moment on our door sill was Mrs. Feehy Skeffington, the widow of the Irish patriot and pacifist Francis Skeffington, whose tragic death added one more debt to be paid the Irish by the English. He was trying to help some soldiers who were in trouble with the authorities, when he, unarmed and in cold blood, was shot and killed by a British officer. The latter was tried and got off on the plea of insanity. After being put in an insane asylum for a time, he was released and now holds a government position in Essex.

Mrs. Skeffington is in this country collecting money to help the 13,000 Irish soldiers of the Irish republic who are held now as war prisoners. She is a typical Irishwoman, vivacious, fiery even, when talking of her native land and its wrongs. She is, of course, an ardent republican and standing out for a plebiscite on the question of making Ireland entirely independent of England.

Of quite another type is the Signora Agresti, who was likewise in town last week. She is English by birth and Italian by marriage. She is a niece of Dante Gabriel Rosetti, the well known pre-Raphaelite painter. Her home is in Rome, Italy, where she is at the head of the agricultural institute.

Like Lady Donegall, she is a quiet, self-contained mortal, although she is an experienced public speaker. She addressed various bodies on various subjects. Yesterday she talked to the Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon at the Palmer house, her subject being the fascisti movement in Italy. She is an admirer of Mussolino and his followers, and thinks that the salvation of Italy is in their hands. The fact that they have for the time being set aside the doctrine of representative government and adopted methods that in the hands of a self-seeking man would be called tyrannical does not disturb her. She would probably say that it was not a question of theory now in Italy, but of a condition. She also talks on agriculture and on her famous English connections.

Brain Food Predigested.

We Americans are insatiate when it comes to lectures. I suppose it is part of that quality in us that makes us crave for patent and predigested foods. We are the happy hunting ground for would-be talkers, men and women who would find it hard to get audiences—paying ones, I mean—any where else.

Ever since the days of Dickens, Thackeray, and Trollop, we have been sought out by chatty mortals anxious to discourse to us on any topic we would pay for. Hugh Walpole, the British novelist, recently made a most profitable tour of the country whose success, financial and social, amazed even himself. His manager assured him a phenomenal sum for each lecture and apparently had enough left for himself to have justified the venture. It would be interesting to try the experiment of arranging a course of lectures for a popular American novelist in the British isles. They would be doubtless dined and wined, but hardly paid to talk.

Another renowned English talker and lecturer, who is "doing the states," is Miss Maude A. Royden. She is called by many "the greatest woman preacher of our generation." She is assistant preacher at the City temple, which has one of the largest congregations of any church in London. Frail, slight, and with a limp in her gait, she makes her hearers forget in a moment her slender bodily equipment in the spiritual light that shines out from her. Her voice is reported to be "rich, mellow, unfaltering." Her articulation is perfect, and her manner of speaking simple and direct, with none of the mannerisms or affectations of traditional oratory.

She is speaking at Orchestra hall on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. Her subject will be "Can We Set the World in Order?" Mrs. Hermon Butler will be chairman of the meeting. Two days later, on Thursday, Miss Royden will address the English Speaking union at a luncheon at the Palmer house, her subject being "The English Speaking Peoples as a Force of Reconstruction." Miss Royden will stay in the Cyrus Bentley house on Astor street during her visit here. The Bentleys will be absentee hosts, as they are spending

Mrs. James B. Forgan Jr. of 440 Barry avenue is one of the most active workers for the benefit for Association House settlement to be held Tuesday night, Feb. 20, at the Auditorium. The second performance of the Russian Grand Opera company, "Boris Goudounow," with Feodor Chaliapin in the title rôle, will be the attraction. Association house, which is located at 2150 West North avenue, is the pioneer settlement and community center in the northwestern part of the city. It has been teaching clean sports, clean living, and American ideals to the citizens of that community for twenty-five years.

Miss Frances Heyworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Heyworth of Lake Forest and 229 Lake Shore drive, is to dance in the minuet at the Mardi Gras Bal Poudré to be given on Tuesday night in the gold ballroom of the Congress by the Alliance Française. Miss Heyworth made her debut on Nov. 29 at a tea at the residence of her grandmother, Mrs. Julia C. Heyworth, 1434 Lake Shore drive. Mrs. Heyworth and her daughter are planning to leave shortly for a trip abroad.

Miss Vera Anderson will be one of a group of debutantes who will take part in the "Pageant at the Court of Louis XVI," which will be an interesting feature of the Bal Poudré. Miss Anderson was introduced to society last fall by her grandmother, Mrs. Andrew E. Leicht of 2400 Lake View avenue, with whom she makes her home. The occasion was a tea given by Mrs. Leicht at her residence on Nov. 16. Miss Anderson will depart on March 28 to spend the spring months in Bermuda.

Renaissance Holds View Day Tomorrow at the Art Institute

By Kate Webber.

MEMBERS of the Renaissance will meet tomorrow at 12 o'clock for their annual view day, luncheon and reception at the Art institute. Mrs. Anna Stacey will be the guide through the exhibit of artists of Chicago and vicinity, and Mrs. Paul Larmer will be hostess of the day.

The Renaissance is one of the most interesting of the younger clubs of the day, having been organized in 1915, the object being the study of historical art and the fine arts.

The club has a membership of 200 and meets on alternate Mondays at the Chicago Woman's club. In addition to the study of and the presentation of artists in the drama, music, sculpture, architecture, and painting, there is an interesting phase of the club's activities known as the outing committee. This committee plans trips to the sand dunes, to artists' studios, to the Field museum, the Art institute, and other points of interest and merit. An able guide always accompanies the members on these outings.

Twenty per cent of the club's funds goes annually toward the furthering of art. So far the funds have been expended in the purchase of pictures from the exhibits of Chicago artists, prizes for meritorious work, for an endowment in the school of metal craft and jewelry department of the Art institute; in the purchase of designs and patterns to be hung on the walls of the classroom, and for scholarships. Annual contributions are made to the Civic Music association, the Chicago Band association, and the Municipal Art league fund.

The officers of the Renaissance are Mrs. Theodore F. Laist, president; Mrs. Joseph P. Jené and Mrs. C. F. Roland, vice presidents; Mrs. Edward W. Bermingham, recording secretary; Mrs. M. J. Seifert, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lorne Curtis, treasurer.

Mrs. Theodore F. Laist is president of the Renaissance, one of the most interesting among the younger clubs of the city, which is holding its annual view day and reception tomorrow at the Art institute. The club's history and line of work are given in today's club notes.

Mrs. Lyman Crandall of the Plaza hotel is the one western trustee of Elmira college, which is conducting a million dollar campaign for endowed professorships and new buildings. Elmira is the oldest college for women in the United States, having been founded in 1855. Diplomas awarded the first class in 1859 were given out alphabetically, so that the first degree of B. A. awarded to any woman in the world was awarded to Miss Helen M. T. Ayres, afterward Mrs. A. D. Lundy of Williamsport, Pa., and mother of Ayres D. Lundy of Chicago. She was one of a class of seventeen.

An all American day program will be given on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Chicago Historical society rooms under the auspices of the national society, United States Daughters of 1812 in Illinois. This will be an open meeting in celebration of Lincoln's birthday, and numbers will be given by members of patriotic organizations and by women of various nationalities. Mrs. Amos Walker is in charge of the program, which promises to be of unusual interest.

the late winter at the Ohi valley in southern California.

Call for Moscow Players.

Mrs. Paul Welling and Mrs. Sherwood Anderson are getting up a petition signed by fifty names to send to Morris Gest in New York, asking that the Moscow players come to Chicago for an engagement. They are reported to have had an extremely successful time in New York. In spite of the fact that they play only in Russian, crowds have besieged their doors, and not crowds of their countrymen, but of Americans anxious to study the dramatic genius of this most dramatic of people. It is to be hoped that we shall have an opportunity of forming our own opinions as to their acting.

The bolshevik government has sent them to this country. Probably it is a kind of propaganda. If so, let us study it. It proves one thing—that the bolsheviki try to hold up the torch of dramatic art to illuminate the exceeding gloom which they have created in Russia.

Hollywood Society Lavish in Fetes to Visiting Stars

By Mildred Spain.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 10.—[Special.]—Never before has Hollywood been so lavish in entertainment as it is this season. Stars from New York are fêted, given teas at the Ambassador hotel, and received into the homes of the foremost directors. A new cake or the purchase of the film rights of a Broadway success give impetus for large formal dinners and receptions.

POLA NEGRI.
[Sandau Photo.]

MARIA IVOGUN.
Maria Ivogun, the Hungarian coloratura soprano, who came to this country last season to sing in opera and remained for concerts, is one of today's recital prospects.

Perhaps the greatest number of screen stars ever assembled attended the opening of the Metropolitan theater here, a gorgeous pageant house built by Sid Grauman. Ermine evening wraps and Pola Negri bandeaux seemed to find most favor with the stars. Constance Talmadge was glimpsed in a pastel gray gown. Claire Windsor, "the belle of Hollywood," was her cool stunning self in white satin.

Others present were: Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, Mrs. George Melford, Nell Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lasky, Carl Laemmle, Paul Bern, Barbara La Marr, Mr. and Mrs. Bryant Washburn, Harold Lloyd, Bull Montana, Allan Holubar, Dorothy Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roberts, Wallace Beery, Larry Semon, Herbert Rawlinson, Tod Browning, Lee Moran, Gaston Glass, Antonio Moreno, Ruth Roland, and Mr. and Mrs. Noah Beery.

Rendezvous of Film Folks.

The Mont Martre café, in Hollywood boulevard, is fast becoming the favorite meeting place of film people. On Wednesday evening Miss Gloria Swanson, Antonio Moreno, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Moore, Miss Kathleen Clifford, and Herbert Rawlinson were the hosts and hostesses.

Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice gave a theater party at the Egan theater on Saturday night.

Miss Corinne Griffith, Miss Eleanor Boardman, and Miss Claire Windsor are voted the most popular trio in Hollywood this season. No invitations are issued without their names.

Hay Hallor gave a dinner party for Miss Milded Harris at the Café Mont Martre on Tuesday evening. Miss Harris is taking a short vacation before continuing her tour in the Orpheum circuit.

Nothing to It.

Miss Lois Wilson has denied her reported engagement to J. Warren Kerrigan. Miss Wilson says it is a family friendship, and co-starring in a recent production, that has linked their names.

Sol Lesser's 3 year old "Buddy" entertained for Jackie Coogan before that young potentate entrained for New York. Marjorie Lesser, the 6 year old hostess, kept the party at vigorous games until ice cream cake—and, O, yes, movies—made their appearance. It was young Lesser's birthday.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks may be seen at dawn Sunday mornings watching the sun rise over the gray green Santa Monica mountains that rim the outer edge of Hollywood. Last Sunday they were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Karl Kitchen. Mary wore a simple sports suit and Doug white flannels and white oxfords. Mary Pickford, by the way, is championing the Deauville kerchiefs for street wear. She has an exquiste one of Paisley pattern that she winds tightly over her curls. A dark blue suit, orchid blouse, and Russian sables complete the costume.

GLORIA SWANSON.
[Paramount Photo.]

Miss Arline Pretty has returned from Honolulu. For contrast she has gone to Truckee, the great and "frozen north" of California.

Cards Out for Directors' Ball.

Invitations have been issued to the annual film directors' ball, to be given at the Alexandria hotel Feb. 17. The committee for the affair is composed of Miss Lottie Pickford, Wally Van, Philip Rosen, and Joseph De Grasse.

Miss Kathlyn Williams, in private life Mrs. Charles Eyton, entertained a party of fourteen at the Ambassador in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Pettite of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Miss Corinne Griffith was the guest of honor at a dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Neilan at the Ambassador. Miss Griffith chose a brilliant gown of emerald green for the affair that did justice to her much heralded topaz eyes.

Pola Learns American Dances.

By this time the effervescing news that Pola Negri, the Countess Domski, and Charles Spencer Chaplin have formally announced their engagement has fizzled down into an accepted fact, like the absence of Rodolf Valentino and the plan of Mary Miles Minter to build a home on Long island. But even before their engagement Miss Negri and Mr. Chaplin were seen at the Cocoanut grove. Mr. Chaplin proved a gallant tutor of those "so American dances" that amused and bewildered his partner. The last time the Countess Domski attended the grove she wore a gown of yellow panne velvet and a staggering diamond bandeau over her simply dressed hair.

Miss Marguetrite De La Motte and Gaston Glass were winners at a dancing contest held at the Ambassador hotel recently.

The Hollywood Studio club entertained the Business Men's club at the Woman's club on Tuesday evening. Sounds rather complicated, but the Studio club is the home of screen aspirants, and the logical place to have the business men of the community was the club house of their wives. Zazu Pitts and her husband, Tom Gallery, sang and danced. A preview of a comedy film, "Hazel of Hollywood," was shown. Among the patronesses of the Studio club present were Mrs. Wilfred Buckland, Mrs. William De Mille, Mrs. Cecil B. De Mille, and Mrs. Thomas Patton.

Wallace Beery is planning a trip through the orient. Egypt will be the first stopping place, then India and China.

A Hawaiian orchestra played for the dancing at the smart dinner dance given by James Cruze on Saturday night.

CLAIRE WINDSOR.

"Our club" is the exclusive younger set of Hollywood. It has been variously and truly named "the Leading Ladies" and "Starlets." Members of the club are: Miss Helen Ferguson, Miss Viola Vale, Miss Mae MacAvoy, Miss Lois Wilson, Miss La Plante, Miss Patsy Ruth Miller, Miss Claire Windsor, and Miss Mildred Davis. Mary Pickford is honorary president.

The strollers on Hollywood boulevard are seen in two tones this season. Whitely powdered faces and fresh red lips are noted as the followers of Miss Negri. Those who admire Miss Gloria Swanson emulate her olive skinned beauty and go in vigorously for one long earring. Two earrings in Hollywood? O, yes; but not peeping from the same turban.

Frank Mayo and Dagmar Godowski (Mrs. Mayo) gave a supper and box party to Mae Busch at the California theater, the occasion being the opening of "The Christian," in which Miss Busch plays the part of Gloria Quayle. The party saw the picture from a section reserved for them and went to the Club Royale for supper. Among those present were Rupert Hughes, June Rathis, Mae Murray, Robert Leonard, Richard Dix, Alfred D. Wilkie, Gaston Glass, Mary Newcomb, and Carry Wilson.

Fer or Agin? What Say You of the Movies?

Taken as a whole, do you think the movies aid or retard civilization? Do they make humans more human, or do they make monkeys of us? Answer! Answer!

Dear Miss Tinée: I am too old to be romantically interested in male movie heroes, therefore my enthusiastic approval of the movies as a means of family entertainment should be worth a fraction of a point.

There are good, bad, and indifferent pictures, and probably always will be but the greatest number fall under the last named division, I believe.

The good ones are works of art and give wholesome pleasure to many thousands of people whose purse permits no more expensive amusements. They teach as no written page can for good of the uneducated. If father and mother will go with the children to the movies (until a fairly steady age is reached), and afterwards discuss without heat or prejudice the story's strength or weakness, putting in a quiet, positive word of approval or disapproval for motives and manners they can turn the movies to wellnigh inestimable good. Don't you agree with me?

Anyway, the movies are here to stay, and I for one would as soon vote for the suppression of amateur radio sets and all broadcasting stations in the world as the abolishment of the silver sheet. Rightly used, it can be made a complement to the radio in educating and welding together the peoples of the earth. Ships and cables and radios and silver sheets all are factors in finding and binding the tribes of the earth into one great family. The language of pictures knows no race nor country, therefore the achievements of the three other mentioned factors may be best set forth on the silver sheet to the hearts and minds of all men everywhere.

MRS. J. C.

Dear Miss Tinée: Who is this P. L.? Another imitation of a man who hates the daylight? There are loads of good, innocent, decent people, with large families, too, to whom the movies give the greatest enjoyment. They cannot go to grand opera. P. L., indeed! I would like to hurt him, the dear thing gets hurt so easily.

THE KICK KORNER

trash. The really worth while pictures are being shown on side streets, in half filled theaters.

JAY DEE CEE.

[Editor's Note.—When you get an idea, you HAVE it, haven't you, J. D. C.?]

Dear Miss Tinee: Now, I ask you to bitterly condemn these folks for taking advantage of such sentiments as the public hold for "Our Wallie" to commercialize by means of clever phraseology as to lead us to think that part of the attendance receipts of this house go to "the sorrowing wife and mother."

You and I know that rental receipts and attendance receipts are different, and that this house has already contracted, and probably paid, the rent for this film; and that whether the attendance is large or small Wally's widow will not be affected. But this clever "within the law" statement is the more despicable for the way it distorts the truth. If a house cannot live on the merit of its program and must resort to such low tactics, let it die.

So, fearless leader of our desires to see fair play and truth in screen matters, let 'em have it with both barrels.

C. G. N.

Dear Miss Tinée: This is just a kick against those who kick against Rodolf. As no one is perfect, neither is he. But he is not deserving of what some people may say about him.

Will some of your readers please answer this? Breathes there a girl, with soul so dead, who never to herself has said, "Rodolf is hansom! A hansom sheik?"

If there be such a girl I'd love to hear what SHE has to say about him.

"TARZANA."

[Editor's Note: The question is not, Did she say it? It is, How did she spell it?"]

·ART AND ARTISTS·

Paintings of All Kinds in Chicago Artists' Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett

"BUT, if you notice, none of those crazy pictures ever are sold."

Two business men, unpretentious in appearance, unconscious of being overheard, walked away from the Art institute last Tuesday noon and, in words to the effect of the above sentence, passed judgment upon the efforts of the more radical of our younger artists as represented in the present Chicago artists' show.

When even officials of the institute advise you that in the exhibition there will be much of the impossible, much of the flagrantly contorted, much of the crudely colored, much that may well call forth criticism of the least kindly, you strain a point to search out just such material for your hungry pen. That was the case with the exhibit that now hangs in the east galleries of the Art institute. Expectant of seeing rampant defiance in the shape of all the "isms" flung in the teeth of the public from each and every wall, the hesitating first steps into the gallery were thrilled with feverish anticipation. But what an anticlimax!

The most daring of unusual conceptions in either subject or treatment, or both, are but a stimulant to heighten the effect of the simpler compositions. Nothing of the figurative paintings remains in your memory after looking at the exhibition as a whole. The many beautiful canvases—landscapes, forest scenes, dunes, flowers, portraits, and still life—wipe entirely from the slate of your mind the slightly amused emotion that may have risen in you at a first glance at—well, perhaps, "Reverberation," by Helen West Heller, will serve as example as well as any other. At all events the title bespeaks modernism, does it not?

So it seems a good thing that this year there are all kinds of painting represented in the Chicago show. It pleases those artists who have been feeling possibly a trifle bitterly that they and their work were too advanced for the middle states, and it settles the opinion of the more conservative painters and public in the matter of the correctness of their judgment of the value of beauty and verisimilitude in painting.

For a detail: In the first gallery a rather fair average of the mood of the exhibit has been struck. Yet these three paintings stand out, for their loveliness, and over the others one slides with but a half-word of appreciation. First, perhaps, comes "The Last Glow," a glorious forest scene by Rudolph F. Ingerle, which even the wretched hanging it has been subjected to cannot spoil. Then there is "Down in the Hollow," by Lucie Hartrath. And also there is "Falling Snow," by Frank J. Gavencky—or is that in the second room? At all events, the beauty of it makes it unforgetable.

In the next gallery or so one is overwhelmed by the number of really distinctively beautiful pictures displayed. Take the group of three dune scenes by Frank V. Dudley. Look at the vivid clear color in the two pictures by R. G. Wedderspoon. Doesn't it haunt you? Can you sniff the fragrance of the spiked clover in the sweet spreading pasture of "The Edge of the Woods" by Lucie Hartrath? Does not the excellence of the still-life, "Turnips"—most unpoetic name—by Marie G. Cameron, mean something to you? And the flowers in William Clusmann's "September Afternoon"—does their beauty wither as you look? Or does the more defiant challenge of the blossoms in Mabel Key's "From the Lincoln Park Greenhouse" fail in its effect because their wonder goes acknowledged and consciously displayed?

Do the conservative painters measure up with the radicals? Something assures one they do—and always will.

The complete list of prize awards in the exhibit is as follows:

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal with $500 went to "Flora," by Frederic V. Poole. This painting is one of the most beautiful and unusual in the exhibition. It is in effect almost like tooled leather. To appreciate its infinite charm one must examine it closely.

The Fine Arts building prize was awarded to Gustave Baumann for "Ceremony at Sunrise."

The Charles S. Peterson purchase fund—two prizes of $250 each—went to "From the Lincoln Park Greenhouse," by Mabel Key," and to "Still Life," by Gerald A. Frank.

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and prize of $200 was given to "Querena," by William P. Henderson.

The Edward B. Butler purchase fund of $200 was awarded to Allen Philbrick for the painting, "The Shore Line," and to Marguerite Kreutzberg for her canvas, "A Little Venus of the Steppes."

The Mrs. Julius Rosenwald purchase fund of $200 went to Mary H. Buehr for her painting, "Over Mantle: Bouquet."

The Rogers Park Woman's club prize of $100 was awarded to "Afternoon," by Helen Walker Szukalska—a charming panel that apparently bears a closer relationship to the story of St. Christopher and the Christ Child than it does to the time of day.

The Joseph N. Eisendrath prize was given to "White Towers," by William Owen Jr.

The Harry A. Frank prize went to Frederick Fursman for his canvas "Morning."

The Clyde M. Carr prize was given to "The Storm," by Carl Hoeckner.

The Municipal Art league prize was given to "Portrait of an Old Lady," by Ejnar Hansen.

The Business Men's Art club prize was awarded Alfred Juergens for his winter landscape, "The First Snow."

The Robert Rice Jenkins prize was given to "Jackson Park Beach," by Beatrice Levy.

The Marshall F. Holmes prize went to Edgar A. Rupprecht for his canvas "The Diving Board."

The Chicago Woman's Aid prize was awarded to "Portrait of George Spears," by Ida M. Stout.

The Englewood Woman's club prize was awarded to C. Raymond Johnson for the composition "Winter."

At the Artists' guild is now an exhibition of wrought iron floor lamps and Javanese batiks.

Tomorrow afternoon at the Art club an exhibit will open of paintings by Walter Kuhn, and toys collected by the Association of Arts and Industries.

The painter, Ethel Coe, has been elected temporary director of the art department of Northwestern university. The late Miss Stella Skinner founded the department and developed it to its present stage of importance.

"Polly," by Abram Poole, one of the lovely unusual potraits that mark the high average of the present Chicago artists' exhibition at the Art institute. The studied severity of the pose and costume but add to the gentle, quaint charm of the composition.

Adam Emory Albright is painting, again this winter, scenes of children and sunshine on the beautiful southern coast of California.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Miss Marion Gheen will speak in Fullerton hall of the Art institute. Miss Gheen's subject will deal with interior decorating.

The eleventh annual Swedish-American art exhibition is on view at the Swedish club, 1258 North La Salle street. The average struck is a high one. Probably greater pains have been taken with the exhibit this year, as the Swedish government has invited the best works to be sent to the tercentenary exhibition at Gothenburg, which opens May 8.

Dolly's Trunk

A clever new cut-out for the children—free this week in our Corset Section.

The first Easter for the Warner Wrap-Around will find thousands of women wearing it with pride and distinction, for it is a distinctively different corset designed to bring to the figure the necessary fashion lines which every woman always desires, still do it in such a way that the figure feels and appears to be unconfined—made in a host of models so that every style figure can be properly fitted.

We fit the Wrap-Around with equally as much care as we do all other corsets—and we are noted for providing the best fitting service in the city—a service for which no charge is made. She who had lost her figure through insufficient support sought to regain it and keep the new-won freedom too, and so the Wrap-Around, exactly filling the need, has gained in popularity by leaps and bounds.

It is made of fine, firm brocade and coutil and narrow sections of new firm elastic that extend from the top to the bottom of the corset and that stretch only enough to let you "wrap it and snap it." Your admiration will kindle the moment you try on the "Wrap-Around," for it gives to the figure the soft blandishment of youth—enhances the figure's natural grace, controls it superbly and all without in any way interfering with the manifold activities of sports, business, society, or duties at home. You may have the "Wrap-Around" in a host of models for every type from the most youthful to the most mature; sizes up to 36,

3.50 and up to 8.50

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What was the best joke you ever heard? Tell the world about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Got It All.

McNutt was on board a ship nearing the equator. The captain told him that they would reach the equator at 5 o'clock next morning.

At 5 McNutt was on deck.

"Well, cap," he asked, "have we reached the equator yet?"

"Yes," answered the captain; "take these binoculars and look that way."

The captain slyly pulled a hair from his head and held it in front of the glasses.

"Well, did you see the equator?"

"Yes," answered McNutt; "and there was a camel walking on it." A. F.

Proving His Point.

The old Scotch professor was trying to impress upon his students the value of observation.

"No," he complained. "Ye dinna use your faculties of observation. Ye dinna use 'em. For instance——"

Picking up a pot of chemicals of horrible odor, he stuck his finger into it, and then into his mouth.

"Taste of it, gentlemen," he commanded, as he passed the pot from student to student.

After each had licked a finger and had felt a rebellion through his whole soul, the old professor laughed in triumph.

"I told ye so!" he shouted. "Ye dinna use your faculties of observation! For if ye had observed ye would ha' seen that the finger which I stuck into the pot was na the finger which I stuck into my mouth!" W. G.

Explained.

Father was annoyed. His expensive gold watch had failed him. It wouldn't go at all.

"I can't think what's the matter," he complained. "Maybe it needs cleaning."

"O, no, daddy," objected Henry. "'Cause baby and I had it in the bathroom all day yesterday washing it." W. J.

Meece in the Hielands.

A Scotchman went hunting with a friend for big game, and was much excited.

Hearing a noise, he was startled to see a big animal and, hollering to his friend, said, "What is that?"

"Why, mon, it's a moose."

"Well," said Sandy, "if that's a moose, I dinna wish to see a rat." J. B.

Willie Plays in Luck.

The teacher told the class to write a theme on "What I would do if I had a million dollars."

At the end of the period Willie had not written a word.

"Willie, where is your theme?" asked the teacher.

"There," he answered; "that's what I would do if I had a million dollars—nothing." H. E.

Word for Word.

Smith, hotel manager, and Jones, manufacturers' agent, were talking one day about their respective business interests.

"I say," remarked Jones, "how ever do you use such an enormous quantity of pears and peaches?"

"Well," replied Smith, "we eat what we can, and what we can't we can."

"Indeed?" said the other. "We do about the same in our business."

"How is that?"

"We sell an order when we can sell it, and when we can't we cancel it." J. G.

Ring of Finality.

Margot, an old Scotchwoman, holds decided views on eternal salvation and is known to be exceedingly self-righteous.

One day she was discoursing on her favorite theme with a neighbor who, becoming vexed, exclaimed: "I do believe, Margot, that you think no one but you and the minister will go to heaven."

"Weel," replied Margot, "I'm no' so sure aboot the meenister." C. T.

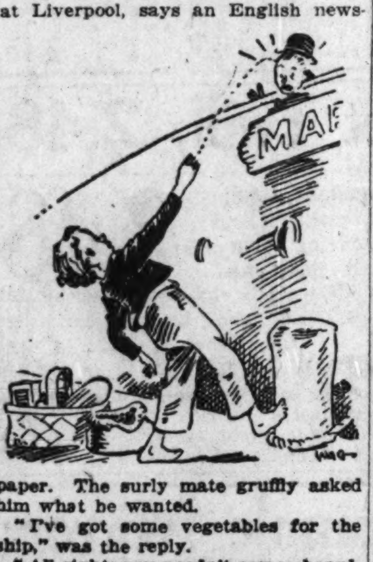
All Modern Improvements.

Jimmie came back from the circus much excited.

"O, mama," he cried as soon as he got in the house, "Mary spilled some peanuts and what do you suppose the elephant did? He picked them all up with his vacuum cleaner."

According to Orders.

A grocer's boy hailed a vessel in dock at Liverpool, says an English newspaper. The surly mate gruffly asked him what he wanted.



"I've got some vegetables for the ship," was the reply.

"All right; you needn't come aboard. Throw them up, one at a time," called the mate, and then stood ready to receive the expected packages.

"Ahoy, there; look out!" shouted the lad as he threw a dried pea at the mate. "I've got a sack of these." W. H.

Just as Well.

"Tommy," said his mother, reprovingly, "What did I say I would do to you if I caught you stealing jam again?"

"Why, that's funny, ma, that you should forget, too. I can't remember, either," he said. M. A. N.

More Like Extraction.

Maude: Sarah has taken up commercial art.

Molly—Indeed! And what does she draw?

Maude—Her husband's salary. A. P.

Beware the Ammunition.

He: I had a good joke to tell you this evening, but I see you are not in a condition to hear it.

She: Why?

He: Because if your face lights up the powder will go off. D. D.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE YOUNG MYSTERY.

I buy you toys, as well you know—
The kind that build, the kind that go;
Ingenious toys, and simple, too—
But they are not enough for you;
Ah, no, you have to supplement
These tokens of my good intent
With all the junk that you can find
With busy hands and eager mind.

When coming home from school each day,
Or when returning home from play,
Your hands are full of nails and strings,
Your pockets stuffed with silly things
Like tags and buttons, junk, débris,
Which you regard with ecstasy
And fondle with a great good will,
While all my gifts are void and nil.

Why have you this uncanny flair
For gathering trifles everywhere
And finding them of greater worth
Than all the smartest toys on earth?
Why does a bent and rusty nail
Your very heart and soul regale,
While daddy's large and lusty drum
Leaves you inert, supine, and glum?

Atom trails.

ATOMS OF MATTER.

If you were to see an atom, such as all matter is made of, it would look like nothing so much as a miniature solar system.

All matter is believed to be made of two sorts of substances, hydrogen gas and electricity. Hydrogen atoms are thought to be large, relatively heavy spheres, while electrons, or the substance of electricity, are made of exceedingly small but active little bodies. The hydrogen particle forms the nucleus of the system, while most of the electrons wheel about it at a distance as great as, or greater in proportion than, the 93,000,000 miles which separate the earth from the sun.

Chemical substances, such as iron, oxygen, soda or sulphuric acid, are supposed to consist of great clouds of atoms, each member of which is almost as complicated as a star cluster. The patterns of a few of the simpler elements are known. Helium, for example, is made of four atoms of hydrogen, minus an enormous quantity of energy. Whoever discovers a method of transmuting hydrogen into helium will probably be blown to bits, for the energy from a small tube of gas would more than equal that of a modern heavy artillery shell.

It is thought that the transmutation of hydrogen is the method whereby the sun maintains its heat. Both hydrogen and helium are found there. Scientists believe that small quantities of hydrogen are being continually changed to helium, and it is the heat from this which keeps the sun's temperature so unusually constant.

Natural transmutations are believed to be going on in the rocks of the earth at the present time, but here they involve the heaviest metals, instead of the lightest of gases, as on the sun.

No one knows exactly what energy is. It is suspected that it is matter, in some peculiar form. Energy seems to move in units, and the name "quantum" has been applied to the smallest known unit.

When radium, uranium, and other radioactive substances transmute themselves, the energy appears in the shape of helium atoms which fly at speeds of about 6,000 miles per second. As the atoms come off they are lacking in two electrons, or negative charges, and hence they carry powerful double charges of positive electricity.

Helium atoms have been photographed in flight, or, rather, the tracks they follow have been pictured. When any radioactive substance discharges atoms into suitable moist air, little drops of moisture condense along the atoms' trail. They reveal a wonderful story.

Although there are literally millions of millions of atoms in every inch of air, a flying atom rarely strikes anything. Chemists highly prize photographs of collisions because they are so few and far between. This means that while the field of force of an atom is of considerable extent, the substance of the atom is inconceivably tiny.

Atoms can pass through each other with almost no danger of a collision at all. On the rare occasions when they do strike they bounce and spin in fantastic patterns, thus attesting that their centers are seldom simple bodies like a sun, but complicated swarms of something.

Atoms rob each other of electrons right and left. Many of the latter circle as planets on the outer edge of their atoms' field of force. Because of their exposed position, the flying helium atoms knock them off or jerk them loose, just as a passing star might miss the sun but carry off Uranus or Neptune.

When an atom is bereft of an electron, its electrical balance is disturbed, and it shows a charge. Such atoms greedily grab water vapor, and it is a trail of these condensations that reveals the antics of the flying helium.

ENGLISH BEAUTY CLAY

A Letter from the President

Last year close to a million women bought Terra-derma-lax—the famous English clay massage. They bought it by mail at $2 a jar—often waiting many weeks to get it. Now comes the new Terra-derma-lax—available at any drug or department store—without a minute's wait—at $1 a jar. Half the old mail-order price!

A GREATER Terra-derma-lax! From finer, new-found English clay. With new uses, new chemical potency, new beauty magic! Made MORE EFFICIENT by science—MORE ECONOMICAL by volume sales—MORE CONVENIENT to get—by retail store distribution throughout the world.

M J McGowan

President
Dermatological Laboratories

HERE is the most important beauty discovery of the decade! Science has proven that Terra-derma-lax is a sure cure for premature wrinkles. No longer need any woman "post-date" her face with frown-marks and care-seams. No longer need she exaggerate her age with unnatural lines, formed by little tricks and habits of expression. A nightly application of Terra-derma-lax will iron out and smooth away the most deep-seated face furrows—in an amazingly short time.

Astounding things that Terra-derma-lax DOES

- —Flushes each pore of blackheads, dust specks and all impurities.
- —Brings back the full color and skin health of rugged youth, and the benefits last.
- —Reduces large pores, smooths away wrinkles and crow's-feet.
- —Stifles hair growth on face.
- —Permanently removes pimples by carrying away the foreign substances causing them.
- —Used twice a week it is the only skin-beauty insurance any woman needs.

When our research men made this discovery, after exhaustive and conclusive experiment, they literally shouted with joy. They asked us to herald the news, as the most important beauty-event of the age, in every far-reaching magazine and newspaper. Which is precisely what we are starting to do—in this first of a series of full-page advertisements.

It is pretty generally recognized now that Terra-derma-lax is the world's most efficient Beauty Massage. The semi-weekly Clay Bath is a "fixture" in nearly every enlightened woman's toilette routine.

For women were quick to appreciate the truth we published everywhere last year—that, "a clean skin is a beautiful skin." Dirt-secretions at the root of the pores cause most all facial eruptions and skin-sallowness. Terra-derma-lax goes after this imbedded dirt on the suction-cleaner principle. It draws out all the concealed impurities from the pores as a vacuum draws soot from a carpet. It cleans the undersides of the skin as thoroughly as though it turned it inside out and scoured the sub-surface.

This is no news to the users of Terra-derma-lax. It is a story gloriously told to them every day, by the radiant clarity that Terra-derma-lax has written into their complexions.

The Beauty Guarantee

MONEY BACK OFFER ISSUED WITH EVERY JAR OF TERRA-DERMA-LAX

Get your jar of Terra-derma-lax at any drug or department store. Use three treatments. If your mirror does not reveal to you a softer, clearer, lovelier complexion, return the jar and get your dollar back

Startling News Even to Old Terra-derma-lax Friends

But that Terra-derma-lax removes wrinkles! Here, indeed, IS news even to most enthusiastic clay-users. For not until now—after many thorough and decisive laboratory tests, have we announced this new-found efficiency of Terra-derma-lax.

We waited until we were sure. And today we are sure. Scientifically sure. We have tested this new Terra-derma-lax usage under all conditions, on faces grooved and grained with worry-lines. And we have seen those lines diminish, day by day, and finally vanish entirely, under laboratory observation. So we have no hesitancy in warranting Terra-derma-lax unreservedly to eradicate all premature marks and seams from any skin.

How Treatment Is Applied

The Terra-derma-lax Wrinkle treatment is applied daily—not semi-weekly, like the Clay facial. The clay is spread, like tape, in strip formation, over the wrinkled section—just before going to bed. In a few minutes, as it dries, it sets up a tingling sensation—denoting stimulated blood-flow beneath the wrinkled parts.

The tingling shortly subsides—and the clay is left on over night. Like a sad-iron smoothing out a piece of rumpled silk, it smooths out the seams in the skin—holding the cuticle taut and firm throughout the night.

In the morning wash off the clay—and the improvement is immediately seen—even after a single treatment. Repeat each night until the wrinkles, growing dimmer and dimmer, disappear entirely.

The Cause of Wrinkles

Wrinkles are caused not only by age, but by repeated facial bad habits—such as the arching of the eyebrows, the squinting of the eyelids, the furrowing of the forehead. These facial grimaces gradually form unnatural lines in the face, which quickly "set" if proper blood circulation does not wash them away.

Terra-derma-lax does two things to remove these unbecoming "expression-lines." It first stretches out the creases in the skin, by its firm but gentle "ironing" action. And second, it restores the skin-health and life in the affected area by stimulating the blood-flow.

Results Are Guaranteed

Try this new and marvelous wrinkle treatment on our guarantee of quick and positive results.

Get a jar of Terra-derma-lax from your druggist (or from any toilette goods counter) and apply the wrinkle treatment three nights.

If you do not notice decided improvement on the morning after the third treatment, return the balance of the clay in the jar, and your dollar will be refunded promptly.

A Double Delight to New Users

If you are not a user of Terra-derma-lax facials, there's a double treat in store for you. Get acquainted with the "beauty-sorcery" of these twice-a-week "clay baths." Supplement the nightly Wrinkle Treatment with twice-a-week Terra-derma-lax facials.

You'll be amazed at the new youth Terra-derma-lax will bring back into your face—the silky softness and schoolgirl full color it will return to your skin.

After the Wrinkle Treatment has conquered the crow's-feet—continue the Terra-derma-lax facials twice a week, to keep the skin in flawless condition. That's all the skin-beauty insurance any woman needs.

Insures a beautiful complexion to women of all ages

For general "conditioning" of the skin, there is no finer treatment than a semi-weekly Terra-derma-lax massage. Spread a thin mask of the clay on your face and relax in your easy chair. Soon you literally feel the clay at work—gently but firmly drawing all impurities from the pores. In forty minutes, wipe the clay away and lo! a beauty miracle!

For the woman of 40 or 50, Terra-derma-lax often takes off 10 years. For the girl in her teens or twenties, it prevents pimples and blemishes, besides enhancing and preserving the rich skin tones and texture of youth.

Five carloads of trunks, bags and cases the year's climax of luggage value-giving

Prices greatly lowered from our regular prices which themselves were low; prices lower by far than any you will see elsewhere on luggage so superior in style, construction and finish; prices extraordinarily low when you consider that luggage manufacturers' costs have risen greatly within the past few months, and that their prices already have been raised on all future shipments to us. Murphy wardrobe trunks are the principal sale feature. Sixth floor.

It is extremely unlikely that you will have the opportunity to save so largely on sterling luggage for an indefinite period to come. Although quantities are large, Monday morning selection is strongly advised in order that you may secure unrestricted choice of the better values.

Mail orders for these specials will be filled promptly and carefully. Write for catalog.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Laoruna.

SHE IS INTENSE.

By Selby Maxwell.

LABRUNIA, true to her brunette nature, is intense. Her emotions surge in her; she either likes or dislikes. She knows no middle ground. She has addressed a letter to this department setting forth some of her views, with a request for publication. Here it is:

"Dear Sir: May I reply to your article, 'What Makes a Beautiful Woman?' Do you consider yourself an authority on this subject? You are, perhaps, one who evidently likes blonde hair. You say it is the most envied of all feminine charms. Let me tell you I would not exchange my blue-black hair for all the yellow heads I ever saw. I am not a decided brunette, either, as I have blue gray eyes, but I thank the Lord every day I live that I am not a blonde.

"I have never known one who could be a real, true friend. Self-centered? Selfish? All of them! With a few exceptions their heads are as light inside as out, but perhaps they deserve a little attention, they have been out of style so long. You will, of course, think from the above that I have it in for the blondes and that this is jealousy. Not at all. I've taken too many men from them. I never knew one who could hold a real man.

"Please print this. LABRUNIA."

Any man who is fond of a diet of carbohydrates and preserved meats should marry her. She knows how to cook potatoes. Macaroni, kraut, and bread, particularly seeded bread, leap to success at her touch. She will serve some sort of process cured meat at least three times a week during all the time she is keeping a table going.

But she cannot bake good beans. and she cannot fry a steak properly. She doesn't understand apple pie. She doesn't understand wild duck.

She doesn't understand blonde hair. This is because she is an Alpine, and not a Nordic. Alpines never have, and probably never will, get the Nordic viewpoint on anything.

RADIO

FUTURE OF RADIO.

IS radio going to hurt the telephone industry? This question is being asked in electrcial circles. It is not probable that the telephone industry will be injured. It will more likely be helped.

At the present time radio broadcasting is on a rather insecure basis. It costs lots of money to hire singers and speakers, run sending stations, and generally to conduct a broadcast. Most of this price is now coming out of the pockets of those who buy radio equipment. The radio corporations figure that if any one is interested enough to put up a receiving outfit to hear music he should also help pay for his entertainment.

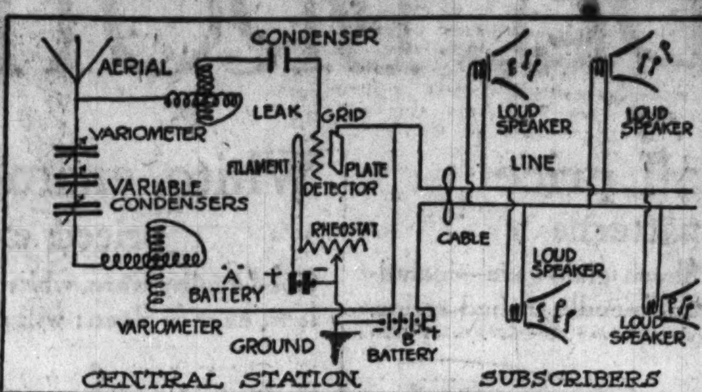
But this idea is not any too practical. It has four disadvantages. First, not all home made sets work well. Second once in operation, the upkeep of a receiving set is not great, while broadcasting costs go right on. Third, the country will eventually be saturated with sets, and it is even now about filled to capacity, with every amateur who really wants a set possessing one. Fourth, the radio companies, having sold their equipment to enable buyers to hear their broadcasted music, find that legally they must continue to furnish the broadcasting as a part of the sale.

The companies are trying to meet the problem by putting new equipment on the market under the claim that it is necessary to better receiving, but the public is canny and sees through the trick.

Now the average person who might like to hear the music does not know anything about electricity. Nor does he care to tinker with a set. But he does want the service and is willing to pay for it, provided it entails no greater effort than turning a button.

It seems probable that some telephone company will eventually erect a central receiving plant where waves from all over the world will be caught, tuned, separated, and amplified into proper proportions. All the effort which is now being scattered over thousands of little sets will be concentrated on one big, really worth while receiver.

The company will rent out magnivoxes, or loud speakers. By appropriate circuits each of them can be connected to the central receiving set. In this way a continuous reception is possible for everybody, with the least discontent and the greatest possible profits for all concerned.



The receiving set of the future will look something like this.

LAST CALL!

World-Famous Pocket Series Offered Until February 28 at Sensational Reduction! Size of Books 3½x5 inches. Books Printed Uniformly; Bound in Heavy Card Cover Stock. For Limited Time We Are Cutting Price to 5c per Book in Order to Make an Important Experiment that May Establish New Publishing Standards!

5 Only C Per Book Until Feb. 28

I have sold 25,000,000 copies of my pocket series in three years. Over 500,000 book buyers are now on my mailing list—the greatest aggregation of book buyers in the world. After careful investigation I find that it cost approximately a million dollars to sell these 25,000,000 books. That means that for every dime I received I had to spend five cents in order to make the sale. So I have really been getting only five cents for each book I sold so far. I have solved the production problem—I produce these books at an astonishingly low cost. The actual cost above the price of raw material is very slight indeed. This is because of especially made machinery that makes a joke of production problems. Mass production has cut the cost of the book, but distribution costs remain the same—5c per book. That is the problem I am working on now, and I may solve it. I have a plan which I intend to try out with readers of this announcement, and if it works I shall then go to the general public. Everything depends on this present announcement. It must "make good," or the price will remain 10c per copy after February 28, 1923. In brief, what I must do is simply this: The sales cost per book must be reduced from 5c per book to 1c per book. That means we must get five times as much business on the same advertising and distribution outlay. Am I asking too much? That remains to be seen. The response to this amazing announcement will decide the question. There is nothing so convincing as an actual test, and that is the real reason for this special sale.

We sell a book cover made of genuine grain seal leather, intended to slip over any of the books in the Pocket Series, preventing soiling and tearing of the covers. We sell these specially made covers at cost—50c each. The leather covers are unlettered, which, together with the quality of the material, give them a quiet dignity. Simply add 50c to your remittance and say you want a leather cover. One cover will be sufficient for all the books you order.

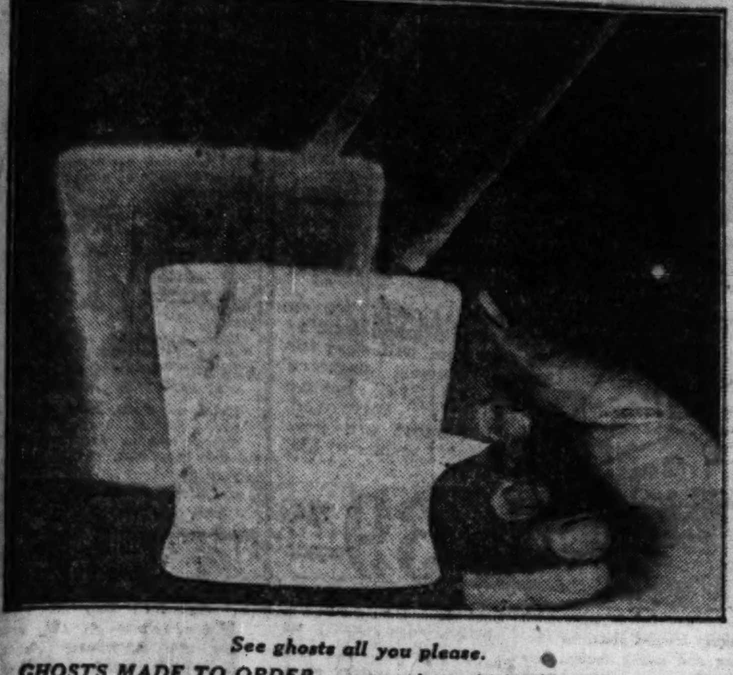
PSYCHOLOGY.

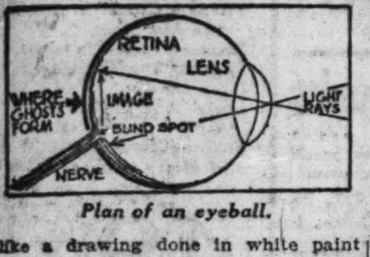


See ghosts all you please.

GHOSTS MADE TO ORDER.

Do you believe in ghosts? Many people do. The superstition is deeply founded in the human race. Wherever there are rooted superstitions there, you may be sure, is some grain of fact.

Ghosts are invariably described as white, transparent wraiths. They can be seen through, but their edges are somewhat whiter than their interiors, like a drawing done in white paint against a darker background.



Plan of an eyeball.

Ghosts, strange to say, are seldom seen in inky dark places, but seem to prefer places where the light, though dim, will permit various objects to be discerned.

The property of seeing ghosts is a quality of eyesight. When you behold a phantom it means that your eyes are tired; just aches in your hips, back, and shoulders mean that your muscles are tired. But, as eyes are poorly furnished with nerves for registering fatigue pain, their protests must be made known in another way.

The retina of the eye, the place where light images are conveyed to the proper nerves, consists of a pavement of little cells in the back of the eyeball. Each cell is connected to a nerve fiber. When night falls on a cell it is temporarily put hors de combat, and this shock, transmitted to the brain, is our sensation of light.

If a cell in your retina has an opportunity to rest for a few seconds, or if the stimulus is not too strong, it quickly recovers its former sensitiveness and is quite as good as before.

Every eyeball is provided with six muscles, which shift the eye in the socket, and by their constant tuggings cause light to successively fall on different parts of the retina, thus giving one set of cells a chance to rest while another is in use. However, if the stimulation you get is so strong that the retina cannot recover rapidly, you will be sure to see a ghost, which is, to speak truly, the image on your eyeball of the object that you last looked at.

Go into a closed room, where there is no light. Wait until your eye has grown quite accustomed to the dark. Then for the smallest fraction of a second possible, flash on a bright electric light. The pattern of the wires will be fixed in your eyes and will blaze in the darkness, turning red and green and pruple until they finally die away. If you let the lamp shine a short length of time your eyeball will writhe to avoid it, and the resulting ghost will be a glare of light instead of a sharply defined image.

Nerves which have been stimulated cannot see anything else while the persistent image lasts.

While the filaments are yet glowing in your eyes go into a dimly lighted room. They now look white to you, like colorless silhouettes relieved in thin air. They are true, conventional ghosts.

The human eye sees shapes far better than it sees what is in the shapes. You behold masses much more readily than you behold details. And because all nerves respond more readily to changes of condition rather than to intensities you see edges of things best of all. An artist realizes this well when, with a few strokes of a pen, he represents the outline of whatever he wishes to depict. When you look at an object you see its outline most vividly.

When your eyes are tired, as in the evening after a hard day's work, the muscles that move the eyeballs do not function as readily as normal. It often happens, then, that your eyes look too fixedly at objects, so that ghosts persist after you look away.

You can produce ghosts artifically by looking fixedly at any object you please—a person, a face, a cup, or anything. When you look away a sepulchral white silhouettewill linger in the air for a few seconds, often with uncanny effect.

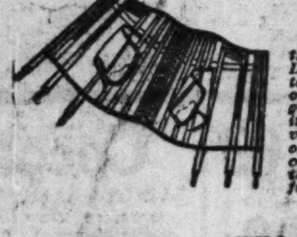
HEALING CREAM STOPS CATARRH

Clogged Air Passages Open at Once—Nostrils Cleared

If your nostrils are clogged and your head stuffed because of catarrh or a cold, get Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this pure, antiseptic, germ destroying cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head and membranes. Instant relief.

How good it feels. Your head is clear. Your nostrils are open. You breathe freely. No more hawking or snuffling. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed up, choked up and miserable. Relief is sure.

The Ely Cream Balm Co., New York



The inner belt of the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET is attached to the inside on each half of the garment. When laced it is hidden from view—cannot slip out of place or cause discomfort. Supports the abdomen and lifts from the pelvic floor.

The One Means of Positive Reduction

Corset Comfort Guaranteed

The results that thousands of women have accomplished in reducing the lines of their figures with the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET is little short of phenomenal. As a reducing garment the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET is the one absolutely comfortable corset for women who have large, fatty abdomens. Reductions as much as 8 inches in waist line have been made, and yet it is all done with the utmost comfort and relief.

That dragging feeling so common with women having pendulous abdomens is eliminated entirely. As a preventive of obesity many women wear no other type of corset. It is certain in its accomplishments and its consistent use means forestalling a condition that is certain to impair the form.

Many women are in the habit of lacing the body without regard for the anatomy or consideration of the necessity of scientifically correct abdominal support. The KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET with its patented inner Uplift Belt overcomes the short-comings of the ordinary reducing corset and gently lifts the abdomen and the contents of the abdominal cavity instead of crowding straight back and forcing the internal organs downward.

When laced the inner Uplift Belt is hidden from view. It cannot slip out of place or cause discomfort. It does not interfere with the movements of the body—does not gouge when sitting nor cause the sensation of slipping down under the garment. Instead, it affords a delightful feeling of comfortable security, gives an upright, graceful, stylish carriage to the body, permits unrestrained, healthful breathing and marked comfort and relief from the first minute of wear.

So positive is the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET in its results that dressmakers universally endorse this garment, as it enables the creation of gowns that impart a style and grace of figure most satisfying to their customers.

Free Fitting

This Week by Specially Trained Corsetieres

So that you can prove for yourself without obligation that the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET will give you positive results in reduction, in comfort, in relief and style, you are invited to take advantage of the free fitting service at one of the especially selected stores or shops listed below. Specially trained corsetieres who know the human anatomy and the needs of present day women are at your service. Special attention will be given to women with drop stomachs and bowels, obesity and other ailments caused by weakened abdominal walls. We cordially invite mothers and women who have had major operations of the abdominal cavity to take advantage of this service. Visit your nearest shop and experience the most pleasing results possible in modern corseting. The Kellogg Uplift Corset can be purchased only from these stores and corset shops.

Make This Test

Cup the hands under the abdomen with the tips of the fingers touching groin seam and exert a gentle, upward and inward pressure. The relief you experience immediately is the same effect you will secure by wearing the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET.

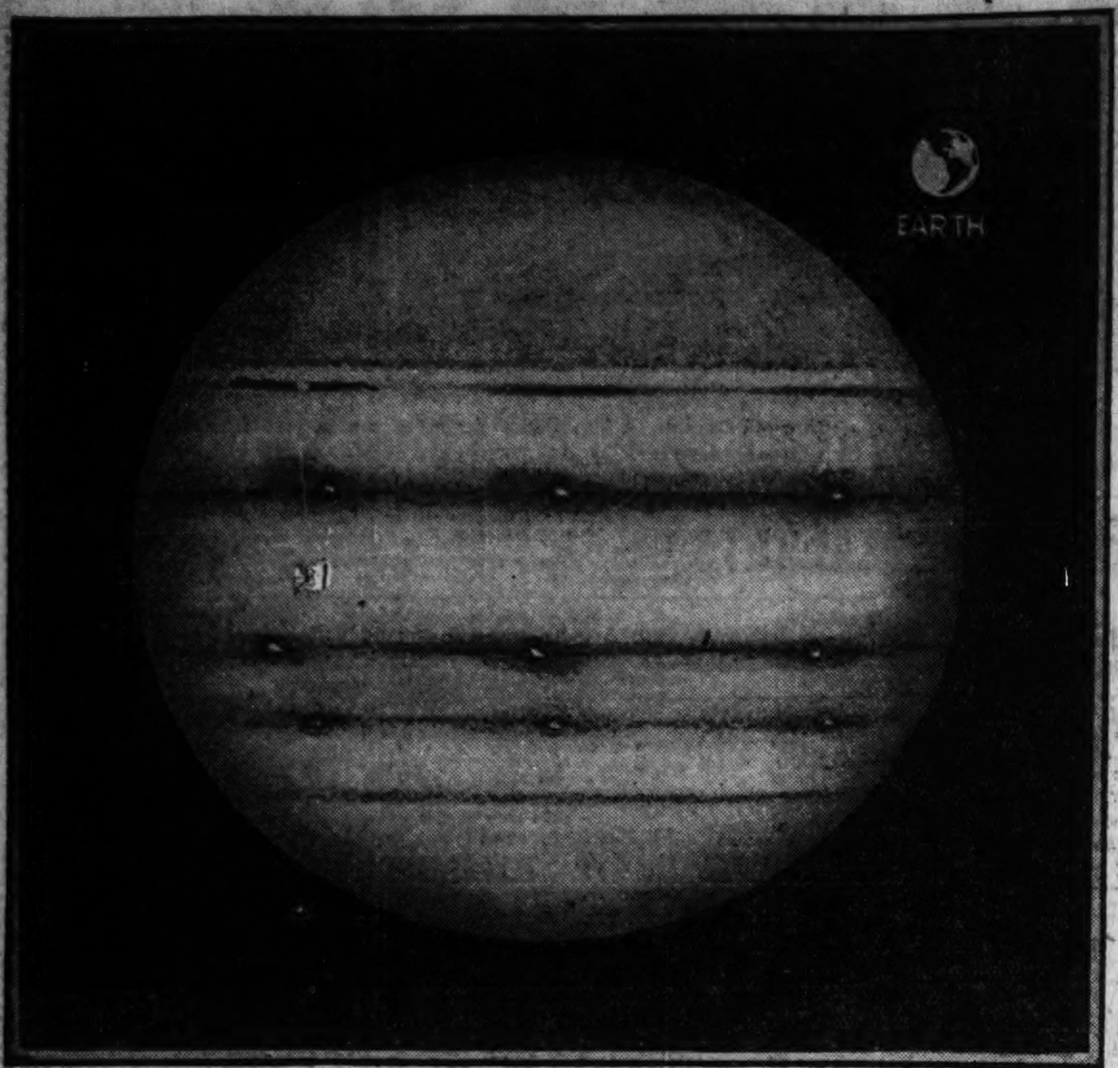
ASTRONOMY



The planet Jupiter. The little dot up in the corner represents the earth.

WEIGHTS ON WORLDS.

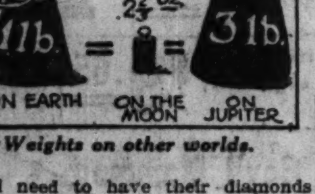
If you were to ascend in a balloon or go down into a deep mine, gravity would be appreciably less. The earth's pull is concentrated at sea level. At the center of the earth and out in space, far removed from any matter, there is no gravity.

Gravity is a matter of size and density. Every world has an attractive power all its own, whose strength depends on the physical nature of that body.

On the moon, 240,000 miles away, gravity is only one-sixth as strong as here. A man who tips the scales here at 180 pounds would weigh just thirty there, no more than a 3 year old child.

People playing baseball on the moon would need to have their diamonds of unusual proportion. On earth the distance between bases is ninety feet. On the moon it would have to be 120 yards, or longer than a big city block, to maintain the ratio. A good clout to the ball, that here would send it over the fence, would drive it a quarter of a mile on the moon, and would render the art of fielding somewhat complicated, to say the least.

Yet a base runner would have no more trouble in covering these six fold distances than he has on the earth. His spaces would be greater, but his weight would be less. Fancy how he could go, covering forty feet at a bound.



Weights on other worlds.

If Jupiter ever gets to have any solid land, in place of the billows of rolling clouds that now constitute that sphere, gravity there will be three times as great as on the earth.

A man of 180 pounds would here tip the scales at 590 pounds, as heavy as a circus freak.

Baseball on Jupiter would be played with difficulty. The bases would only be thirty feet apart. "Watch me skim around this little indoor track!" you exclaim.

You pick up the bat. It is as heavy as a length of water pipe. "Who put lead in this stick?" you ask.

You swat the ball. The recoil sets your hands stinging. The sphere flies like it were sailing through thin mush. You run! Or do you? Slowly and with great labor you tug one foot forward a step. Then the other. You groan as though you had a barrel of sand on your back. You run with that same frisking freedom that a member of the chain gang displays when he has a 100 pound cannon ball hung to each foot. Jupiter makes you weigh too much.

If celestial navigation ever becomes an accomplished fact, men will have to keep away from Jupiter, or else be crushed by their own weight.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Callahan and Bliss:

"Conditions today remind me of the stone age."

"What do you know about the stone age?"

"They were hard times."

"What do lawyers do when they die?"

"Well, what do they do?"

"Lie still."

"Does not applause denote pleasure in an audience?"

"Why, certainly."

"I notice you always get more applause when you go off the stage than when you come on."

"Our hired girl left us suddenly today."

"What time did she go?"

"I don't know, she took our clock along."

"I believe a storm is brewing."

"I hope it will rain beer."

"I read today that oil is good for the hair."

"Impossible. See how bald John D. Rockefeller is."

"When I was rich my best girl turned me down, but after I lost all my money she accepted me. How do you account for it?"

"Well, you know how crazy a woman is to get anything that's reduced."

DON'T SPOIL YOUR CHILD'S HAIR BY WASHING IT

When you wash your child's hair be careful what you use. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water, and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last every one in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits; 15c and 30c.

MISS MAUDE ROYDEN.

Miss Maude Royden, former assistant preacher at City temple, London, a graduate of Oxford and a member of the Anglican church, will speak next Tuesday evening at Orchestra hall under the auspices of the Young Woman's Christian association on the subject, "Can We Set the World in Order?" On Thursday evening she will speak on the same subject in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston.

The present tour of America will make the third one made by Miss Royden. She spoke in the United States in 1911 in the interest of equal suffrage. And again last year she came to this country to speak at the convention of the Young Woman's Christian association at Hot Springs, Ark. So great has been the demand for her services that she is now making a tour of the principal cities of the nation, speaking daily in the largest halls and churches.

Miss Royden is the daughter of Sir Thomas Royden, first baronet of Frankby hall, Birkenhead, and lord mayor of Liverpool. She was educated at Cheltenham Ladies' college and at Lady Margaret hall, Oxford. Later she became a lecturer on English literature in the Oxford extension courses. In 1918 she accepted the invitation of the Rev. John Fort Newton, pastor of City temple, London, to become assistant preacher, and frequently addressed large audiences in this noted church.

Chicago Catholic parishes announce a long list of entertainments, receptions, dances, carnivals, and other festivities today, tomorrow, and Tuesday. Wednesday will be Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, when religious services will fill the period up to April 1, Easter Sunday.

A carnival will be held this afternoon and evening at St. Monica's parish hall, Wabash avenue and 37th street. Tomorrow evening the parish will hold a Madri Gras. At St. Finbarr's, South Harding avenue and 14th street, there will be held a popularity contest and penny social this evening at 8. COMPTOMETER OPERATORS are in demand!

DURING the past three months we received over 600 requests from owners for operators for permanent positions. Our training school is unable to meet this constant demand.

A Short Course—5 to 7 Weeks

5 to 7 weeks' training will make you a specialist and immediately eligible for a pleasant position at a specialist's salary. The demand for operators in the South Chicago and Hammond districts far exceeds the supply. If you want a position in this vicinity, investigate without delay.

We assist you to positions without charge.

Girls with 2 to 4 years' high school education preferred, but business experience is not necessary. The course is short and the work readily learned; the tuition fee is very small; and our graduates are in demand.

Call at the school, write or phone principal for particulars.

MAN

KERNEL OF NORDIC CULTURE.

"WHAT is civilization?" That question must be answered with another question, "Whose civilization?"

"Our own civilization: What is it made of?"

The America of today is the highest expression of the Nordic mind, or modern civilization. Every race of men, even the lowest Papuan, has some standard of culture which it rigorously maintains. This is its civilization. You can be as sure that a man will, in his heart, be an advocate of his own civilization as you can of the racial color of his eyes or the racial shape of his teeth. His instincts are a part of him; he is born with them, and there is no human power that can make them greater or less.

Any civilization is the sum total of the ruling passions of that people. Tell me what men do, and I will tell you what they are.

Nordic civilization, predominantly our civilization, has certain peculiar masks that brand it unique among the customs of the world. It is, foremost, the most ideal civilization of all. Nordics will always give the other fellow, no matter how unworthy, a chance to show what he is. Nordics will always listen to new things, but not to the extent of being quickly swayed by them, as are the Semitic races.

At times, in the movies, pictures of cave women are shown, depicting intrinsically charming creatures acting with freedom and abandon, and clothed in ragged, ill sewn skins, fur side out. It is extremely unlikely that such conditions have existed in our race since Neanderthal days, if before. From what scientists can gather, Nordic civilization in the past was rigorous to an extreme unknown anywhere else on earth. It was so severe that several almost universal customs that flourish elsewhere were here weeded out by popular disapproval.

Here is a list of the customs which never took root in Nordic hearts, not, perhaps, because they were not present in the hearts of individuals, but because the whole body politic frowned on them. Raise any of these issues today, and watch the storm that follows.

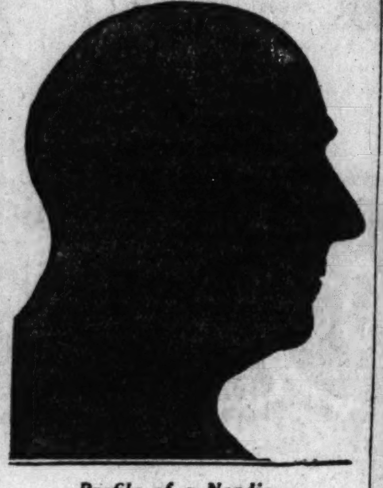
Nordics have never practiced polygamy. Some few sporadic instances have occurred, but generally speaking, the home is now, and always has been, a sacred institution.

[Photo by Paramount.]

Pauline Garon in "Adam's Rib." A prehistoric white woman as she was not.

Nordics have never long endured an absolute monarchy. Semites, by contrast, have never flourished under anything else. Every Nordic king, president, or ruler, takes an oath to the people to see to it that their customs are administered in the approved way. This is his job. Every ruler from time immemorial who has attempted to be absolute has faced a rebellion, and usually a successful one.

Cannibalism is unknown to Nordics. If they ever ate each other, it was so far back in geological times that all instincts of it have been erased. Science claims that they never did, that the loathing in which we hold a cannibal is due to our habits of helping and protecting each other, which Nordics have practiced since they became men. All other races have at one time or another eaten their kin.



Profile of a Nordic.

Womankind has never been abased in Nordic lands. This is in sharp contrast with the almost universal low place of women in Mediterranean and Oriental lands. Indeed, the word "wife" does not exist in most Semitic tongues, and her status as we recognize it is unknown. A blonde woman would do well to remember this in marrying a dark south European.

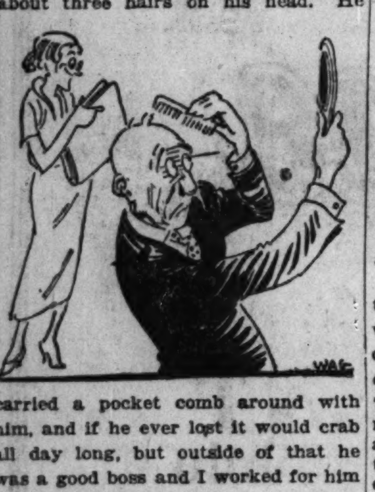
The varying Aryan elements in a civilization, Nordic, Celtic, and Cro-magnon, contribute to its strength. The foreign elements, Semite, Alpine, Mongol, and Negro, carry weakness.

England has more of the Celtic than America. All her politics and policies are therefore softer and less calculated to drastic "this is right and you'll take it" Nordic actions.

The Queerest Boss I Ever Had

Proud of Three Hairs.

The queerest boss I ever had had about three hairs on his head. He carried a pocket comb around with him, and if he ever lost it would crab all day long, but outside of that he was a good boss and I worked for him for quite a number of years. L. W.



Worse than a Chimney.

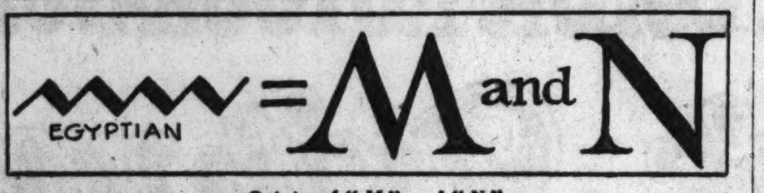
My boss runs a one man smoke house under the guise of a law office. He always keeps the outer door, the transom, and all the windows closed. He smokes from nine to twelve cigars a day. His clothes reek of smoke, the window panes are blue with smoke, the mahogany doors are coated with a heavy film of smoke, every book smells smoky and my typewriter and desk are bitter with smoke.

His whole body exudes smoke as he gets up to move about. His neck and ears look like alligator skin, his collars like saffron bags. All his collars are frayed. Friend wife finds that no ordinary washing feazes them. The smoke plus soil must be ground out, and the collar frayed in the process.

Two cuspidors, one on either side of his swivel chair, grace his private office. He never stops smoking for a man client. On the entrance of a woman, he lays the cigar on the desk, where he gives it a draw just often enough to keep up his smoke barrage, much to her discomfort and disgust. One thing he can be quite certain of, a client will rarely enter his office twice.

When I start for the office I feel about as cheerful as King Charles on his way to the block, and when I leave at night, I feel like a quarter's worth of smoked herring. F. G.

Letters



Origin of "M" and "N."

SCRIBES AND SYMBOLS.

M AND N are almost the same by evolution. Back in Egyptian days the scribes had a symbol that looked much like the scribble of a child pretending to write. Some scholars believe this sign originally stood for "water," while others claim it was the symbol for an "owl" or "hawk." This does not make a great deal of difference; we are chiefly interested in the fact that the sign was pronounced with a labial or dento-labial sound.

When the Phoenicians borrowed the Egyptian system of writing they took this zigzag shaped letter with the others. M and N were clearly defined in their minds, and to show this in their writings they made a big symbol for M and a little one for N.

The true form of these two letters is still drawn this way, particularly in high class pieces of hand lettering. But both have had to conform to the requirements of the printing press, which prefers vertical to slant letters. N is now never drawn slantingly in a line of upright type, yet its two legs are thin lines and its bar a thick one, thus proclaiming that although its form has changed, its nature has not.

SOUR STOMACH

Best Relieved by Chewing a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet—No Water Needed—Carry Them Loose in Your Pocket.

What the average person needs in this day and age is the balanced stomach sweetener that he can take at any time, at any place and get relief right away. This effect is had with one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. No matter what you eat or drink, if the stomach sours, gets gassy, seems to bloat and press against the heart, if it belches and heartburn makes you miserable, try these tablets. The moment they reach the stomach they neutralize the acids, they give the stomach the alkaline effect it is craving for and thus you soon feel good, the stomach is settled and the faults of indigestion are thus corrected. You may now eat pie, cheese, sausage, pickles, if you get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets today at any drug store.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints, relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You'll enjoy this old fashioned tobacco of mine. Old Dame Nature makes it—sun cured and nature flavored, it draws its sweetness and aroma from the soil and ozone. It's "Bred in Old Kentucky" and popular everywhere.

After you fill your favorite pipe with this old time smoke, you'll sit back and say, "Oh, boy! Why didn't I discover this before?"

Send me your address and I'll forward you promptly a generous FREE helping. Say whether you want a mild, medium, or strong smoke. You'll come back for more, too.

WANTED—A YOUNG WOMAN,
COLLEGE GRADUATE,
22 TO 25 YEARS OF AGE.

A very good position in the women's advertising department of a large newspaper is awaiting a substantial young woman, preferably a college graduate, whose major subjects should be of help to her in advertising sales work.

The young woman in whose application we are most interested is probably just entering commercial life, and has hesitated only because of her inability to make a connection with an organization where environment and association were suitable.

This position will not pay a large starting salary, but after you have received a thorough training in, and develop your sales ability your earnings should be considerably greater than those of the average secretary.

The work is interesting—not monotonous—neither is it difficult. Every assistance will be given to enable you to make a success of the work.

To qualify you should be attractive, possess a pleasing personality, and the ability to convince people with whom you would come in contact of your viewpoint.

If you are interested in such a position and wish to work permanently, write us a letter, giving your age, whether married or single, as well as salary desired, address, and telephone number. Address E B 331, Tribune.

ATTENTION.
Splendid opening in our firm for 2 capable women to qualify for Department Managers. Must know Chicago thoroughly. Apply bet. 10-4.

CAPITOL BLDG.

[FORMERLY MASONIC TEMPLE].
N. E. Cor. State at Randolph.

The meeting place is the market place. 5,400,000 enter the Capitol Building to attend lodges, conventions, clubs, etc., every year. In other words, more people than live in Indiana and Wisconsin combined.

From the beginning of business the meeting place, where the people go, has always been the market place, where they buy—goods or services. Is there a more desirable building in all Chicago to house your business?

Big improvements under way. Desirable space for high grade shops and offices now available—at reasonable rates. Act quickly.

A Direct Appeal!

To the fair minded USED CAR BUYER BY A FAIR MINDED Exchange Car Dept.

This is not a "Slaughter Sale" in the sense the word is commonly used, nor is it a sale where you will find "something - for - nothing" being doled out in large quantities. You don't remember seeing that done recently, anyhow, have you?

For the individual, however, who is reasonably seeking mechanical service in a used car and a dollar returned for every dollar invested, this is a golden moment.

We have chosen this particular time to announce this sale in order that the buyer, having fresh in his mind the details and appearance of the motor cars on display at the New Car Show, will realize how close our used cars are brought to "new" by an extensive reconditioning.

This Sale

Places at your disposal the finest selection of used car values it is possible to offer at prices that will prove by comparison to be from $100 to $300 less than the market.

A complete line of reconditioned Jordans in all models and body styles, Coupes, Broughams, Sedans, California-top equipped Touring Cars and open Tourings and Roadsters. You will also find Packards, Cadillacs, Marmons, Mercers, Buicks, Studebakers, and lighter cars in open and closed types.

You Know

Where the proof of the pudding lies. These statements mean nothing unless we are in a position to show you by concrete comparison of Prices, Models, and Mechanical Condition that they are positive facts. We cannot do this unless you think it worth a personal call of investigation.

Our Used Car Department, where you will find this sale in progress, is located at

in the heart of the used car center, making comparison of values an easy matter.

THE Shrewd Buyer

Covers all the groud available before placing his order. It is our candid belief it would be folly to invest in a used car without first having personally investigated this sale.

Bird-Sykes

20 YEARS ON MICHIGAN-AV.
2215 Michigan-av.

Paige and Jewett

WHEN BIRD-SYKES SAY:
"REBUILT."

They do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." "REBUILT" in the Bird-Sykes shop means actually dismembering such units as engine, transmission, rear axle, and other vital parts and completely rebuilding the same, using new parts where necessary.

Coach work, which includes removing body and fender dents, re-covering worn tops, repairing and fitting of curtains, also upholstery, etc., is accomplished by experts in our shops.

Every "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" car is given a high grade paint job. Every "Rebuilt" car is thoroughly tested to meet our rigid standards and is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time, Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

PAIGE TOURING 1921 MODEL 6-44. This is our light "6" economical light 5 passenger touring car, has been "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt," and therefore in first class mechanical condition. It is most attractively finished and equipped. The paint, which is Dark Green, is new. Nickeled radiator shell, disk wheels with nickeled hub caps, spring bumper, wing cap, cowl ventilator, motometer, add much to the beauty of this car—in fact, we believe it to be the smartest looking car of its class to be found anywhere. Five very good cord tires, sun shade, tools, etc., included. Price, $850.

ROAMER SPORT 1921 6 CYL. Has been "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" and repainted a rich Burgundy Wine. Very smart appearing car, with russet Spanish leather upholstering that harmonizes with the paint. Silvered radiator shell and headlamps, individual fenders, step plates, wire wheels and victoria rear curtain give this car a custom built appearance. Cord tires in first class condition. At our price this is a snap in a late high grade Sport model. Price, $1,075.

PAIGE 6-51 SEDAN. This 1918 automobile has had excellent care. It is an ideal family car that seats 7 persons comfortably. The original finish is still good, the whipcord upholstery shows wear only on the driving seat, and mechanically it is ready for instant service without repairs or expense. Is equipped with 5 good tires, bumper, heater. We consider this a very unusual value; $475.

LEXINGTON SPORT, 1921 MODEL. In appearance this car is identical with the famous "Lark" Lexington model and has been repainted a deep maroon color, black fenders and trim. The top and Spanish leather upholstery are in excellent condition and it is well equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, 2 spring bumpers, motometer, and other extras. Excellent value; $875.

PAIGE 6-42, 1920, LIGHT 5 PASS. TOURing. This sturdy economical little car offers the next owner new car service. Cylinder block has been reground, new pistons, rings, wrist pins, etc., installed, making the engine as powerful, efficient and economical as when new. Entire chassis has had our rigid inspection, and necessary replacements have been made. Repainted in a most attractive blue color. Has 5 good cord tires, spring bumper, built-in lock, etc. Its value will be immediately recognized by any one who takes a demonstration. See this today; $675.

HAYNES 1921 TOURING 5 PASS. This is probably the best conditioned Haynes touring car of this model to be found anywhere. A comparison will more than impress you. It is a high class, well built car and shows little service and very careful handling. Looks "young." Top, paint, and fenders conditions are excellent. Upholstery shows little or no wear. There is nothing to buy in the way of equipment and the cord tires are all in good condition. $775.

PAIGE ROADSTER 1921, MODEL 6-44. This ideal roomy 2 passenger Roadster is fitted with the Bird-Sykes full vision glass enclosure. Chassis has been "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" and first class mechanically. The dark blue paint is new and the top, upholstery, and fender conditions are beyond criticism. A set of almost new cord tires, spring bumper, spotlight, windshield cleaner included. Spacious luggage compartment in rear. We seldom have a car of this type to offer and therefore urge early action. Price, $775.

FORD TOURING 1920. This is the finest Ford of this model we have had in many months. Is in excellent shape mechanically; has all good tires; well equipped. Body condition good; natural wood wheels, starter, demountable rims. Price, $150.

5 Bargains AT THE Peerless FACTORY BRANCH.

PEERLESS TOURING 1920. Rarely have we had the opportunity to offer to the public a car as late as this one in the same fine condition that this car is in. It has just recently been refinished a Dustproof Gray. Mechanically it is way above the average. It has not had the average use and we know that some lucky purchaser will be given the utmost of satisfaction for many thousands of miles. The equipment is very complete. The cord tires are excellent and an inspection and demonstration will prove to you, without a doubt, that it is a rare bargain at our price of $900.

CHANDLER SEDAN 7 PASS. 1920. This very late model Chandler Sedan is one of the best looking cars of its type that we have had in our possession for a long time. Mechanically it will make a most satisfactory demonstration. The coach work and tires are exceptionally fine. Rarely is a car as fine as this one offered to the public for so little money. It represents a tremendous saving as compared with the price of a new one today. Your quick action will be necessary if you would avail yourself of this bargain. Do not let the price that we have put on it influence your judgment as it is being sacrificed for immediate sale. Price, $950.

PEERLESS 4 PASS SPORT, 1920. It is priced low purposely for today's sale. $600.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1918. We have just taken this car in on trade on one of our latest series and feel very fortunate in being able to offer it at such a price. To equal it in transportation and comfort you will have to spend many hundreds of dollars more than we ask for it. Do not let the price we have put on this car lead you to think that it is "junk" or that you would have to add a good many hundreds of dollars on it before it would be serviceable because in its present condition it is ready to go out and give many thousands of miles of satisfactory service. See it today as it will undoubtedly be sold to the first person who looks at it. The price is $600.

PACKARD

CADILLAC 8 TOURING, TYPE 51. This car is equipped with very fine demountable winter top, excellent tires, bumper, seat covers, etc. It is well painted in dark green and is good for continuous service for a long period of time. We can highly recommend this purchase at our price of $350.

REO "SIX" TOURING CAR, 1918 MODEL. This is an exceptionally fine car throughout. It has new cylinder block, pistons, rings, new top and side curtains, and will render satisfactory service for a long period of time. It is painted in Dark Green, well equipped with tires, and offers a wonderful value at our special price of $400.

CADILLAC 8 BERLINE LIMOUSINE, MODEL 55. This car is very popular with undertakers and high class livery trade. It has always been in the hands of a private owner who has kept it in excellent condition. The paint and upholstery are like new. This limousine is unusually well equipped, with a set of Westinghouse shock absorbers, practically new set of cord tires, bumper, etc. A bargain for any one in the market for a Berline Limousine. Price, $1,000.

PACKARD TWIN SIX, MODEL 3-25 TOURING. This car is identical in lines with our present Packard Twin Six, varying only in the wheelbase. We have thoroughly overhauled the motor and chassis, refinished the car in dark Packard blue with cream wheels and equipped it with a nickeled bumper, full set of tools, spare rim, etc. This car represents a value very difficult to duplicate at $1,500.

PACKARD SINGLE SIX COUPE. This is a rebuilt and guaranteed automobile, and, of course, has every appearance of new throughout. It is equipped with bumper, new set covers and standard new car accessories. All old paint has been burned off and the car refinished in standard Packard blue, with baked enamel hood, fenders, radiator shell, etc. This high grade coupe can be purchased for $2,250.

PACKARD TWIN SIX TOWN CABRIOLET. Here is a Packard so admirably constructed and finished that we doubt, indeed, if you will ever find a more inviting closed car. It is a distinctive custom built Town Car Cabriolet, of 4 or 5 passenger capacity, and will make a special appeal to the person who likes a touch of individuality with good taste. Chassis has been Packard rebuilt, is equipped with new Kelly-Springfield cord tires, and will be warranted and serviced the same as a new Packard vehicle. It is an extreme value at $4,000.

PACKARD
Town Cabriolet,
$4,000
Custom Built by Derham.

Packard New Car Warranty and Service.

Here is a special Packard so admirably constructed and finished that we doubt, indeed, if ever you will find a more inviting closed car. It is a distinctive custom built Town Car Cabriolet of 4 or 5 passenger capacity and will make a special appeal to the person who likes a touch of individuality with good taste.

The body, which has the desirable "landau," or collapsible feature, was designed and built by J. J. Derham, of Rosemont, Pa., one of America's most exclusive body craftsmen. The interior is finished in rich soft imported figured broadcloth and provided with hassock, pillow, 2 vanity cases [one with high grade timepiece], and electric phone for communication with chauffeur. Top and rear of body are leather covered and beautifully proportioned windows offer unobstructed vision. The entire car has been given a high grade "burn-off" paint job and is finished in combination Packard Blue and Black. Highest grade materials obtainable used throughout.

Mounted on a Packard Twin Six chassis of 128 inch wheelbase, with its full sweeping fenders and special windshield, it suggests grace, lightness, and speed—all this in a high grade car that can be handled most easily in traffic or parked conveniently when desired.

The chassis has been "Packard Rebuilt," which, in the Packard shops has a meaning perhaps unparalleled in the industry. New 35x5 Kelly-Springfield tires, snubbers, bumper, included in addition to standard Packard equipment and accessories.

To the purchaser of this car will be extended the same warranty and service given to purchasers of new Packard vehicles. A duplicate of this car today would cost approximately $8,500. At our price you net a very substantial saving. You will rarely, if ever, get such a value again at the attractive price of $4,000.

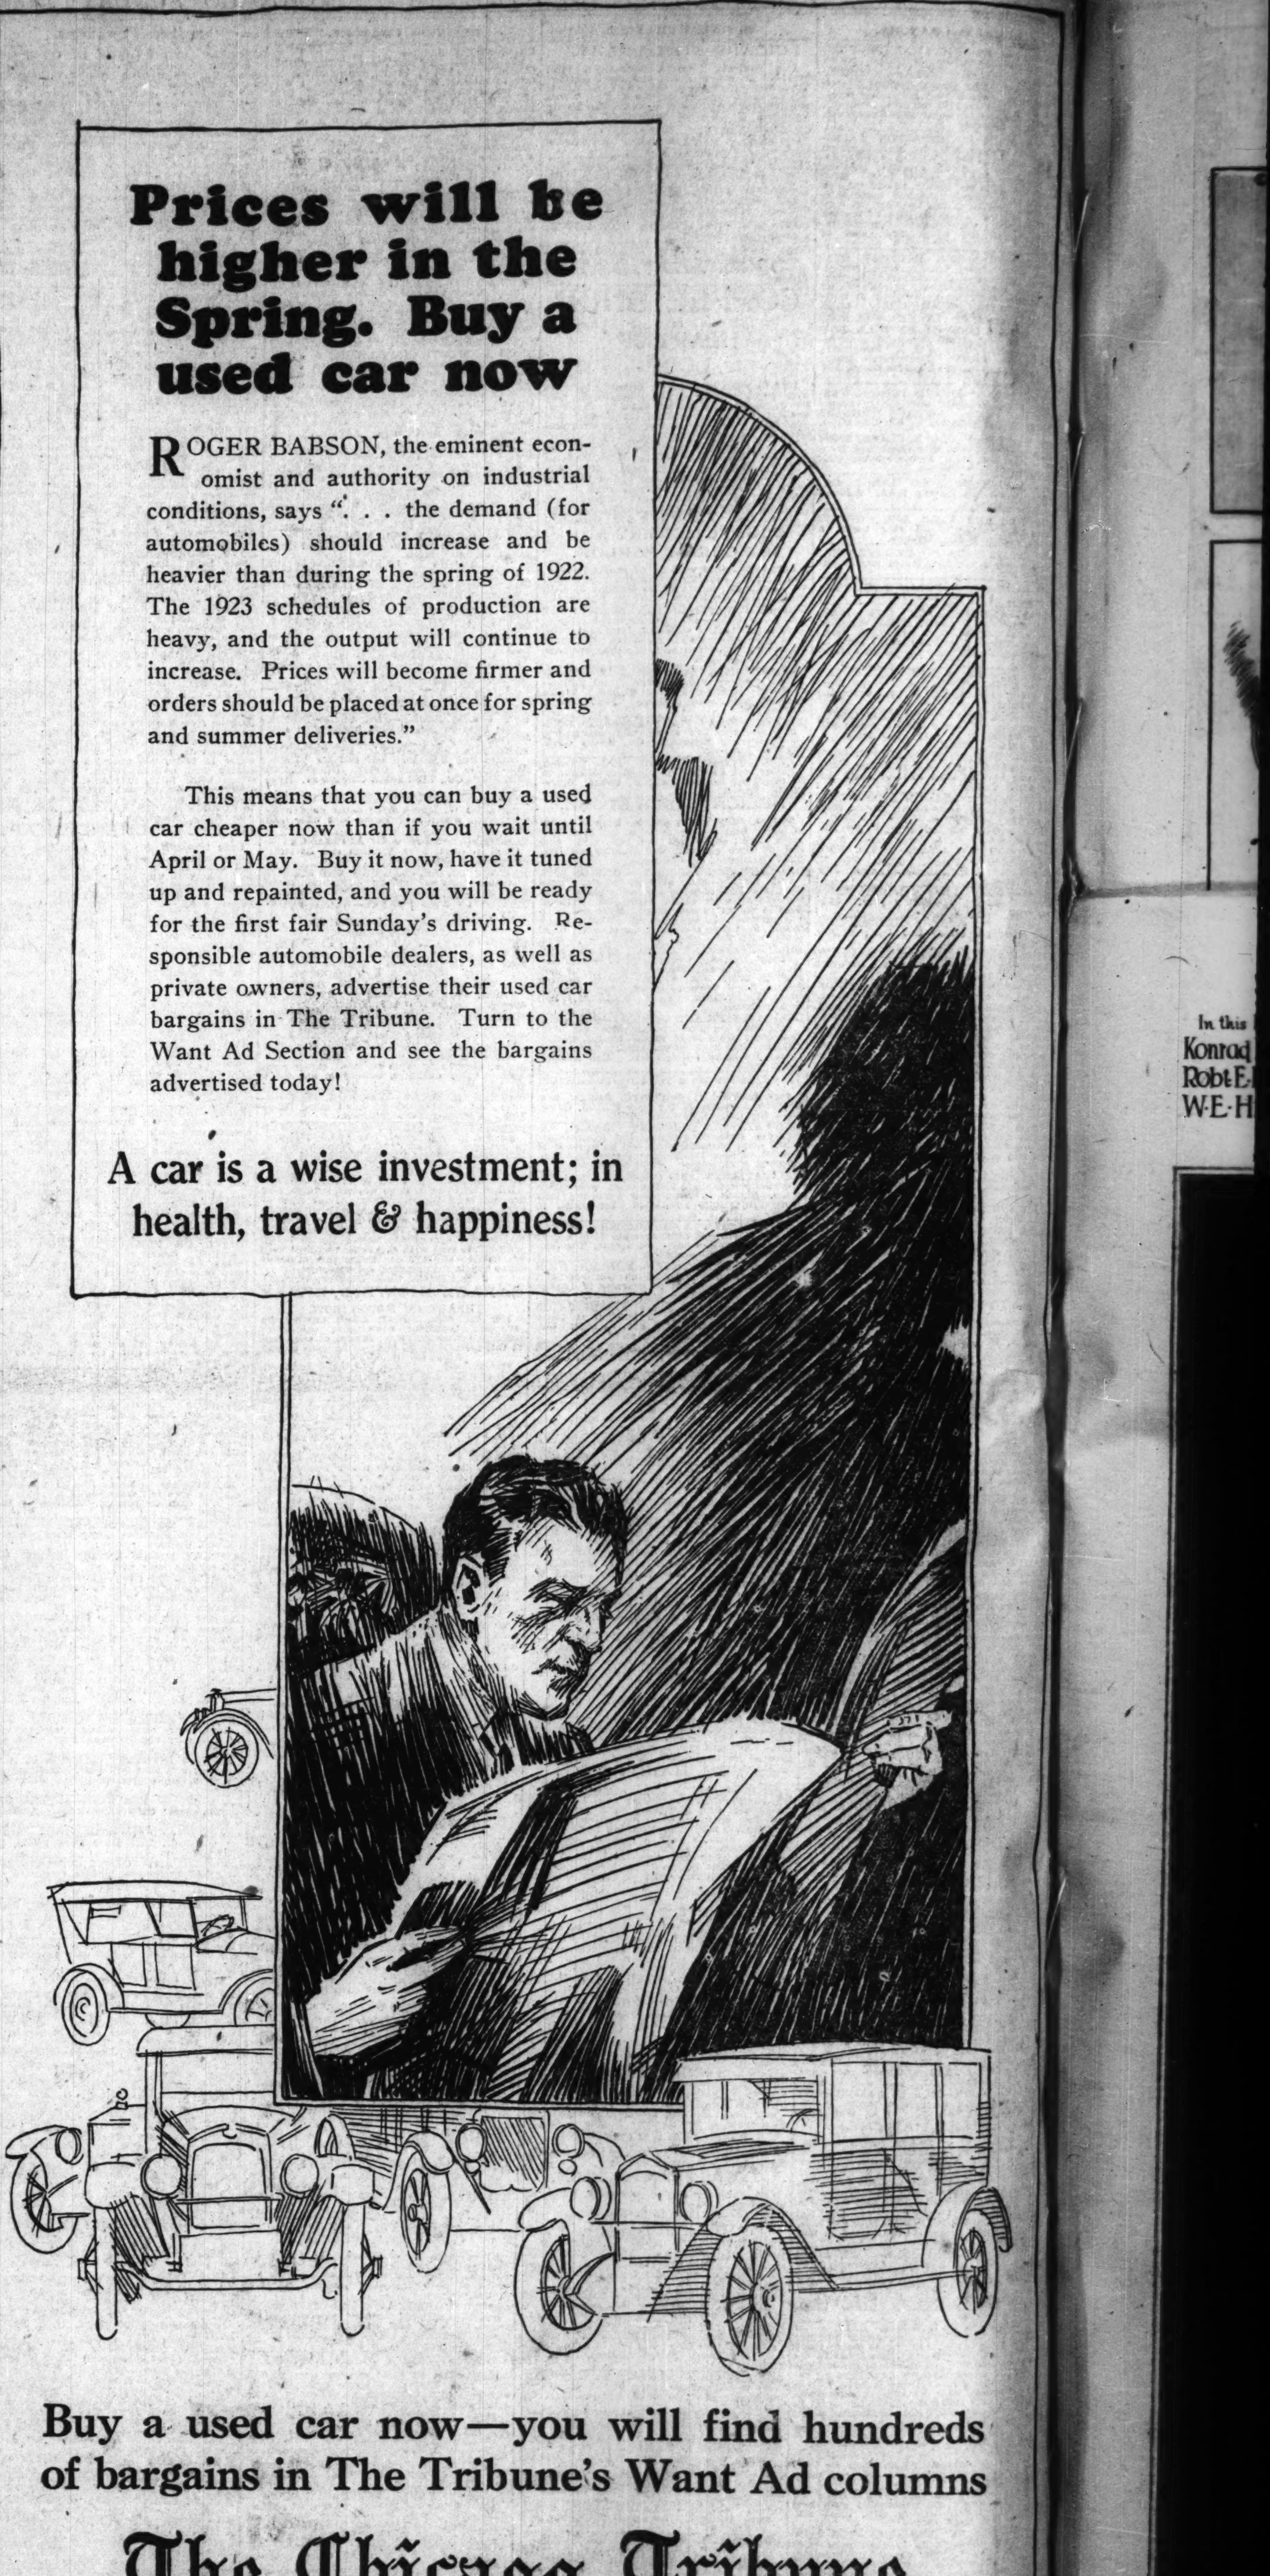
The more you tell—the quicker you sell

THE SECRET OF WANT AD SUCCESS



Prices will be higher in the Spring. Buy a used car now

ROGER BABSON, the eminent economist and authority on industrial conditions, says ". . . the demand (for automobiles) should increase and be heavier than during the spring of 1922. The 1923 schedules of production are heavy, and the output will continue to increase. Prices will become firmer and orders should be placed at once for spring and summer deliveries."

This means that you can buy a used car cheaper now than if you wait until April or May. Buy it now, have it tuned up and repainted, and you will be ready for the first fair Sunday's driving. Responsible automobile dealers, as well as private owners, advertise their used car bargains in The Tribune. Turn to the Want Ad Section and see the bargains advertised today!

A car is a wise investment; in health, travel & happiness!

Buy a used car now—you will find hundreds of bargains in The Tribune's Want Ad columns

There is room for you in California—room for you to grow and prosper, with greater opportunities for success and enjoyment.

Californians earn more, save more, and live better. The per capita income in California is one and one-half times as great as the average throughout the United States, and half the people in California have savings accounts, as compared with the national average of one in ten. California's abundance offers greater prosperity to those who can succeed elsewhere, and there is room in California for thirty million people, of whom you may be one.

The Call of the Land

This year, 7,000 new, twenty-acre farms will be ready for families in California, where motor cars, telephones and superb highways link city and country. A million acres of irrigated lands are ready for settlers, and California acres produce twice the average crop values of farms throughout the United States. The call is for fifty thousand men with reasonable capital and a hunger for the soil.

A Better Place to Live

On farms and in cities, children grow larger than the national average, and play out of doors twelve months in the year. Living is often cheaper, and always more enjoyable, schools are bigger, teachers are better paid, homes are more homelike—flower-wreathed all year—and working conditions are better on farms and in cities because the same effort produces more returns. Abundant hydro-electric power serves home, farm and factory alike, and will never wear out. Between 1910 and 1920, the output of California's factories increased more than 243%.

California's Invitation

California invites you now—today—to come and share our life and our prosperity. Your shoulders, your spirit, are needed. If your heart is hungry for better life, and your substance is sufficient, you should come to this land of unspoiled opportunity.

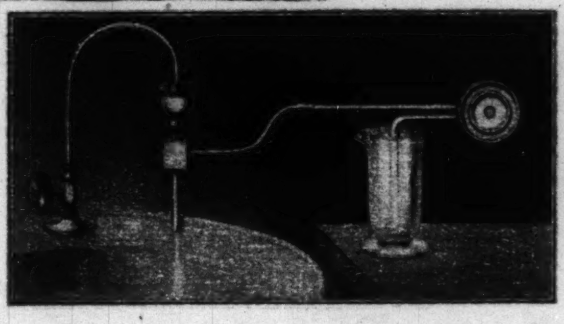
Only six tiny glands can fight this unseen enemy

"This new instrument is teaching us the enormous importance of the six tiny glands of the mouth"

All day, all night, acids are forming in your mouth—endangering the precious unreplaceable enamel of your teeth.

A newly devised instrument shows how the healing fluids from the tiny glands protect the teeth against these deadly acids.



The newly devised instrument—the sialometer

Six tiny glands! Yet it is their steady stream of fluids that protects your teeth against decay.

The importance of these glands has only recently been made known. Today for the first time science has devised a means of watching them at work.

A new instrument, called the sialometer, shows for the first time what goes on in your mouth. With it, the physician can watch with his own eyes the secretions from the glands in the mouth as they flow drop by drop from the tiny silver tube shown above.

Without the healing, germ-free fluids which these glands produce, we could not protect our teeth from sure decay. For deadly acids are constantly forming in the mouth and these acids attack the delicate enamel of your teeth, forming cavities.

Brushing the teeth, while absolutely essential to mouth cleanliness, will not keep the acids from forming. In spite of careful brushing minute food particles remain between the teeth and in the warmth of the mouth ferment just as milk turns sour when left in a warm, moist place.

Even if you brush your teeth after every meal, enough food remains to feed myriads of acid-forming bacteria.

To protect your teeth against these acids, Nature meant the salivary glands automatically to flush the mouth and teeth every moment in the day and night. But the modern way of living makes it impossible for our glands to work normally. The soft foods, quickly swallowed, that we eat today give them neither exercise nor stimulation.

Today these glands must be kept healthy and active

Today the salivary glands of modern men and women need gentle stimulation. This is why thoughtful, intelligent people are using Pebeco Tooth Paste regularly to correct an acid mouth—to keep the six tiny glands active.

Pebeco is a dentifrice prepared especially to assist the natural processes causing these glands to work. It does for us what long-continued chewing of hard food did for our primitive ancestors.

Pebeco is neither acid nor alkaline. By its mere presence in the mouth it causes the salivary glands to flow for a long period of time. It never exhausts them as do strong acids—it never checks their natural action as do soapy alkaline substances.

Take home a tube of Pebeco tonight and note its invigorating and refreshing taste. It will keep the glands of your mouth active and your teeth sound and beautiful. 50c at all druggists. Manufactured only by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

This simple test will show you

Send us 10 cents today for the material for testing whether your own salivary glands are active enough to protect you against these deadly acids. We will include a junior size tube of Pebeco and our booklet, "How the Glands Protect the Teeth." Lehn & Fink, Inc., Dept. Z-3, 635 Greenwich St., New York.

A beautiful new Roofing Color revealed by a Blast in the Georgia Hills

WHOLLY new color possibilities for your roof are now available. A blast in the Georgia hills has revealed a hitherto unknown color in slate, and an entirely new slate-surfaced shingle is the result.

This new color, weathered brown, is found only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia. It is as beautiful as the russet of November fields, and with use it mellows to a shade like the thatch of an English cottage.

No stained wood shingles can rival this rare color. You can easily see why when you remember that nature has created it as she does her jewels—by pressing it for ages under mountains of earth and rock.

Weathered brown brings new beauty to the modern home, architects say, especially when it is blended with other Richardson shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl.

A super-shingle

THIS new weathered brown is used only on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—a unique roofing product which you should know all about, no matter what color you select.

For this shingle offers a new degree of serviceability in a roof, just as the weathered brown offers new beauty.

First, because it is 37% larger than the ordinary shingle, fewer are needed to cover a given roofing area. Thus the cost of laying is 35% less.

Second, it is 50% thicker than the ordinary shingle and therefore lasts much longer. Incidentally this greater thickness casts a deeper shadow line that gives life and interest to the roof

Third, because it is 100% stiffer than the ordinary shingle, it remains rigid under all kinds of weather and makes the whole roof twice as firm.

RICHARDSON Product

The Super-Giant Shingle—50% thicker, 100% more rigid, and 35% more economical in cost of laying

Its inner secrets

BUT, of course, the true measure of roofing service goes beyond the color or size of the shingle to the materials in it. As you know, slate-surfaced shingles are built on a base or core of felt impregnated with asphalt and surfaced under pressure with slate granules.

Exceptional quality in these three materials makes the Richardson Super-Giant the finest slate-surfaced shingle produced.

Take, for instance, the felt upon which depends the very life of your roof. Richardson felt, so architects or roofing dealers will tell you, has for fifty years been recognized and used as the best. The asphalt is refined exclusively by the Richardson process from the highest grade raw materials. And the flakes of slate surfacing, found only in the Richardson quarries, seal the shingle permanently against weather and fire hazards.

Prove the facts yourself

A SUPER-SHINGLE indeed, when you weigh its points one by one! First—absolutely exclusive color effects. Second—unusual dimensions which give you added roofing protection at 1/3 less in cost of laying. And, finally—exceptionally high-test standards in its three materials: felt, asphalt, and slate-surfacing.

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, or to your contractor, and ask to see the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown. Feel it, weigh it, measure it, note the rare color. Then compare it with ordinary shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our beautiful new color chart showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing, and containing valuable roofing facts. Perhaps, too, our booklet, "Roofing on the Farm," can help. Just use the coupon below.

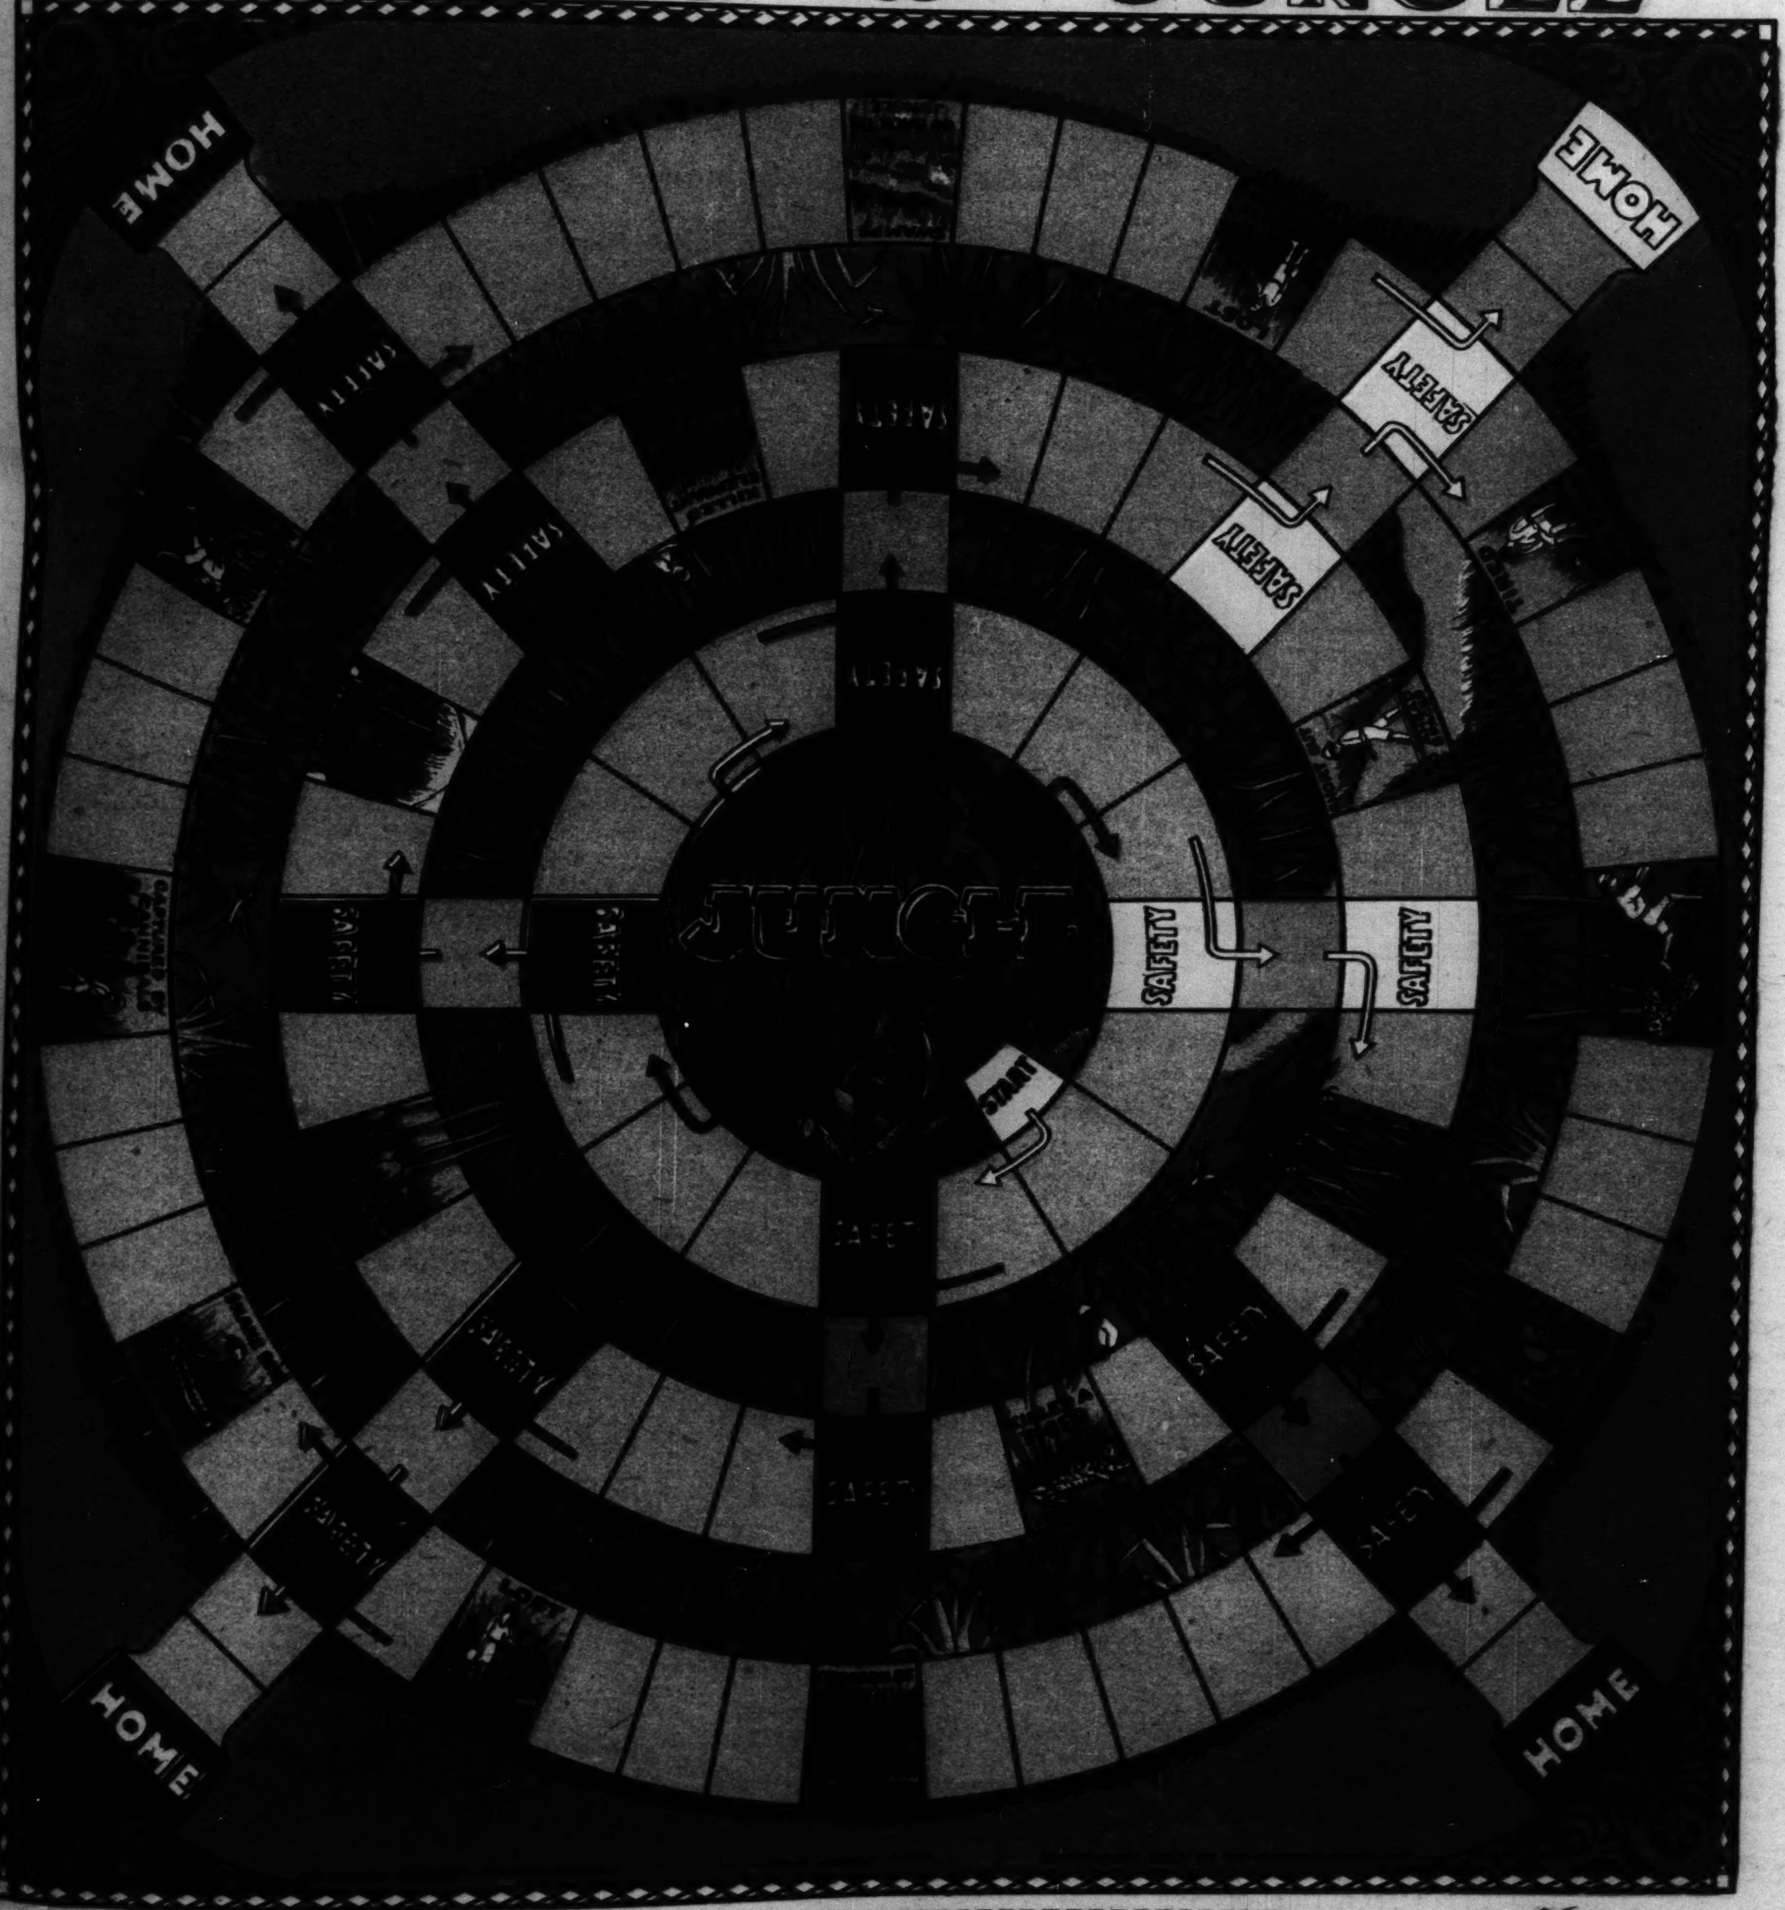
FIRESIDE GAMES

No. 4

THE GAME OF JUNGLE



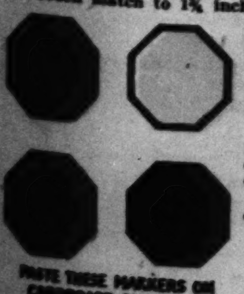
INSTRUCTIONS:

Cut out entire game. It may be fastened in many ways. You may place it on the table, floor, or pin it on the tablecloth. Or, better still, paste it on a piece of heavy cardboard.

Cut out spinner and paste it on a piece of heavy cardboard, then cut cardboard to shape of spinner. Trim a wooden match to 1¾ inch length and sharpen one end. Pierce hole through center of spinner with a pin. Insert match in pinhole and push it halfway through cardboard, making a top with which to spin numbers. (See illustration.)

Paste the four markers on heavy cardboard and cut out each separately, trimming closely.

Cut out rules and paste on cardboard to preserve them.



PASTE THESE MARKERS ON CARDBOARD AND CUT OUT SEPARATELY

RULES:

The Game of Jungle may be played by 1, 2, 3, or 4 players.

Each player selects one of the four markers and places it in center of board on spot of same color marked "Start." (Red man starts from red "Start," blue man from blue "Start," etc.) The object is to escape from the "Jungle" and reach "Home."

Each player spins the spinner once before starting. Player spinning highest number starts first, etc.

Players take turns in spinning. Men are advanced number of spaces shown by place on which spinner falls. Men must be moved around trail in direction of arrows of corresponding color. Player must pass from inner to outer trail through gate of his color as indicated by arrows.

Any player may be sent back to "Jungle" by another player arriving at the same space by exact spin, except from spaces marked "Safety."

Any player may pass another player if number spun carries him beyond.

Advantages and setbacks are indicated plainly on board. Spinner arriving at any such space by exact spin gets the penalty, or advantage, as shown on the space.

"Home" must be reached by exact spin. First player arriving at "Home" wins the game.

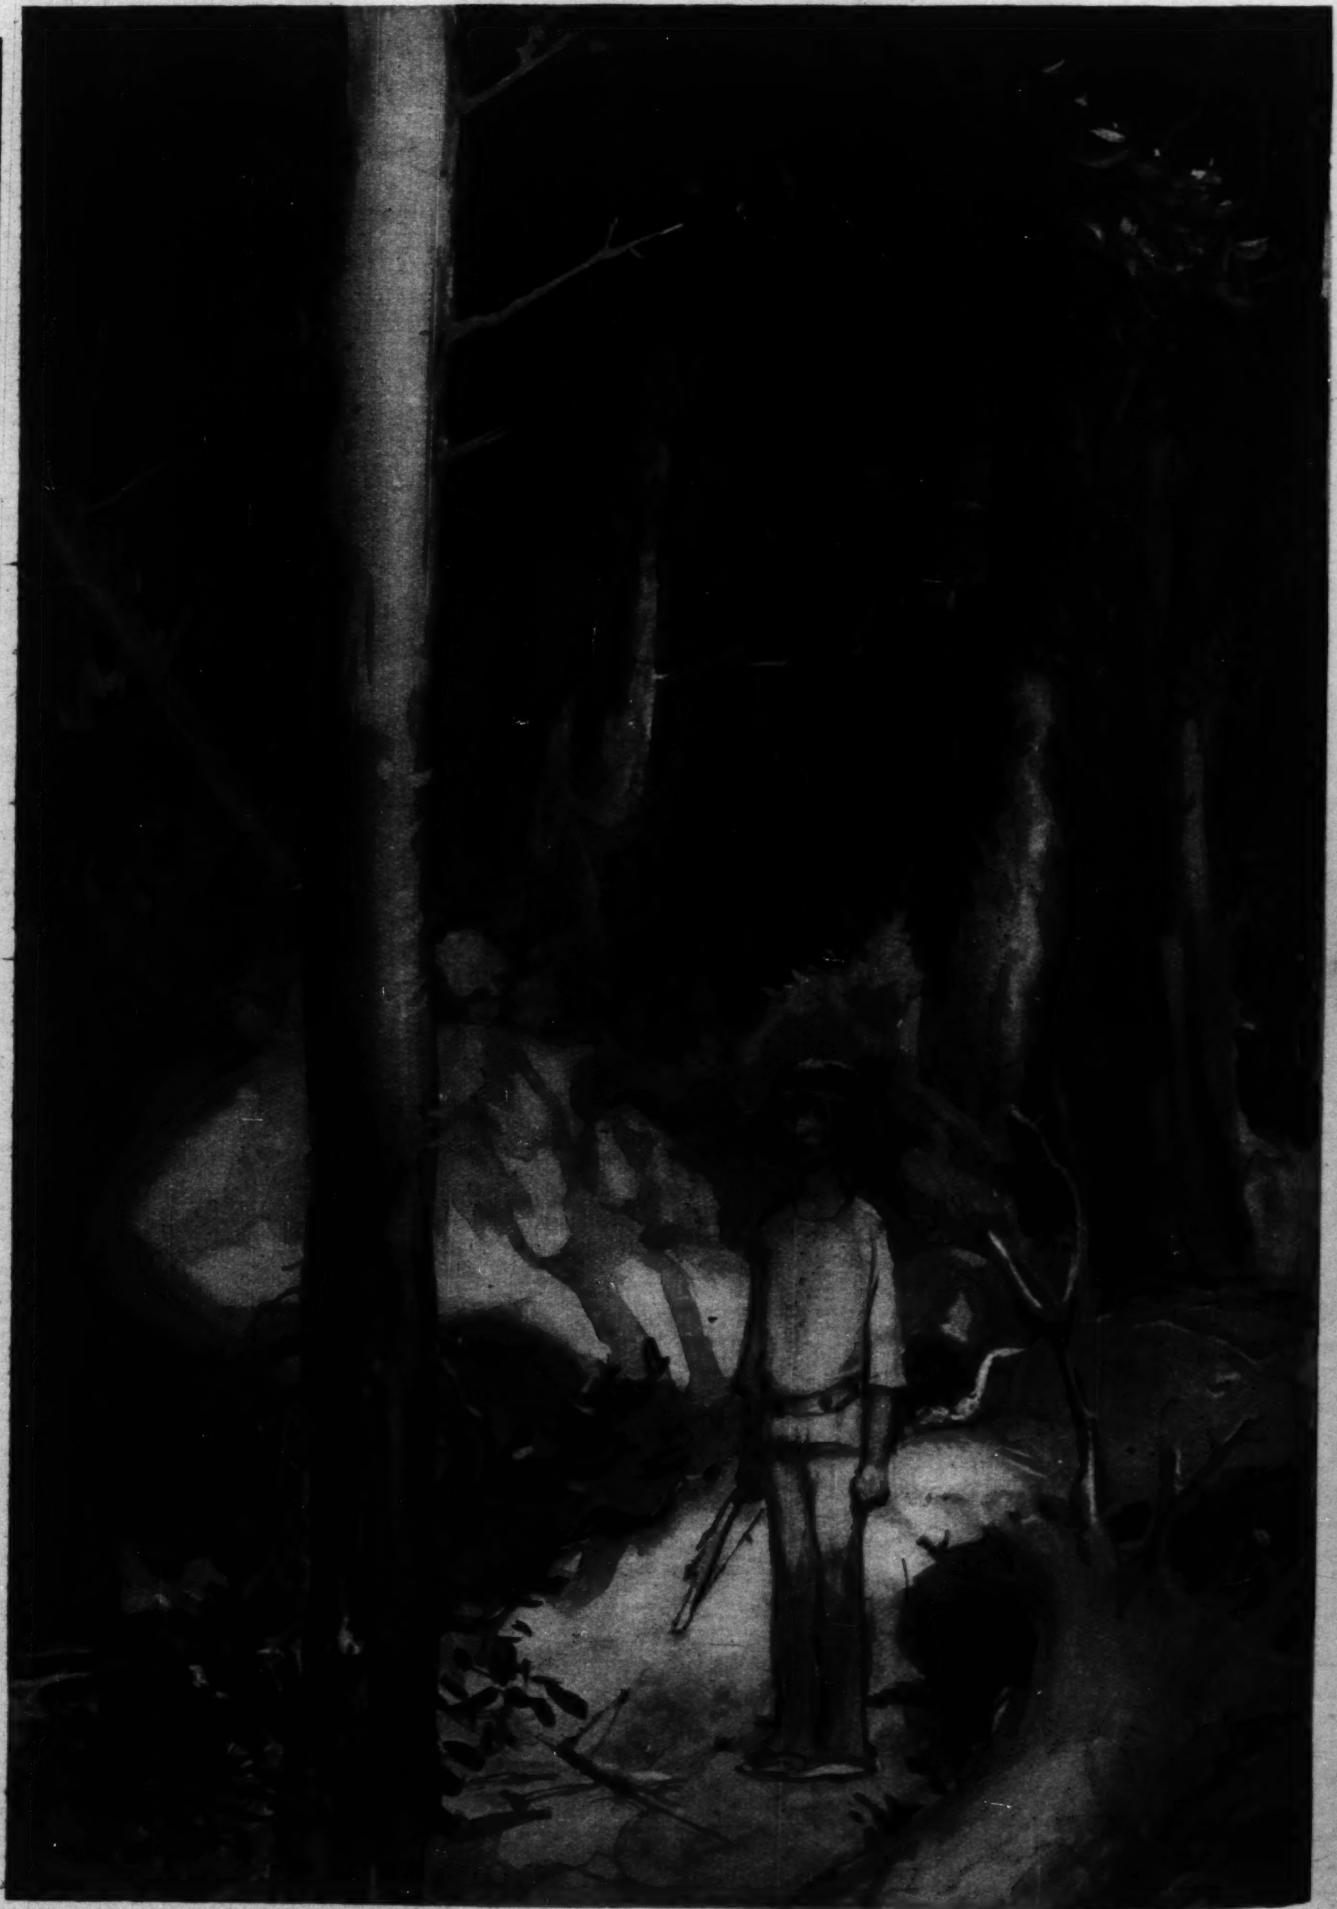
INDIAN BLOOD? BY Robert E. Pinkerton

Blue Ribbon Fiction

WHITE man or Indian? Wen-dah-ban's boyish soul told him he was a white man. All his instincts were those of the white man. But Nee-tah-wee-gan, the cruel Ojibwa woman, taunted him that he was her son. and an Indian. Still the boy fought through stirring adventures in the great north country to win himself a place among the whites. He found love, too, but love barred to him by the inseperable barriers of race.

Here is a thrilling story of the great Hudson Bay country by a man who knows his territory. Robert E. Pinkerton has missed little of the excitement that goes with the north country. Trapper, lumber-jack, guide for moose hunters, fisherman, reporter, editor, author--all these and a score of other occupations have crowded his life. Builder of log cabins, too—he has six scattered through the wild north regions. When he married he took his wife into the wilderness with him, determined that there he would find the material for the fiction which he decided must be his life work. There their baby girl learned the Ojibwa tongue before she learned English.

Mr. Pinkerton is the author of one book, "The Canoe," and he and his wife, Katherine Gedney Pinkerton, are co-authors of two others, "Penitentiary Post" and "The Long Traverse." They also have collaborated on scores of short stories, mostly dealing with the Hudson Bay country. "Indian Blood?" is by all odds his best product so far, Mr. Pinkerton believes.



He became at last a starved and lonely figure.

FIRST INSTALLMENT.

Wen-dah-ban's Dream.

A BLACK bear came out of the brush immediately behind the drying racks, attracted by the odor of curing fish. Once in the open she halted defensively, not because she had seen the man and woman near the falls but because of a gurgling sound close at hand, a sound beneath the roar of the water; and because something small and chubby and dimpled was waving within six feet of her nose.

A baby, laced securely in his dick-e-nag-an, or back cradle, had been set upright against a boulder. As the bear wrinkled her black nose and peered at this strange living thing with her small, beady eyes the infant waved both hands ecstatically.

The man and the woman, who had seen the bear when it emerged from the brush, did not move. Only their eyes proclaimed animation, and those of both were bright with interest and delight. Even when the bear took a slow, stealthy step forward, wrinkling her nose curiously, they remained motionless. But the man's lips parted and he hissed the word:

"Wee-sah-nah!"

The woman nodded almost imperceptibly and with suppressed excitement as the bear took another slow step forward, peering into the face of the gurgling child. Suddenly the great head swung swiftly around, the beady eyes stared at the man and woman for a moment, and then, with a grunt, the huge animal turned and shambled back into the brush.

Instantly the man and the woman were confronting each other, each radiant with joy.

"Muk-wah!" the woman cried. "A bear!"

"Wah-bee-muk-wah!" the man shouted excitedly. "A white bear!"

"Kah-win!" she shrieked, uttering the negative with a force and vehemence unattainable with the one syllable English word.

They had spoken in Ojibwa because it was the only language the man knew. His first word, wee-sah-nah, is not translatable unless it be construed as "personal totem." It denotes some animal which visits all Ojibwa children in their infancy, apparently coming to the camp to see the child.

Throughout his life an Ojibwa treasures the name of this animal, though he cannot tell clearly why he does so. The mother watches for its approach and it is never molested, even though the family is starving and the animal is wanted for food.

No animal had ever visited Wen-dah-ban, the boy in the dick-e-nag-an, and both the man and the woman were overjoyed when they saw the bear watching him. The curiosity of the animal was indicative to them of a profound interest in this particular child and there had been no fear that he would be harmed. Yet when the woman displayed anger at his statement that the bear was white the man was amazed by the vehemence of her denial.

"She was white," he protested. "She was very old and the hair on her face was turning gray."

"Kah-win!" she shrieked.

Her anger had startled him, but now he looked at her with a slow grin of understanding.

"So the father of Wen-dah-ban was white," he said. "I have always thought so. The boy looks it, but you have never told me."

"I never told you and I never will," she interrupted fiercely.

"I am not asking and I do not care. The child was born when I took you for my woman. I am not blaming you. Only now I see why you hate everything white, even a white bear."

"The bear was not white!" she cried.

"Very well," the man retorted good naturedly. "Wen-dah-ban's wee-sah-nah shall be muk-wah as you wish. It means he will grow to be strong and a good hunter."

He started back to his fishing, but the woman was still angry.

"And I will call him my son as you have wished."

She relented, but there was still a certain fierceness in her tone when she declared:

"Wen-dah-ban will always be a hunter. He will always be an Indian."

"How you hate the white man," he laughed, his own easy going nature unable to comprehend such a passion. "Wouldn't he take you for his woman? Did you expect to live in the fort and have others cook for you?"

"I would not live with the 'big trader' himself!" she answered viciously.

But when evening came and the drying racks were groaning with white fish the woman's anger had disappeared. She spoke of the infant's wee-sah-nah, and when the man again jested about its white father she remained silent.

"Who could it have been?" he mused, pretending great concern. "The 'big trader' was not at Fort James. John Corrigal had just taken a white woman and would not look at a red one, and the new manager, MacKar, he had not come. And yet you did not wish me to trade at Fort James but to go to Kenogami."

"You will never know," the woman said. "It was my own affair. But you will call him your son?" and she turned to him anxiously. "You will train him to be a great hunter?"

"I will call him my son and make a good hunter of him," the man replied. "And I will watch his wigwam when it is time for him to fast, when he will learn 'the thing you dream about.'"

SEVERAL times that winter Pe-tah-bo, the man, jested about the boy's father and always did Nee-tah-wee-gan, his wife, display anger as upon the visit of the bear. Yet it was a matter of no concern to him. She was proving a good mate and he possessed only an idle curiosity as to who the white man might be.

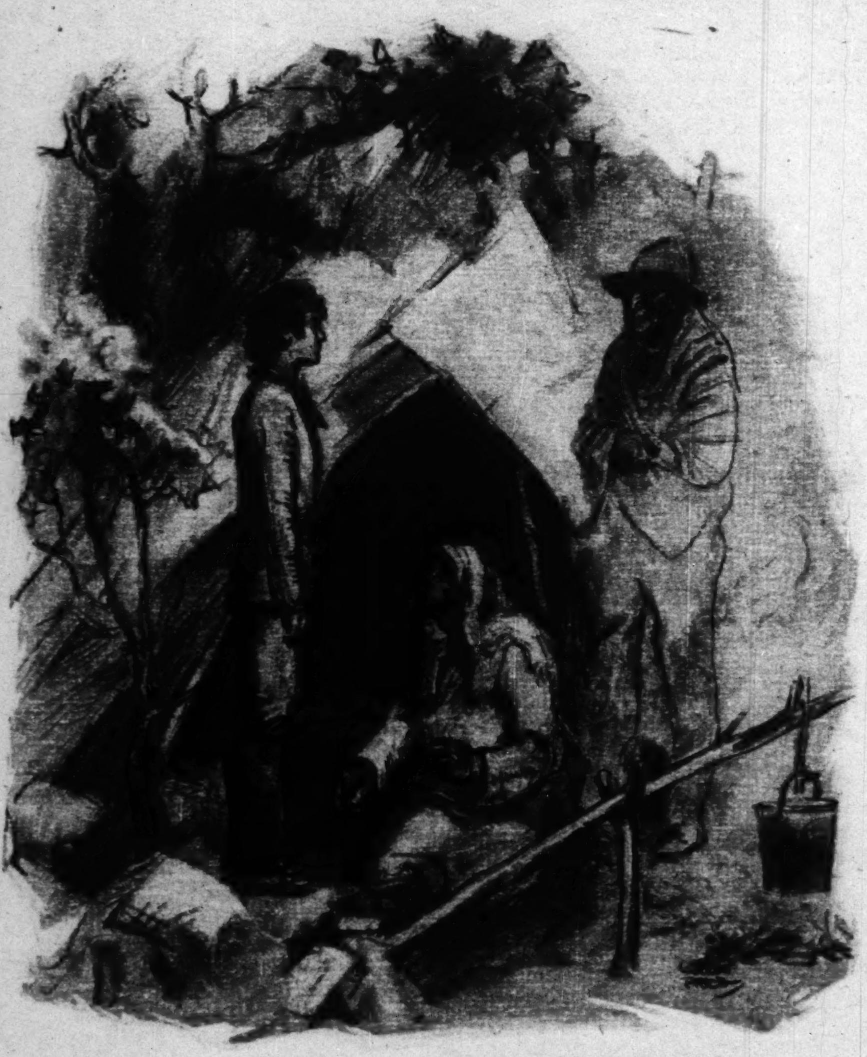
But when spring came and they were ready for the long journey to the fort with the winter's harvest of fur, he was amazed by the woman's refusal to accompany him. It is the big event of the Indian's year, this journey to the trading post with its purchase of goods, the gathering of the band, the gossiping with friends and relatives, the long, sunny, lazy days in the great clearing.

Yet Nee-tah-wee-gan not only refused to go but she refused to give a reason. At last Pe-tah-bo loaded his canoe and departed, wondering and also a little angry because he had to do all the paddling and portaging and cook his own meals.

He returned in the early fall, his canoe filled with supplies for the winter, his head with news of the trading and gathering of the band, and of the long journey he had made as one of the crew of the fur brigade.

Year after year this continued. Each spring Nee-tah-wee-gan refused to go to the fort. Pe-tah-bo understood it was her hatred of a white man, which had become a hatred of all things white, that kept her away. Sometimes he poked fun at her. Always he marveled that this hatred had endured. It was incomprehensible to his easy going nature.

Meanwhile Wen-dah-ban had graduated from his dick-e-nag-an to a small bow and arrows, to a tiny paddle wielded in the bow of the canoe, to a lively interest in all the marvelous and attractive things about his home. No brothers and sisters came to keep him company. Only on rare occasions did he ever see other Indians or their children. He never knew the glorious, romping summer days at the fort when scores of wild youngsters played through the long days.



"I believe you dreamed the truth," Pe-tah-bo said in an awed voice.

Buried in the depths of the wilderness, cut off even from his own small world, sensing from the beginning a coldness in his mother's attitude, he became at last a starved and lonely figure. He had been happy when still a romping boy, but as his world remained unchanging, as his growing mind began to reach out for other things than the isolated camp afforded, a cloud passed beneath the sun of childhood.

His eyes lost the brightness of anticipation, for no new delights unfolded before them. His spirit grew heavy, for there were no fresh joys to inflate it. His life became a barren, empty thing, for he experienced none of the entrancing diversions of normal development.

Another burden came to weigh upon him. There is no seclusion either for the body or the spirit in an Ojibwa home. Thoughts are ever on the surface, often formed in the expression. Pe-tah-bo, always mystified by Nee-tah-wee-gan's enduring hatred of all things white, never tired of jesting her. It was inevitable that Wen-dah-ban should learn not only that his father was white but that these white people, none of whom he had ever seen, were an amazing race.

Pe-tah-bo had the Ojibwa's scorn for the white man, but his innate kindliness and good nature had softened it. He not only marveled at some of the things white men were able to do but he found much amusement in boasting of white accomplishments because it aroused Nee-tah-wee-gan's anger.

Wen-dah-ban, unconscious of this object, believed all he heard. He sensed something unfair in his mother's long tirades against white people, though he learned in time that she herself was half white. Pe-tah-bo's entrancing tales of his travels seemed more true.

Wen-dah-ban learned, too, that the families of other hunters always made the long journey to the fort, that all gathered in the huge clearing strewn with wigwams, that many children played games through the long, careless days. Yet there was no feeling of ostracism on Wen-dah-ban's part. He listened through countless hours of idle gossip, but never gained the impression that mixed blood was tainted blood, for neither Pe-tah-bo nor Nee-tah-wee-gan held such views. He learned from what they said that he himself must be three-quarters white, far more than half, and childlike he wondered why he should not be considered of this superior race instead of the other.

Moreover, Pe-tah-bo had often pointed out that his black hair was not coarse like the Indian's, that his skin was fairer, his lips thinner, his cheek bones lower, his eyes not nearly so dark. Pe-tah-bo took great pleasure in this because it always aroused Nee-tah-wee-gan to a fury.

IT was thus that the boy, crushed and torn and cramped and starved by the unnatural conditions of his life and by the contending forces within his family, had his mind turned from the natural contentment of the savage with his lot. The fact that Nee-tah-wee-gan kept him from all contact with white people made them the more fascinating, and each year, though her tirades against the whites gained in venom, they lost in effectiveness.

One day Wen-dah-ban suggested that he was more white than Indian, but even Pe-tah-bo's laughter was stilled by the fury of Nee-tah-wee-gan's outburst. Ten years of isolation and hatred had made a fearsome thing of the woman. She had grown bitter and morose and subject to violent rages. Sometimes these outbursts frightened the boy and he retired to the forest for several days at a time.

When he was thirteen he decided he must see these white people of whom he had heard so much. He knew better than to broach the subject to Nee-tah-wee-gan, but when Pe-tah-bo was ready for his annual journey Wen-dah-ban slipped away into the brush. An hour later he waved to Pe-tah-bo from a point down the lake and the Indian, chuckling over the joke he was playing on his wife, took the boy with him.

It was a journey around the world for a city youngster who had never been farther from his home than the city park. The four hundred men, women, and children gathered at the fort frightened him at first. He was as shy as any animal of the forest, though his compelling curiosity and longing soon drove him forth.

But he did not play with the other youngsters or listen to the men as they smoked and told stories of the winter's hunt or of their journeys to the great headquarters post with the fur brigade. The fort attracted and held him—the high structure of logs, their whitewashed sides glistening in the sunshine, the constant bustle and activity, the trade shop crammed with marvelous goods, and, most of all, the three white people.

Merton Layard was manager of the Hudson's Bay post at Kenogami. He had been there for several years with his wife, Evelyn and their six year old daughter, Janet. Layard fascinated Wen-dah-ban. He went about confidently with his head high. His words were sharp and quick, and when he spoke men sprang to do as he told them. All the Indians appeared to be anxious to please him. Yet he was kind and good humored. Sometimes he stopped and told a story to a group of hunters and all laughed uproariously.

In those astounding days Wen-dah-ban first encountered the color line, first recognized his mother was not alone in distinguishing between the races. Janet Layard played within the picket fence that surrounded the dwelling house. Squaws hung about, marveling at the child's golden hair and coaxing her near enough so that they might feel of it. Youngsters pressed their faces close between the pickets and stared, but never did a hunter or his wife or children invade the place sacred to this smiling, happy, well dressed girl of the marvelous hair and white and pink skin.

Wen-dah-ban spent long hours staring through the picket fence at Janet and her parents. From the time of his arrival he had been set apart as much by his history as by his own actions. He was known to every Indian at the fort as Nee-tah-wee-gan's child, the one she had kept hidden in the bush since infancy. For years he had been the subject of much wigwam gossip, and now that he had come to the fort at last he was the prey of all curiosity and love of torture so characteristic of the Ojibwa.

A group of women would pull him away from the fence, feel of the black hair that lacked the native coarseness, peer into the eyes which were so much lighter than their own, search his face in vain for some Indian characteristic, even wrench open his shirt and look at the white skin beneath.

They would discuss him as freely as if he were a sleigh dog and always the subject of his parentage was uppermost. Gleefully they would pretend to find a resemblance to any one of several white men, and they would stage a mock debate in which the names of the "big trader," of John Corrigal and of Nicol MacKar were frequently heard.

Wen-dah-ban learned to avoid the women. Although he was gratified immeasurably by their declarations that his father was white and that he himself looked white, he sensed the ridicule and shrank from it even as it mystified him. He could not understand why he should not be proud of his white blood. Layard was all white and he ruled like a king.

One day he stood at the fence watching Janet Layard. She seemed oblivious of his presence for a time and then she suddenly approached him.

"You are the boy whose mother would not let him come to the fort," she said in Ojibwa.

He nodded.

"And you have always lived in the bush and have never seen white people."

Again he gave dumb acknowledgment.

"They say your father was white and your mother half white, but that makes no difference. You are an Indian just the same."

Anger such as he had never known seized Wen-dah-ban.

"Kah-win!" he exclaimed fiercely. "I am not an Indian. I am white. Some day I will show you."

She drew back, startled by the vehemence of his outburst and a little frightened by the blazing wrath of this wild creature that stared through the picket fence, and then she turned and ran to the house.

IN the spring following Wen-dah-ban's journey to Fort Kenogami, Pe-tah-bo informed him that it was time to go into the forest, build a small wigwam, and remain there, fasting and alone, until he had dreamed. The boy responded eagerly. Not only had he absorbed the Ojibwa viewpoint but he had looked forward to this event as a portent of emancipation.

A baby in his dick-e-nagan sat upright against a boulder.

Although it really marked the beginning of adolescence he considered it the dawn of manhood. He was large and strong. He could follow Pe-tah-bo all day on snowshoes, carry a fair burden on the portages, handle a canoe with utmost skill, could hunt fur and food, and it was thus that he entered upon his fast with something more than the Ojibwa boy's superstitious faith in its significance.

The suppressed longings of a starved childhood, the vague desires that had assumed distinct form at Fort Kenogami, and a growing ambition to abandon the ways of the people with whom he had always lived and to become a white man, all these were associated in his mind with this auspicious period in the Indian's life.

Day after day he lay alone in his little birch bark wigwam. Sometimes Pe-tah-bo came and sat at a little distance to watch. Usually he brought a small piece of meat.

"But do not go near it or see that it is here until after the sun has set," he would say. "You may eat it when the sun does not watch you."

For a week Wen-dah-ban remained in the wigwam. At first his nights were peaceful and dreamless. Only during the day did visions come, and he built frothy, exotic castles that floated entrancingly in the soft spring air, castles of whitewashed logs inhabited by white people, castles in which he himself lived. Later when he became weak from hunger and his usually active body rebelled at the slothful existence vague impressions flitted through his mind at night, although none remained with sufficient distinctness for him to gather them in the morning.

Wen-dah-ban strove desperately to remember these visions, for to the Ojibwa the fasting at the beginning of adolescence is of much significance. In this period the youth dreams of something that becomes a charm throughout his life. Invariably it is of a thing with which he is familiar, as some forest creature, and afterwards he kills one of these animals, dries the skin, and carries it as a charm in his pind-gee-go-san, or medicine bag. It is called "the thing you dream about."

The seventh night the boy was rewarded. A dream came that was so vivid and so real he wakened before it ended. His imagination busy reconstructing it, adding and retouching and reshaping until it fitted more closely with his desires, he lay there until dawn and then arose and went back to camp.

Wen-dah-ban's return was an event in the bare, dreary lives of Nee-tah-wee-gan and Pe-tah-bo. They saw him coming along the shore that morning and waited, motionless and expectant.

When he stopped before them his eyes were bright and his face was radiant. He glanced once at good natured Pe-tah-bo, but it was to his mother, crouching beside the fire, that he turned resolutely.

"I dreamed," he said.

Nee-tah-wee-gan caught a certain defiance in his tone, but her eyes were inscrutable as she arose and faced him.

"I dreamed," Wen-dah-ban continued slowly, "that I am white."

Nee-tah-wee-gan's body stiffened and then swayed backward. Her eyes were wide and staring.

"I dreamed that my father was white and that I will become a white man," the boy rushed on.

He was excited now and the fasting brilliance of his eyes was fanned to fresh brilliance.

"I dreamed that I am not to be an Indian, but that I will become the manager of a fort for the great company and will live in the big house of the white men and have servants to paddle my canoe."

Nee-tah-wee-gan had retreated a step as the eager words rolled from his lips, but when he stopped, breathless and jubilant, she sprang forward. The fear that had gripped her was gone. The venom that had seethed within her for so many years was suddenly unleashed. Incoherrent at first, her rage crowding the shrill syllables into unrecognizable masses of sound, she stood and screamed at him.

"You are not white!" she shouted at last. "You are an Indian and you always will be. A dream does not make you a white man and never can. With an Indian mother you will never be anything except an Indian."

"But I have not told you all that I dreamed!" Wen-dah-ban exclaimed. "I dreamed that you are not my mother, but that my mother was like the woman of the manager at Fort Kenogami."

Nee-tah-wee-gan staggered backward, holding out her hands as if warding off some unseen evil, and her eyes, glazed with fear, never turned from the eager face of the boy.

"I dreamed that my father and mother lived in a fort with many Indian servants, that my father was one of the big men of the company," Wen-dah-ban continued.

"You dreamed that?" Nee-tah-wee-gan whispered hoarsely.

The boy nodded.

"And then, after that, you dreamed——"

"There was much thunder and lightning and everything was red as if——"

A scream from Nee-tah-wee-gan stopped the words. She sank to the ground and cowered before the boy. Pe-tah-bo, simple, kindly, superstitious as all his people, was dumbfounded by this action of the woman who had domineered his camp so long, whose strong, hard, compelling spirit had shaped the course of his and Wen-dah-ban's lives.

When Nee-tah-wee-gan remained there, moaning and rocking back and forth, the man and the boy glanced at each other in bewilderment.

"I believe you dreamed the truth," Pe-tah-bo said in an awed voice.

"Kah-win!" Nee-tah-wee-gan screamed as she sprang to her feet. "The whole dream was a lie. He did not have a white mother. I am his mother. He is an Indian. He always will be."

"But he dreamed this, the seventh night after he had begun to fast," Pe-tah-bo protested.

He and his people had accepted the portent of the fasting dream for countless centuries and never before had he heard such heresy.

But Nee-tah-wee-gan had regained her self-control. She squatted beside the fire and resumed her cooking.

"And what shall he put in his pind-gee-go-san?" she asked scornfully. "Should he kill a white man and dry his skin and carry that as a charm?"

"This is my pind-gee-go-san!" Wen-dah-ban exclaimed as he struck his chest with all the dramatic fervor of the Ojibwa. "Here in my heart I will carry that dream always. I need no other charm."

He stood before them, his eyes burning with the brilliancy of his vision, his voice clear and high. He had fallen easily into the flowery phrases of the poetic people among whom he lived. Weak from the long fast, seeing in his dream a fulfillment of the longing which had possessed him ever since his visit to Fort Kenogami the previous summer, his words were uttered with a fervor and an assurance which impressed the simple-minded Pe-tah-bo and left him staring dumbly.

But Nee-tah-wee-gan only glanced scornfully at the boy, her features twisted in an evil grin, and then resumed her cooking.

A FEW days later Pe-tah-bo prepared for his annual journey to the fort. When he was ready to depart Wen-dah-ban, carrying the bundle of furs he had caught the previous winter, walked toward the canoe.

"I am going with you," he announced.

Pe-tah-bo glanced uneasily at Nee-tah-wee-gan, for he had learned to dread her outbursts.

"Go!" she cried scornfully. "Tell the white people you dreamed you are one of them and hear them laugh at you. Go and learn that the wind whispered lies in your ears while you were sleeping the fasting sleep. Go an learn that you are only an Indian, the son of Nee-tah-wee-gan."

Wen-dah-ban listened without comment and when she had finished he stepped into the bow of the canoe. Pe-tah-bo took the stern and they paddled away. As they rounded the first point the boy looked back. Nee-tah-wee-gan was crouched beside the fire staring at them.

It was thus that Wen-dah-ban left his childhood home. Despite his mother's farewell he was in ecstacy and yet he said nothing of what was in his heart to Pe-tah-bo. Not only had he learned to keep his thoughts to himself but he could not have explained the high resolve which gripped him, the urge which had sent him forth, an unkempt savage, to the home of the whites.

Soon after his arrival he followed Pe-tah-bo to the trade shop and handed out his furs to be graded as the other's were. But when Merton Layard announced the total his eyes did not turn at once to the shelves as those of hunters always do. Neither did he make that first purchase of all Ojibwa boys, a rifle.

"I will not trade now," he said simply.

He turned and went out, leaving the manager staring after him.

"In fifteen years I've never seen that happen," Merton said to Emile Finlayson, his halfbreed assistant.

"It is Nee-tah-wee-gan's boy," Emile replied as if the statement explained everything.

Being a good fur trader, Merton knew all the gossip about Nee-tah-wee-gan, but the explanation was not enough.

"Strange lad," he said and went on with the trading.

It was the busiest time of the year for the manager and he did not think of Wen-dah-ban again, except to tell his wife of the incident, until after the fur brigade had departed for Fort Bruce, the headquarters post. Pe-tah-bo was one of the crew, and the boy remained at the fort. The day after the three York boats, carrying the entire winter's catch of fur, had departed, Wen-dah-ban entered the trade shop.

"You have come to trade?" Merton greeted him.

"No," Wen-dah-ban answered. "I do not need anything now."

Merton stared in amazement.

"What!" he said. "An Indian boy who does not need anything?"

"But I am not an Indian."

It was not a protest nor was it a declaration. Rather it was an announcement as if of a purpose. He stood there, a typical child of the wigwams, in shapeless moccasins, hatless, dirty, his scanty, ill made clothing hanging grotesquely, and yet there was something in his eyes which made the statement one of simple dignity.

For they were not the eyes of a native. Though dark they were clear and unafraid. Merton searched them for the shadows and the furtiveness of the aborigine, but they stared back steadily, glowing with a high resolve.

"I am not an Indian," the boy repeated, "and I have come to live with my own people."

"But Nee-tah-wee-gan is your mother."

"Her father was a Frenchman and my father was a white man. The white blood in me told me to come and live as the white man lives."

For a moment Merton studied him. There was none of the demanding insolence of the halfbreed, presuming on a mixed heritage. In his years as a trader he had learned how to handle that, but this boy puzzled him.

"How do you expect to begin?" he asked kindly.

"I will work for the great company."

"But what can you do?"

"I will learn to do anything."

A black bear came out of the brush.

"You are too young to be a tripper. You don't know a word of English, and——"

"But I can learn!" the boy broke in passionately. "My dream told me that I can be a white man."

"Your dream?" Merton repeated.

"Yes. This spring I fasted. You know it is the time when a boy becomes a man. And the seventh night I dreamed that I am white. Before that I thought much of it, even when I was little. But now I know. Something within told me that my dream was true. If I were an Indian would I feel that way? Would I wish to leave the hunting camp if I had only dreamed? At the fasting time the heart does not lie."

Though he had clothed his impassioned outburst in flowery Ojibwa, Merton was more than startled. The boy had spoken in the only language he knew, but the mental processes back of the words were different, a fact overshadowing in significance the strange longing harbored by a wigwam-bred child.

The post manager stared for a moment in thoughtful silence. The boy carried a smoke smell as strong as any Indian, but he did not have the Indian's hair or features. And never had Merton seen an Ojibwa's eyes glow as did Wen-dah-ban's.

He recalled, too, all the gossip about Nee-tah-wee-gan and her strange action in keeping the boy hidden until at last he had run away. The whole thing spelled mystery, but above all there was something gripping and compelling in the brave, confident declaration, something which convinced his heart against the knowledge gleaned in fifteen years of fur trading.

"By God!" Merton exclaimed in English, "I believe you are white!"

Blue Ribbon Fiction

There Was the Hangman Ready to String Up the Gypsy Robin Hood, and Only a Girl Could Save Him—the Girl of His Own Race, or the Daughter of His Enemy, the Hated Greek.

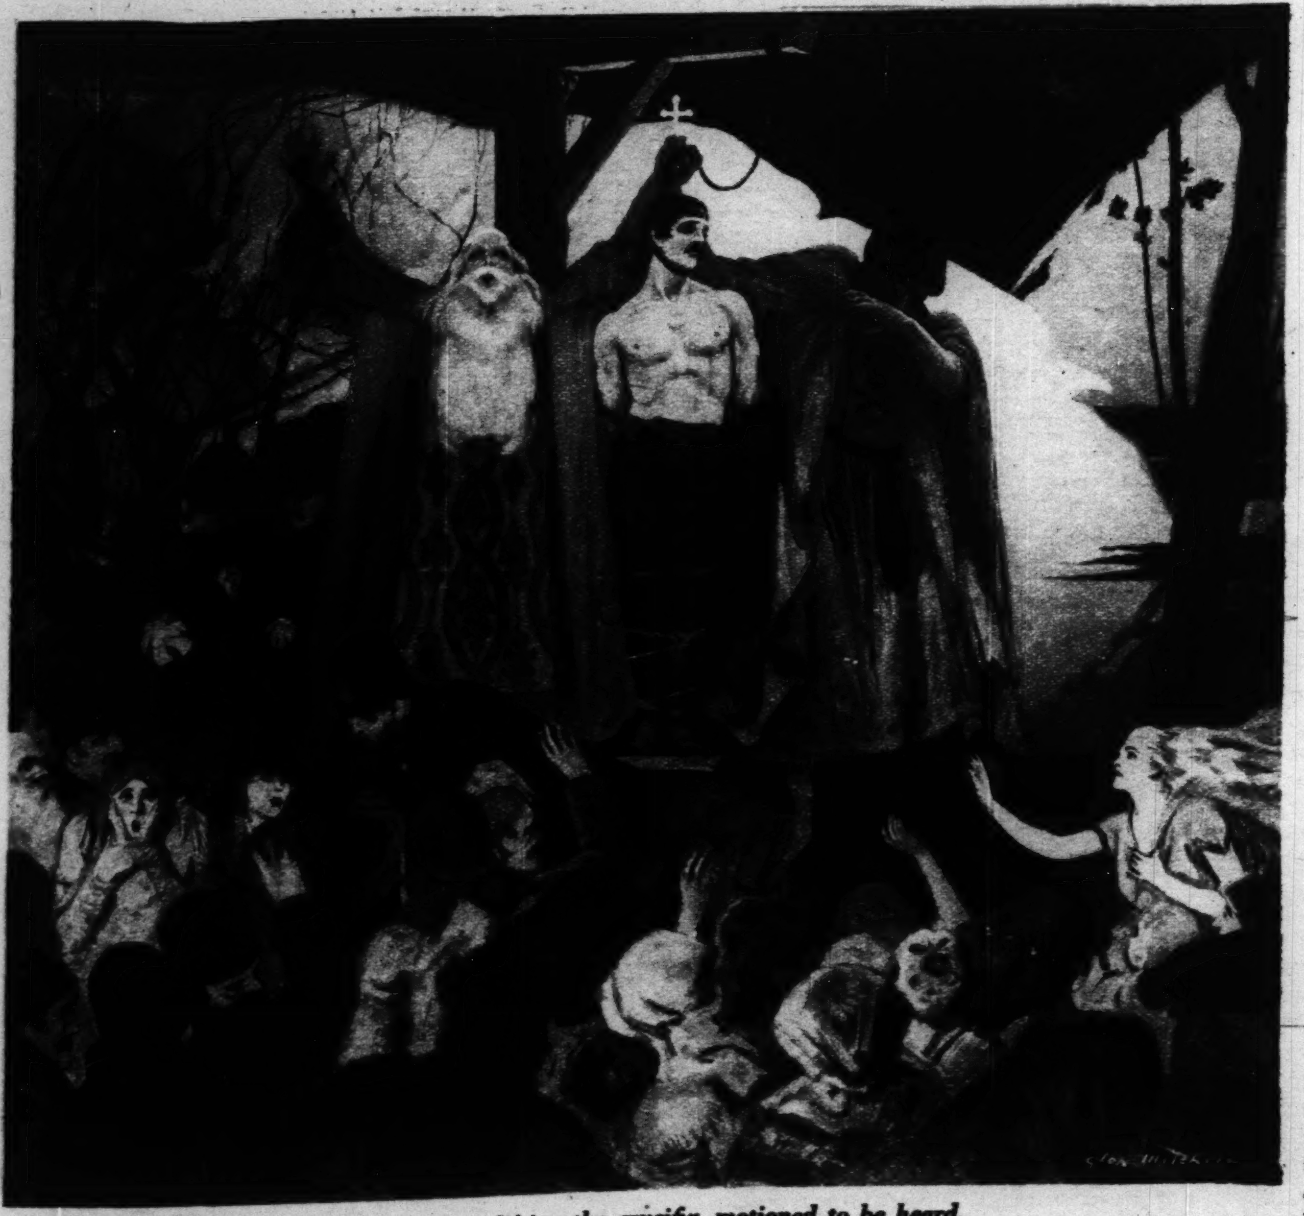
AND of things as they are, I have this to say that there is as little wisdom or understanding when praising the virtues of men as there is to punish them for their vices. And the hand we bless because it has cared for a garden until its thousand rose bushes are of the same size and color is the cursed hand which has destroyed the ones that happened to be different from the others.

For men are called good when they are as the whole multitude is. But things as they are also perish together of the same disease. Then the unique, which when not destroyed is neglected, is the one which carries on life; life in a new form—but life nevertheless; procreating, reproducing itself; until by reason of numbers a new virtue is established out of the vice of yesterday. And what has been evil yesterday becomes good. And what has been neglected becomes beautiful. And what has been vicious, virtuous. For we know little of the sequence of things in life. And we know still less when our best deed will be the cause of the most heinous one. In the long chain of life evil will father the most beautiful thing — for flowers grow not on silk.

Now I will tell you the story of Jancu Gian—Jancu Gian, the "Haiduc," the man who once spread terror the whole length of the Danube and to the length of the Prut river to where her arms lock the arms of the Danube to flow together into the Black sea, going together to their doom as they meet. And the name of Jancu Gian was also revered and hated along the Carpathian mountains, those tall giants which of yore divided Walachia from the country of the Maghyars—the tall and fierce Maghyars, who have waited for centuries for the opportunity to to invade the plains of Oltenia, the very first of the old Roman settlements in the Balkan peninsula. Oltenia, where the men are big and their light hair waves and hangs over their necks and their light blue eyes twinkle merrily, as if life were but a huge joke in which every one takes part. And as to the women of the Oltenia plains! Their brown arms are like the branches of trees, yet their ankles are as thin and as fleet as those of the deer. Their eyes are brown. Their hair, which they carry away from their foreheads under the wide "naframa," the homespun head cover, is black and is tied in a knot at the neck by a red ribbon. I shall not sing their praises. But this I will tell: that the wives of men living in the other parts of Walachia live in continuous fear when their husbands are traveling that part of the country. For theirs is an old saying, "When six men go to Oltenia, only one comes back; and that one because he was suddenly stricken blind."

And of Jancu Gian's appearance I remember this: He was a very old man and I a very young child when I saw him. His hair was snow white and his beard, which reached to his belt, only tinged with gray. And so old was he and his eyelids so heavy he used to raise them with his finger when he wanted to look at some one. But he was as straight as a birch tree and his step was as springy as the step of a well rested, well nourished youth. When some one inquired about his health he replied by asking that a horseshoe be brought to him, a new one. This he would take in his two thickly veined brown hands, and, bending the iron shoe back and forth, he would break it in twain. And of his voice, I know that he could make it as cooing and soft as that of a dove. But his voice changed when his anger rose with the memory of the past; when telling us of a time in his life; when the country, from the black hills of Bucovina down to the green fields of Orsova, was owned by the Turks and ruled by the Fanariots. Ah! those Fanariots; the descendants of the Greek renegades who had accepted Mohammedanism in Constantinople and who were given Roumania as a spoiling ground.

As Jancu Gian told us about the sufferings of his people in those days his voice grew louder and louder until it filled us with terror. Our pulse quickened and responded to the vibration of his voice. It was as though a thousand beaten drums had suddenly reached their strongest and their quickest, and the beats of our blood were the very drum sticks which rapped on us.



An old priest, lifting the crucifix, motioned to be heard.

O, for those breath taking hours at the fireside, while the wind was moaning outside and the snow was falling so thick on the ground and in the air we never knew whether the hours were the hours of the day or night.

And then suddenly Jancu Gian would quieten. He would lean heavily on the wall, his head bent low over his hairy chest, a few tears would roll down into his beard, winding between the folds of his old brown cheeks, and we would all begin to cry before sneaking off to our beds. Or we would go to lie down over the wide brick oven, to wait until the candle had flickered its last, the better to dream about the things we had heard. I vowed a thousand times to become a Haiduc, to organize bands of which the best should be the chiefs; to lurk in the forest with them, in the fastnesses of mountains, and descend from time to time on the palaces of the despoilers of the country, destroying them and leading the cruel tyrants into captivity, where we should compel them to swear off their ways, to return what they had stolen to the people, and leave the shores of the Danube never to come back again.

And now to the story of Jancu Gian.

When Jancu Gian was twenty he was as handsome a youth as ever lived in the country village where his father was the blacksmith. He worked the whole week with his father, with hammer at anvil, and danced on Sunday from early morning to late at night, as did the other youths and maidens of the village, to the music the gypsies were making seated upon a table on the greensward in front of the inn.

And so sure was the father his son would continue the trade that the handles he made to his heavy sledgehammers were of the stoutest and oldest hickory, for, said he, these handles were to last not only his life long but also during the life of his son.

And the peasants were all proud of Jancu. His work was lasting and honest; it was done cheerfully. For there is an old proverb: When the nails in the horseshoes are driven in with laughter they will last much longer than when driven in with curses. And the horse shod by a laughing blacksmith will never slip and will live much longer than the one shod by a cheerless blacksmith.

Among the maidens of the village Jancu liked best Perita, the daughter of the priest. She knew better the angle in which to stick the red rose in her hair, and how to encircle herself with the narrow belt that held the blue front half into the gold tinseled green back half of her skirt together. Her white embroidered, large sleeved, open necked blouse was always more beautiful than any worn by the other girls of the village. And her teeth were like milk of corn, and her skin as fragrant and of the amber color of the first honey. And the smiling words she had! And her eyes always twinkled and her moist lips were always parted when she danced.

The whole village knew that Jancu and Perita were to be married soon. The handsomest young man had chosen the handsomest of the girls as the future mother of his children. Neither poverty nor riches divided the people of that village. Each one worked six days a week, to rest and dance on the seventh one. Jancu having no rivals, Christmas was set as the time by the parents for the wedding of their children.

One Sunday before the first snowfall, while the young peasants with their girl friends were dancing and singing outside the inn, turning round and round the table on which the gypsy musicians were sitting, scraping at their fiddles, and while the older

Wind and dirt age a woman's skin—

In America's big cities women use this famous method to keep their skin fresh and supple

THE wind, itself an enemy, conspires with the soot of city smoke stacks and the dirt of the streets to change your skin. Unless you fight this coarsening, it will take away the first smooth freshness and leave your skin dry and coarse, older. In every big city today where the menace is greatest, women are using this famous method to keep their skin fresh and supple.

First the special cleansing that does more than cleanse

Give your skin a nightly cleansing with the cold cream that contains just the right amount and kind of oil to work in and out without clogging—Pond's Cold Cream. So rich it cleans thoroughly and keeps the skin beautifully supple too. It is the special softening oil in this cream which counteracts the drying effect of wind and gives your skin the beautiful suppleness you want. Yet it is light enough to wipe off and never clog the pores.

And then the unfailing outdoor protection

Never fail to apply before going out, the delicate vanishing cream known in almost every country for its famous protection—Pond's Vanishing Cream. It contains the most effective softening and soothing ingredient known to skin specialists, keeps your skin smooth, fully protected from coarsening winds.

Use this double method. To meet the two great needs of the skin, Pond's developed these two famous creams. First the cold cream that cleans and oils. Then the famous outdoor protection. Wherever you live, under the most trying conditions, they will keep your skin beautifully smooth and fresh. These creams are found in all department and drug stores. They contain nothing which promotes the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson St., New York.

men were tasting the barrels of new wine that had just arrived for the inn, smacking knowing tongues against roof of mouth before uttering opinion of quality to the attending potbellied innkeeper; while this was going on a carriage, in which two men and a woman were sitting, a carriage drawn by four horses in silver studded harness, bells tinkling over their necks, was seen coming.

Instantly the gypsies stopped playing and clambered down from the table. The dancing ceased, and the peasants spilled the contents of glasses to get their hands free so as to uncover their heads. The innkeeper bent to the ground, cringing like a dog, crawled almost on his fours to the carriage.

It had been murmured about the village for some time, and the news came from the priest, who was the only one in the village to receive news from the state or government, that a new prefect was coming to administer that part of the country. But the peasants along the Moldava river had never paid much heed to such changes. A new prefect or an old prefect never caused much difference. Their own quarrels were settled by the priest and their primar, the mayor, who also collected their taxes. Seldom, if ever, had a prefect visited their village, but when that stately carriage approached the inn they were all certain that it was the prefect. And so haughty and cruel did he look, so disdainful of their presence, that the old proud spirit was humbled in many of them. They stood with their fur caps in hand looking at the people in the carriage and being overlooked by the prefect and the other two as if they were cattle pasturing at some distance.

Suddenly the prefect, the young humpback with vast black mustache and cruel eyes, rose in his seat and began to gesticulate like a wild man. The primar, the mayor, had by that time arrived from his home and was humbly and officiously bowing to his superior. The old head of the village could not understand a word of what the younger one said, for he spoke a different language, Greek, from the one of our country, which the peasants did not understand.

Then, in greater rage, the prefect pointed toward Jancu Gian, who was standing at a distance with an arm around the waist of his beloved and the tall fur cap tilted insolently and proudly on his forehead. It was not that Jancu Gian had deliberately intended to offend the prefect—he had never been insolent to any one—but neither had he ever humbled himself to another man, for he was proud with the pride of his youth and strength. He had only forgotten to bare his head. Perhaps because his right hand happened to be in the clasp of the left one of his beloved!

After the humpback had raged for a few moments Jancu understood the reason, but he was too proud to do as he was expected. The man sitting near the prefect then explained in Wallachian to the mayor and asked that the boy be called to the carriage.

Jancu, still with fur cap on, with his arms folded across his breast, approached slowly when he was beckoned to do so. The boy had hardly come near enough when the cane of the prefect came smashing down over his face.

An hour later the carriage, driven by a pale and frantic woman, returned to the prefecture. The two men were dead on their seats.

JANCU GIAN had taken refuge in the forest, never again to dance as a free man at the inn. Never again to sing his song when driving the iron nails through the shoes on the horses' hoofs.

But this was only the beginning, for the mild, soft spoken boy soon became the terror of the oppressors of his country. No sooner had a wrong been done by the hirelings of the oppressors than Jancu Gian, around whom a group of youths from his own village had assembled, was already avenging it. Whole herds of cattle owned by the oppressors were driven away and disappeared; houses went up in flames like so many match sticks. Those who had sinned against the people paid for it with their lives.

The government set a price on Jancu Gian's head. But there was not one peasant mean enough, black hearted enough, to even desire such gold. A year later there were a hundred Jancu Gians with organized bands lurking in the forests and mountains or gliding rafts on the rivers. Being the prefect of a district was no longer an appanage given to a faithful servant. It came to be considered a punishment. Exiled Greek boyars, living on lands which they had despoiled, trembled every night, lest Jancu Gian, the Haiduc, appear from nowhere, across the mountains, across rivers, suddenly, to avenge some wrong that one of the hirelings had done.

The peasants, who at first were themselves afraid of the bandits, learned in time who were their friends. And, though occasionally they were asked to separate themselves from a few lambs or a calf to furnish meat for the men in the forests, stories began to circulate about good deeds done by Jancu Gian and his band. Poor widows were succored; healthy, strong youths dressed like peasants appeared on moonlit nights, just in time, to drive the oxen of the widow's plow, or came with scythes to cut the grain or to thrash it, without exacting any pay for their labors.

The gypsies and story tellers began to sing songs of praise—at times veiled and at times bold and frank, about Jancu Gian and his Haiducs, who gave to the poor what they took from the rich. And many a time after a battle had occurred between the Haiducs and the gendarmes, and when groups of Haiducs and gendarmes were lying in pools of blood in front of the church, the priest's first prayer for the dead was uttered for the ones in fur caps and red sashes and not for the ones in brass buttoned uniforms and long swords. Other youths, the country over, fired by the example of Jancu Gian, formed avenging hordes. And, so as to better spread terror, each chief called himself "Jancu Gian."

And now I will tell you what happened to Perita: After Jancu had flown into the forest, her father, the priest who carried his vestments by grace of the government and in whose pay he was, turned his face away from the youth. Jancu had speech with the man of God several times, watching for an opportunity at cross roads, but never again was it given him to lay his eyes on the beautiful Perita. The peasants of the village expected the Haiduc to come and take her by force or violence, but Jancu respected the priest, although his conduct embittered his life. And another thing: that same priest had said the blessing at the wedding of his own father and mother, and he could not think of laying hands on him or doing him violence. And, though Jancu suffered greatly, crying in the lap of his mother when he came to see her at unexpected hours of the night, he still looked upon the priest as the man of God. And the bitterer he became against the Fanariots, for it was because of them that he was separated from the woman of his choice.

And Perita, who had always been so gay, whose speech was always the music of laughter, who had danced more than she had walked! Perita's eyes lost their twinkle and her knees sagged; her honeyed skin lost its fragrance and her lips parched as dry as the skin of an apple forgotten by the pickers but whose stem was too strong to let it fall and rot.

After the first year passed other youths of the village, urged on by the priest himself and by their own memories of Perita's loveliness, offered to marry her, for it became known to all that the priest would never permit his daughter to marry a Haiduc upon whose head a price was laid. At times Perita, whose youth cried for life, would come out to the inn and dance with some young man, but his hands upon her bare arms made her feel as if ice had touched her and her step would be so heavy and so unrhythmical that she would break away and cry in shame.

In time she became known as Jancu Gian's fiancée. Her misfortune and her sadness became one of the things of the village of which everybody was aware and of which nobody spoke. People merely shook their heads when they saw her sitting in front of her father's house; they did not wonder. And when they saw her looking aimlessly at the passersby their hearts saddened. The priest and his wife accepted what had happened as done by the hand of God.

At first Jancu Gian suffered very much because of his separation from Perita, but in time he began to reason that it was perhaps for the best. What would he have done if he had taken her with him into the forest? Compelled to hack his way through from one surrounded forest to another; digging his way out from caves in which he had taken refuge; on horseback at night to reach the place where he had to avenge some wrong. What would he have done if he had had a wife to take care of?

Occasionally, landing on Sunday in a village, he and his men would snatch a dance at an inn before they were recognized. At times they danced on even after they were recognized. His reputation frequently only spurred the maidens to vie with each other as to who should dance longer with him. There were many buxom girls ready to follow him wherever he desired, and many a time Jancu Gian himself had almost been caught in the noose of his passion, his vigor, his youth, but the memory of that Sunday morning when he stood with arm around Perita, fur cap on his head, first facing that humpback and his hireling he had killed, would bring prudence to his mind, and Jancu Gian would depart before things had gone too far. Though he always remembered a certain promise he had made to Perita, it was said of him by those who knew that his lips savored of the kisses he had received from the girls of a hundred villages.

AMONG the Greek oppressors of the peasants there were none so harsh and so hated as a man by the name of Stavidis. Jancu Gian finally decided to avenge the wrongs done by that man. Stavidis, who lived in a castle he had built close to the shore of the Danube, surrounded by a high brick wall and guarded inside and outside by picked men and fierce dogs, knew what was coming. He organized posses of men and dogs who combed the forests as do hunters in search of game, and many a time a pitched battle ensued in which men of either side paid with their lives for their audacity.

In time the enmity between Stavidis and Jancu Gian lost its national character and became a very personal affair between the two men. So one night Jancu Gian, alone on his horse, after bidding his friends to wait for him patiently in the forest until he called them by a given signal, took the road that led to the palace of the Greek. It was not the first time that Jancu Gian had thus departed on a single handed expedition. Every time he had done so his men had remained singing quietly around the fire, to make the vigil easier, fretting impatiently until their chief should call them. For they were impetuous youths, eager not only to avenge the wrongs their people suffered but also to show personal valor. And many a one hoped to make his own name as well feared as Jancu Gian's.

But that night, after Jancu had left, the youngest of them did not dare raise his voice in chant. The twenty or more men sat silently around the fire of wet wood which refused to burn brightly and smoked without giving either warmth or light. An hour after their chief had gone, and following his order, they went each to a different point, surrounding the castle in a wide circle, from where they communicated with one another by imitating the howls and cries of forest animals. They were to wait, each at his own post, until they should hear Jancu's own signal, a peculiar call Jancu had invented for himself, which imitated no beast and did not seem possible to be voiced by a human being.

The whole night his men waited for the signal of their chief, and while waiting they kept calling to one another, until it seemed that the whole countryside had been invaded by more wolves and other denizens of the wilds than existed in the whole wide world.

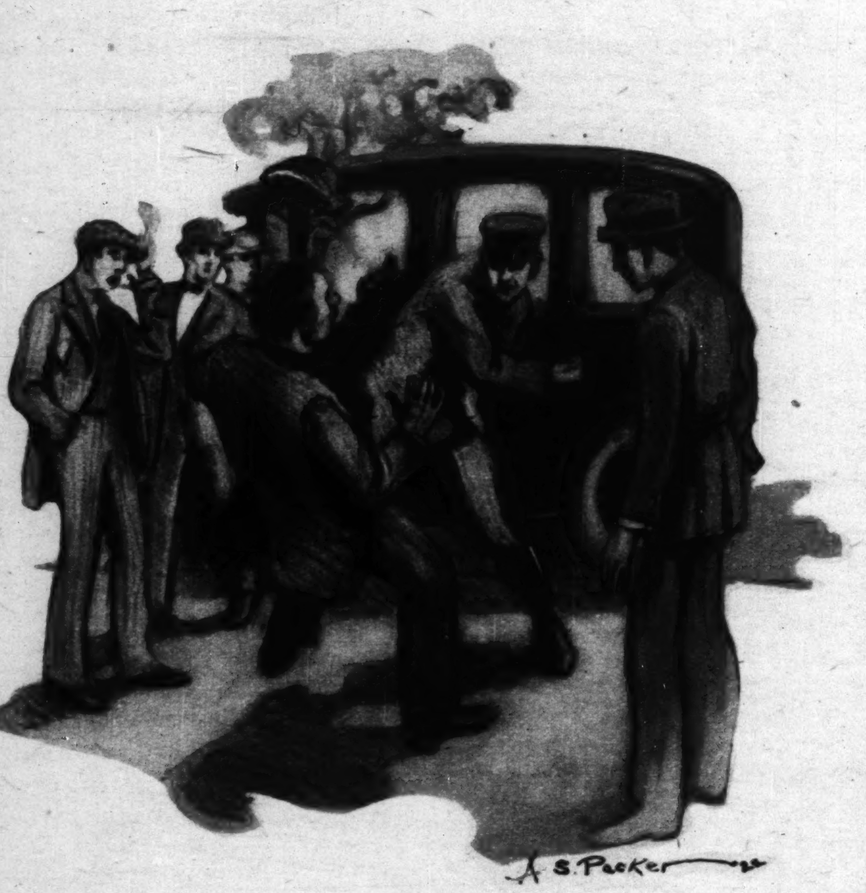
In the morning, unable to resist, the Haiducs approached from different sides, verging toward the castle of the Greek. At high sun time they found Jancu, with a bullet in his chest, lying by the roadside. Near him sat a young, dark eyed, dark haired, olive skinned girl, whom they recognized to be Stavidis' only daughter, trying to stanch the blood and keep down the fever of the man with water which she brought in her cupped palms from a rivulet flowing near by.

Xanta looked up appealingly to the men when she saw the wounded man thrown onto a horse.

"Where are you taking him?" she cried, wringing her hands.

"To die among friends," answered the older of the Haiducs as the horse was already on the way.

A month later, when Jancu Gian had miraculously recovered from his wound, he told his men how he had made his way into the very room occupied by the Greek. But it so happened that Stavidis was not at home that night. After going through several rooms, garroting and gagging the servants, he came upon the room occupied by the girl, who alone of her family was at home. By that time one of the servants, having freed himself, freed the others, and they rushed Jancu while he was in the room of the girl wondering whether he should take her as hostage or not. His waiting horse fled, scared at the sound of so many shots without the master being in the saddle. The servants, twenty in number, headed by the girl, were constantly upon him. At last, just as he had thought he had eluded them—— But he remembered nothing of what happened afterwards except a stinging pain, a numbing of the knees, and the uselessness of his arms.



Xanta.

When he opened his eyes again Xanta was near him bathing his wound. There were no servants around her; either she had sent them away or they were not aware that their mistress was attending the wounded Haiduc.

All during his convalescence Jancu thought of the girl, and the more he thought or her the more he considered himself unworthy of his calling. She was the daughter of the most hated of the Greeks and he was Jancu Gian, whom all his people expected to hate and despise and destroy all fanariots. Only a traitor could think such thoughts of the daughter of the enemy of the people. And Perita! Was he forgetting Perita who waited for him!

STILL, when he was well enough to go about alone, Jancu, disguising himself thoroughly, arranged to get within the inclosure of the Stavidis home, to catch a glimpse of the girl. He saw her, unbeknown to her, from a distance several times. And once, when he had come too near, though he was disguised as a peddler of penny books, she raised her head and looked into his eyes at the sound of his voice. The next moment she had pulled off his false beard.

"Why hast thou come here?" she asked him. "Is it to murder my father?"

"To see you," Jancu replied, "to hear your voice!"

They remained standing, looking at each other. Then Xanta, fearing that Jancu should be recognized by the servants, now that she had torn off his disguise, guided him herself out of the gate.

The Haiducs wondered why Jancu suddenly resisted several tempting occasions when he could have raided and destroyed the Stavidis castle and all its people. Several times complete plans and suggestions of how to accomplish that were brought to him by one or another of his men, but every time Jancu postponed the fray. Angered, several men left Jancu to form a band of their own to destroy the Stavidis home and kill every soul in it.

He again sought to see Xanta. It was with the intention to warn her. But he learned that she had been sent away to some other boyar's house, exactly which one nobody knew. From then on every time a raid was planned by the Haiducs on some Greek boyar Jancu Gian was the one who interfered, for there was no possible way of knowing whether Xanta, the daughter of the Greek, was not in the place they intended to raid and destroy.

Angered and dispirted because of the inactivity, more Haiducs of Jancu Gian left him and joined other chieftains carrying on the avenging work.

His sudden inactivity was only known to the Haiducs. His name continued to strike terror to the hearts of the enemies of his people. Jancu, almost alone, took to wandering; going from one village to the other, disguised as a peddler or an itinerant story teller.

And lo! one day as Jancu was drinking a small pitcher of wine in one of the inns he frequented, gendarmes overpowered him. Before he had time to move a finger he was ligoted and thrown to the ground. One of his own men had betrayed him for thirty silver pieces.

His capture caused a sensation, yet so great in numbers were the ones who now openly spoke out their admiration for the man that the authorities, headed as they were by Greeks, dared not make short work of the man. His trial was purposely held in a small village.

The roads leading to that village crowded with people who had come across mountains and rivers to be there and see with their own eyes the man who had in such a short time put fear into the hearts of the men who had oppressed them. Fathers carried young sons on their shoulders in the hope that their offspring would, by catching a glimpse of the Haiduc, grow themselves to be true Roumanians. Mothers carried their breast babies, hoping that by some miracle Jancu Gian's eyes might rest on them.

Yet even while the trial was going on, with thousands of people waiting outside the little red brick courthouse, the scaffold was being erected and the hangman, surrounded by half an army, was adjusting the trap and trying out the noose.

Only two hours after he had been brought before the judges, ligoted in ropes and chains, so that he could not move nor stand, Jancu Gian was carried to the gallows at the bottom of a manure van, dragged by a lame donkey, between two deep rows of soldiers.

Awed by the spectacle, though deeply angered, thousands of peasants surrounded the scaffold, after ten or more rows of soldiers had encircled it.

THE hangman, who according to custom wore a hideous black mask on his face and was dressed in a blood red garment that covered him from head to foot, bowed to the people in mockery. In giving the last touches to the noose and to the trap he farcically attracted the attention of the people by his vile gestures.

Jancu, who had by that time managed to turn round to have a last look at the upturned faces of people he loved so well, saw Perita standing near her father. At the other end stood Xanta. He could see she was alone and that her hair was disheveled. It was plain to him she had come a long distance.

When the hangman had about finished his antics an old priest, his face framed by a long, white beard that reached almost to his belt, made his way to the scaffold near the Haiduc. Lifting the crucifix in one hand, he raised his other hand and motioned to the people that he wanted to be heard.

"Hear ye!" he called out. "There is an old custom among our people in this, our country. If any woman who hears me is willing to marry this man and have the hangman act as priest, and a tent in the cemetery be the place of their wedding, this man's life will be given to her. But, lest there should be too much haste, I must explain that the hangman blesses their wedding—not in the name of God, but in the name of the evil one—the children born of such a wedding, and the children of the children for seven generations, shall never be allowed in church; and, wherever they are, they shall wear a red band on which a black skull is painted and a rope on their necks so as to be known by everybody. And the woman and the man shall forever wear a rope noose on their necks and a red, cone shaped cap on their heads; and every month they shall be visited by the hangman, who will break bread with them and drink water from the same pitcher and also be godfather to the children."

This, and many other gruesome descriptions, were made by the priest.

Jancu looked at Perita. At first there were many other girls in the crowd ready to make the great sacrifice and save him from the hangman's noose. But as the priest described in great detail the ceremonies the girls covered their faces and disappeared from the crowd.

Perita was the one to hold out the longest. She seemed impatient to hear the end of the priest's description. But as they continued her head bent lower and lower, so that when the priest finally called out whether there was a woman who wanted to marry the condemned man, Perita's face was in her hands.

But a loud cry from the other end burst from the crowd. It was Xantas' voice, answering to the question of the priest with a loud: "Ego!"

And so great was the joy of the people that their Jancu had been saved that not one-tenth of the ceremonies described by the priest were carried out.

"Why this pistol in your hand?" asked Jancu when he had remained alone with his wife.

"It was prepared to shoot you with before the hangman's noose should encircle your neck."

And because an "enemy's" daughter had saved their chief the Haiducs ceased their raids against the Greeks' boyars; for the peasants began to see that even serpents are not all poisonous.

CENTURIES of BRIDALS OPEN WARDROBES to

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—With a vogue for white in evening wear in the ascendency, and a passion for laying aside for future generations, be it ducats or dress, on the decline, it should be an easy matter to plan wedding dress and party gown as one.

Simplicity should be its note. Whether of shining satin or diaphanous chiffon, the gown of the bride should throw her personality into the spotlight. This can be done only—so one of the most sought after makers of wedding gowns in New York tells me, and I agree with her—by keeping the gown itself as simple as possible. By this means, chiefly, sticking to one fabric.

You have made your choice of fabric. It is to be dignified white satin or girlish white chiffon. Your design is chosen. Straight lines for the satin, bouffant effect for the chiffon.

Never was there a better year to bring out old family treasures for the wedding. The fancy for flounces, berthas, panels, coronet headdresses and the like of lace makes the possession of such a blessing, instead of an agony, as it has been known to be. Even if it was grandmother's and her mother's before that, old lace has not always been so amenable as at this hour, So too, with the wedding dress " that has always been worn by the brides of our family." It is joyously adapting itself to the mood of the moment—panels for example. Lengths of rich, creamy, ancient satin hold no terrors now for the designer.

Today I am illustrating two bridals. Both are picturesque, yet appeal to different types. The bride to the left is decidedly of a period; the one to the right suggests a figure from a story, too, but she is quite of the moment, also, with her straight neck line, long basque, full skirt with irregular hem, and dropped waistline. This particularly charming and elegant gown is of ivory tinted satin, as one would expect. The long, flaring sleeves are of chiffon, lightly bordered with pearls and crystal. The girdle is of pearls and crystal.

For the matron of honor in the group on the left, a dress of orchid crepe has been designed, with sleeves of lighter hue. Its tunic drops in cascades to the bottom of the skirt in the back. Massed at the low waistline in front are made flowers of deep pastel shades, tied behind with a flat ribbon bow.

The accent of crystal is also found in loops on the dresses of the bridesmaids. These are of yellow crepe de chine with paneled sides. They wear yellow chiffon hats faced with orchid, and ostrich feather trimming on the hats both of maids and matrons contributes to the note of modishness.

TODAY'S DRAWINGS AS ROM THE REAR

In the second group, the bride has sought the period of bows and bouffancy for her inspiration. This is the dress for the piquant maid, as the lily slender girl finds her fate, speaking fashion wise, in the wedding dress of the other group.

Heavy white taffeta, brocaded with silver, is used. The period of 1860, with its resort to modestly fichued shoulders and stiffly outstanding skirts that allow only the most prim peep at a tulle petticoat would proclaim itself here, if the parted hair, ruched halo of veil, and paper coiffed bouquet did not. The spirt is paneled, corded with silver ribbon, and fastened at intervals with stiff bows.

The maid of honor comes wearing crepe of a new shade of pink. She has tiers of flounces on her skirt and the same on her sleeves. A-blue ribbon cocarde with streaming ends unites her fate as to color scheme with that of the bridesmaids. Take special note of the aneled effect of the back of this gown.

It's quite the thing for skirt flounces to quit in the quarter or half stretch, back or front, and for panels or drapery to complete the race.

The bridesmaids' dresses of crepe tell only a brief story of the flounce. These foreshortened effects are a concession to the balloon skirt of the earlier period which they are designed to accompany.

The rage for ribbon made garniture, characteristic of the times, shows itself in the cap sleeves and in the decoration of the picot edged ribbon girdles. The hat wreaths of all three attendants are of hand made ribbon roses. Two shades of pink are used.

There is room today for a great deal of needlework, it will be seen, on wedding dresses and dresses to be worn at weddings. It is the sort that the modern woman loves, giving a maximum of effect with a minimum of strain on eyesight and patience. Making ribbon flowers is the favored indoor sport.

If the wedding is in the afternoon, pearl gray, and light yellow beige shades are much employed for bridesmaids' dresses, with the maid of honor wearing, say, Lanvin green. A night wedding calls for stronger tones than grays and beiges. Here the regular evening shades, French blues, the new shell pink, sea green, and old rose, are seen. Chiffons and laces carry the day in fabrics.

Reverting again to old family lace and the wedding veil, than which nothing at the wedding is more important, clever use was made of two different sorts by one house here. One piece was made up into a huge Spanish comb. From this the point lace family wedding veil was suspended, mantillalike. A bandeau of lace went around the bride's forehead. The dress had a long court train, on which family lace was centered; tulle edged the court train.

JUST OUT OF COLLEGE

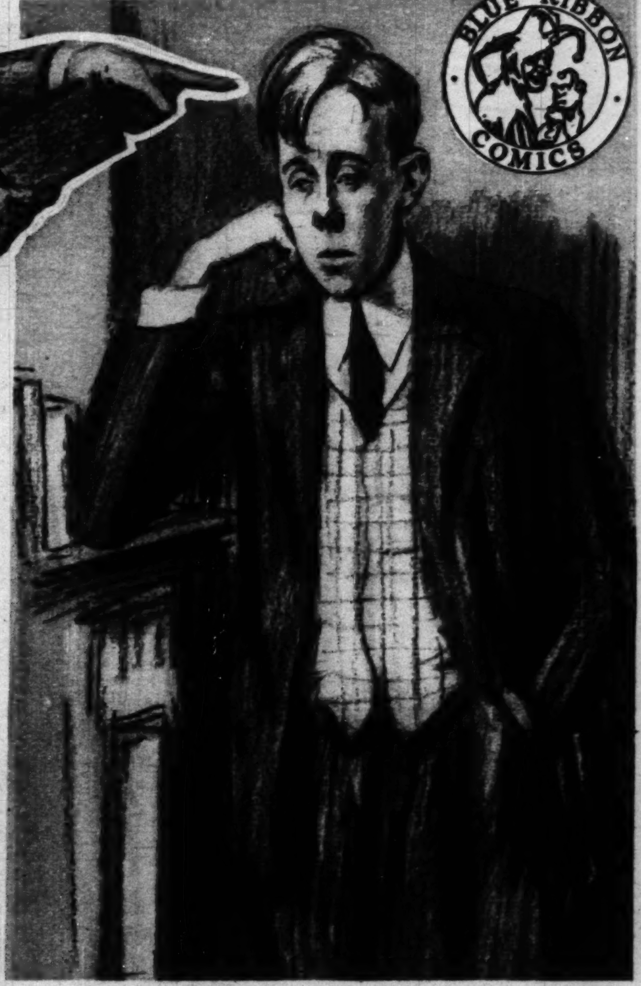
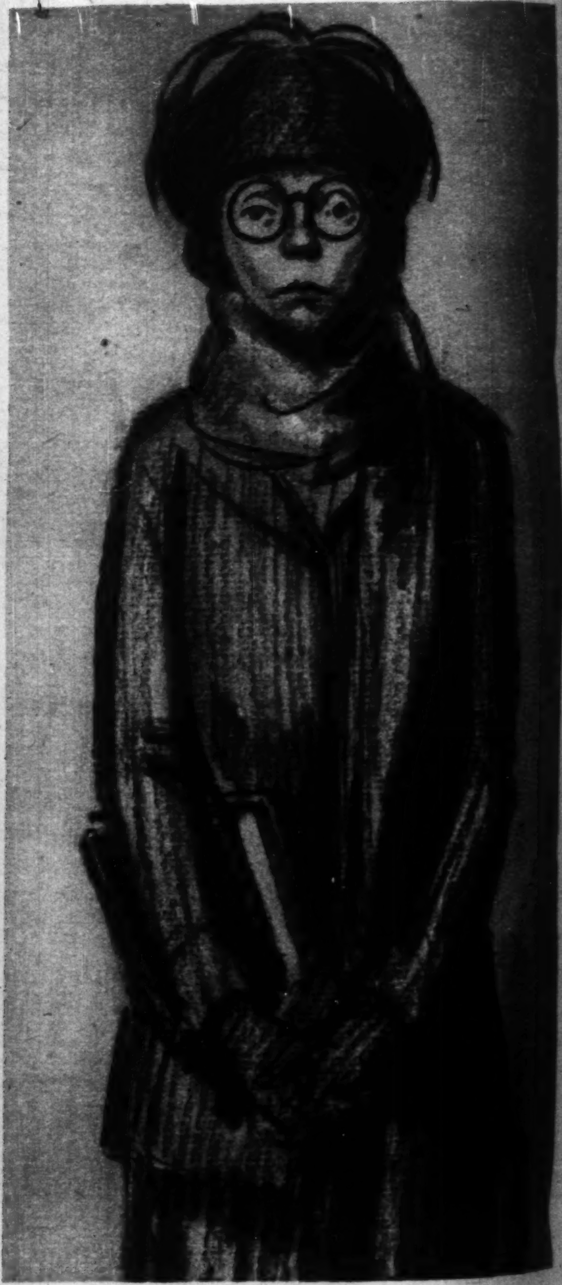
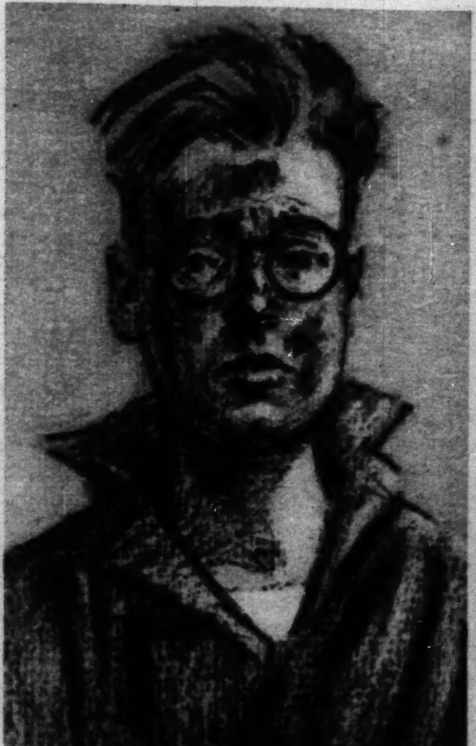
This, my dear, was one of the leading lights of the Senior Dramatic Society. But not for nothing did Gordon create a sensation doing Louka in "Arms and the Man." He's carrying on the good work, striving like mad to make the community players letter perfect in "The Tragedy of Man."



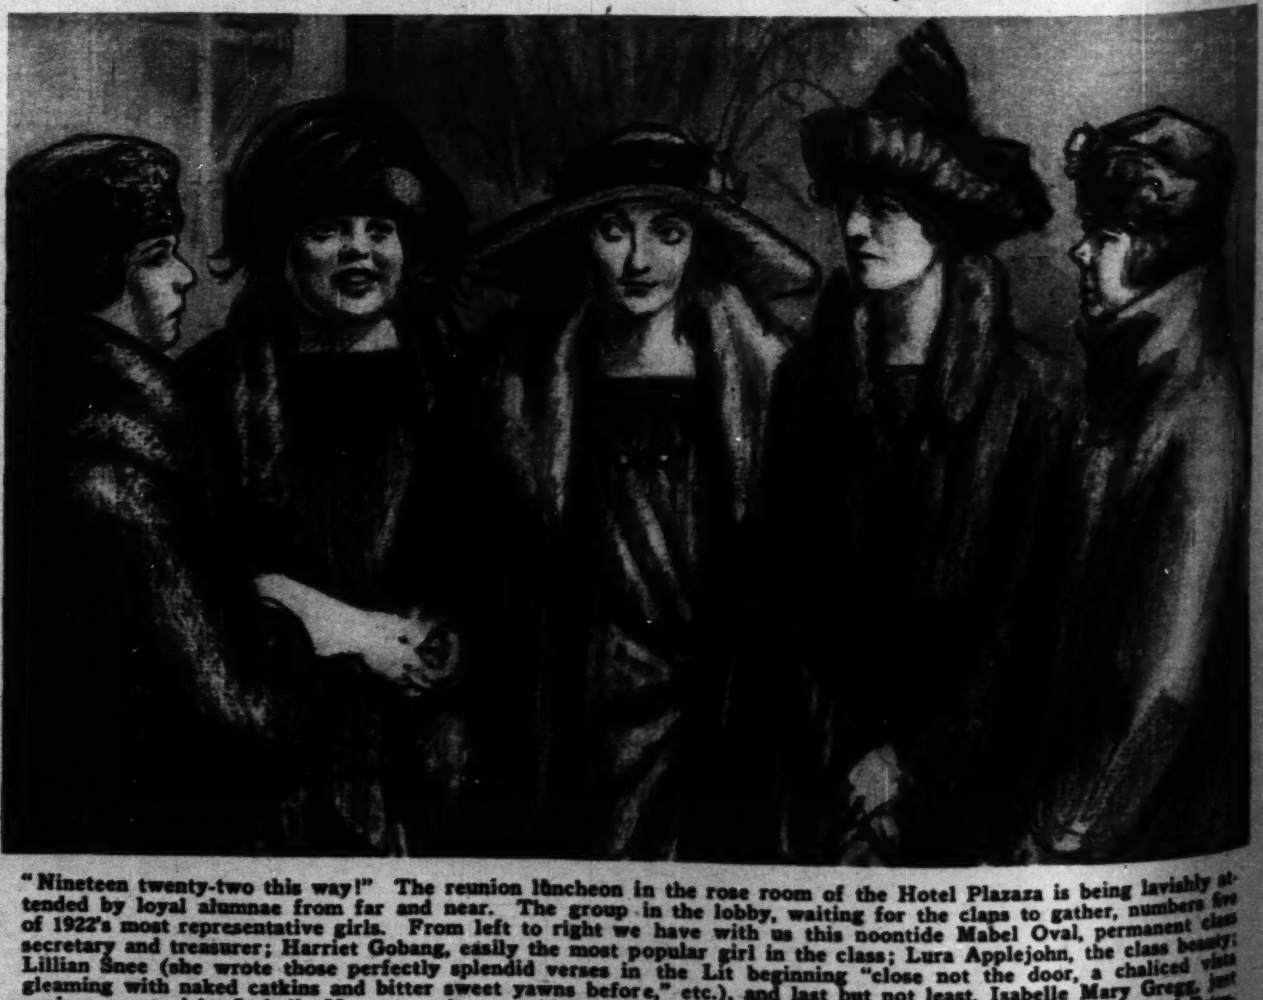
The cautious graduate: Selby believes in looking twice if not thrice before leaping into the world of affairs. Selby is not sure just what vocation his presence will grace—poetry, maybe, or perhaps a fling at the diplomatic service. Certain not papa's offer of a job in the woolen mills, where you work up from the bottom. To be on the safe side, Selby is going to travel in Spain and Italy for a couple of years. Just until he finds himself.



Carolyn is doing a little post-graduate work preparatory to going up to the neck in settlement work. She's specializing in scientific feeding—with reference to the very young and the very old.



Wallace is learning papa's business very much from the ground up. Wallace busted out junior year—he's listed in the catalogue "ex-1923." Wallace was bent on marrying a Follies girl and going in for art, but papa thought differently.



"Nineteen twenty-two this way!" The reunion luncheon in the rose room of the Hotel Plazaza is being lavishly attended by loyal alumnae from far and near. The group in the lobby, waiting for the claps to gather, numbers five of 1922's most representative girls. From left to right we have with us this noontide Mabel Oval, permanent class secretary and treasurer; Harriet Gobang, easily the most popular girl in the class; Lura Applejohn, the class beauty; Lillian Snee (she wrote those perfectly splendid verses in the Lit beginning "close not the door, a chaliced vista gleaming with naked catkins and bitter sweet yawns before," etc.), and last but not least, Isabelle Mary Gregg, just a nice, sweet girl. Isabelle Mary was class president senior year and was greatly praised for her rendering of Petruchio in "Taming of the Shrew." Isabelle packed every single line with meaning, those lucky ones who were present at senior dramatics affirm. It's going to be such a merry party! Already Harriet (she has such a sense of the ridiculous, my dear) is saying, "And will you ever forget the time Kate Hogg's roommate dressed up in the watchman's clothes and nearly scared her to death!"

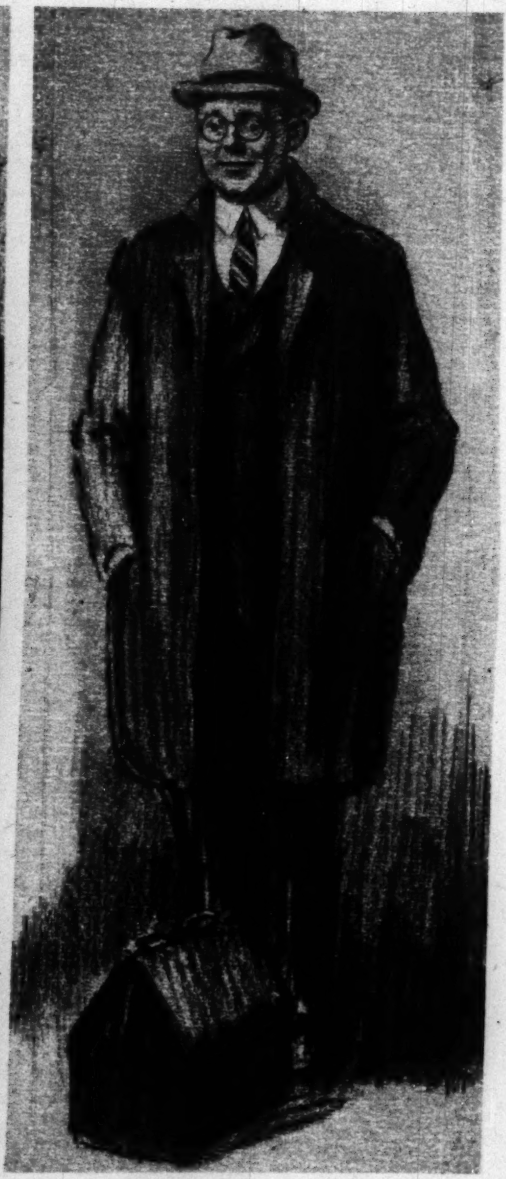
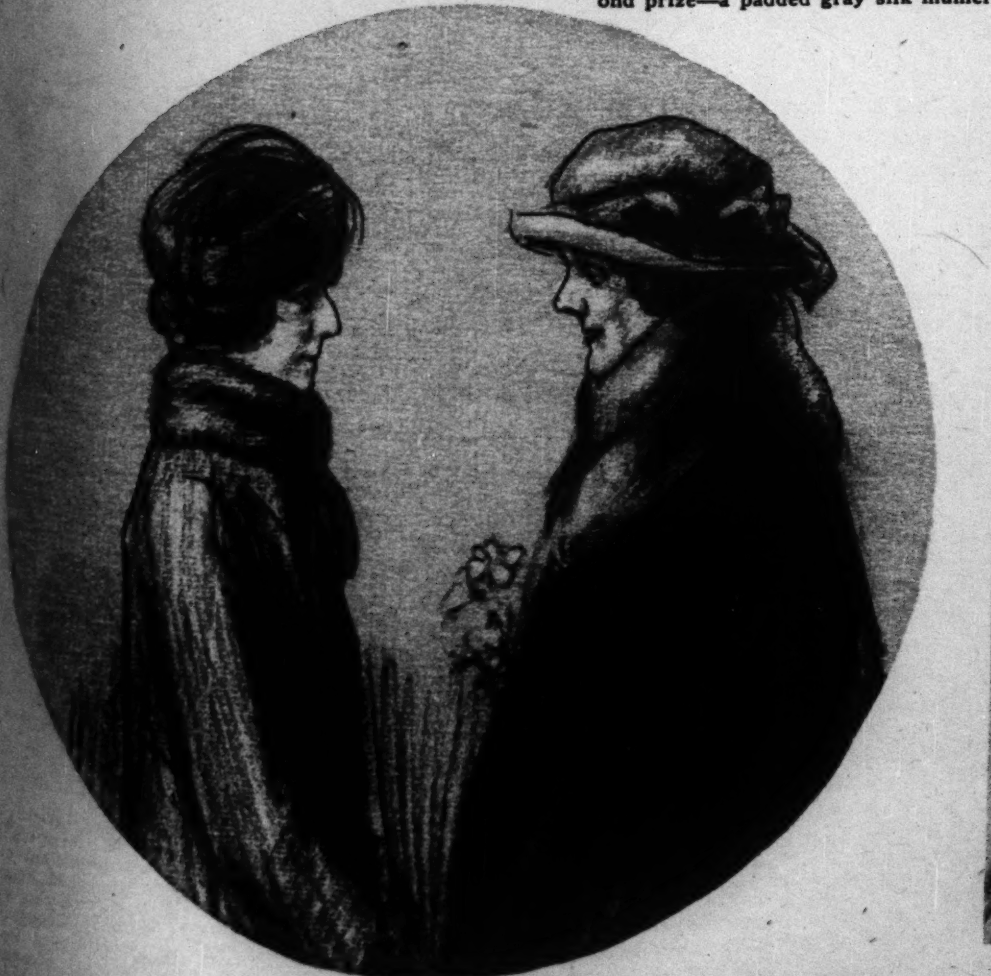
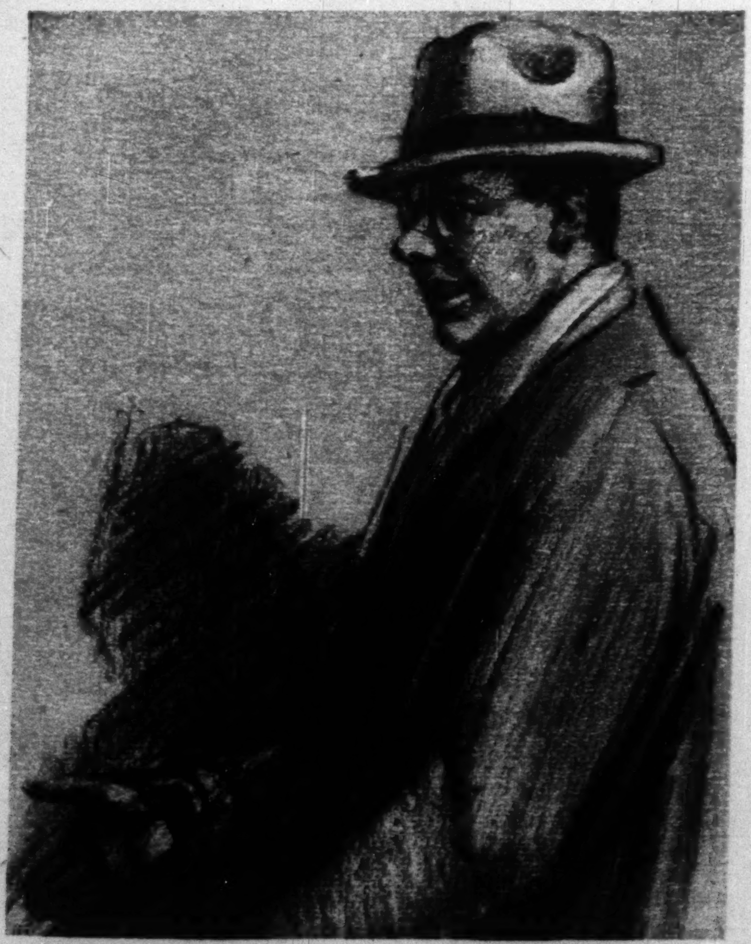
The late crop of wild oats is no less wild because it happens after graduation. Just look at Harvey B. Tonge! The leader at all Y. M. C. A. gatherings, junior and senior years. "Now, men," he used to announce, "I want every one who can to come to the Y. M. next Friday evening and hear the Reverend Doctor Brankle of Montague Centre speak on his work in China. Let's show Doctor Brankle that we're with him to a man in his great work!" And now will you look at him! Spending the evening with cousins in Walrus street playing hearts for prizes, mind you. Harvey is carrying off second prize—a padded gray silk muffler!



The fraternity hound, Brother Wooley of the noble brotherhood of Phi Magenta Tau, is on a bi-monthly trip to the halls of his Alma Mater. Seven months in the cold, cold world and the bond business have not caused Brother Wooley to forget for an instant that the sacred bonds of Phi Magenta Tau are more precious than anything else in life—as Brother Wooley will tell the assembled Phi Magentas on the eve of his arrival, and whom Phi Magenta Tau hath joined let no worldly interest put asunder.



Oh, those college friendships! They just don't last any time. Marguerite and Grace had a terrible crush on each other all senior year, and now they're lucky to meet once in a blue moon. Marguerite is engaged and Grace is taking up basket weaving. Just nothing in common.



"Well, by gee, if it isn't old 'Kidney' Rutherford! Seen any of the fellas? Say, how about getting up a little reunion some night next week?" etc. The very college spirited graduate wants to get up a little song fest. "We gotta do something to the 1922 bunch together!" he adds.

THE ROOM ON THE ROOF

The Story of a Crime in a Skyscraper - - - - - - by Will Payne

FINAL INSTALLMENT.

Freedom—and Happier Bonds.

AT the sound of her voice Steinman turned, staring at her out of dull and sunken eyes. It struck upon her heart, for he looked, she thought, like a lost, bewildered child. Moving quickly toward him, her voice lilted at him again: "Why didn't you let me know where you were? I've been anxious about you." She was beside him, holding out her hand, smiling. "I came up here to scold you. You must let me know where you are."

It was only instinct that led her to babble to him, as one does to restore the composure of a frightened child. "I expected you would be coming to see me here in Chicago. Aunty Prothroe told me you'd left Slow River, but I thought you'd only gone for a little rest." She kept on talking to him, saying just anything; smiling at him, meanwhile, her shining eyes saying more than her tongue. All the while Steinman—only a foot above her in spite of the two steps—was looking down into her face, as though examining it anew, the frost in his mind slowly thawing; answering her, when an answer was necessary, by a monosyllable or a motion of the head.

She didn't mind the words, saying anything that came along: "You've been well, haven't you? Have you a nice place to stay here in Chicago? Do you like to go to the theater? We must go some evening."

Her intuitions felt his forlornness like an icy breath. All her sympathetic emotions—balked in another direction—flowed out to him. The womanly urge to love and help found, at the moment, an object in this absurd little figure, with sunken cheeks and eyes. She babbled on only for the sake of being near him and shining at him. The frost in his mind was melting. "Are you tired now? Would you rather go away for a while? I'll arrange it with Mr. Harwood if you would."

"So-o!" he said, like one coming, tentatively, to the realization of an odd fact. "The olt man hass a friend?"

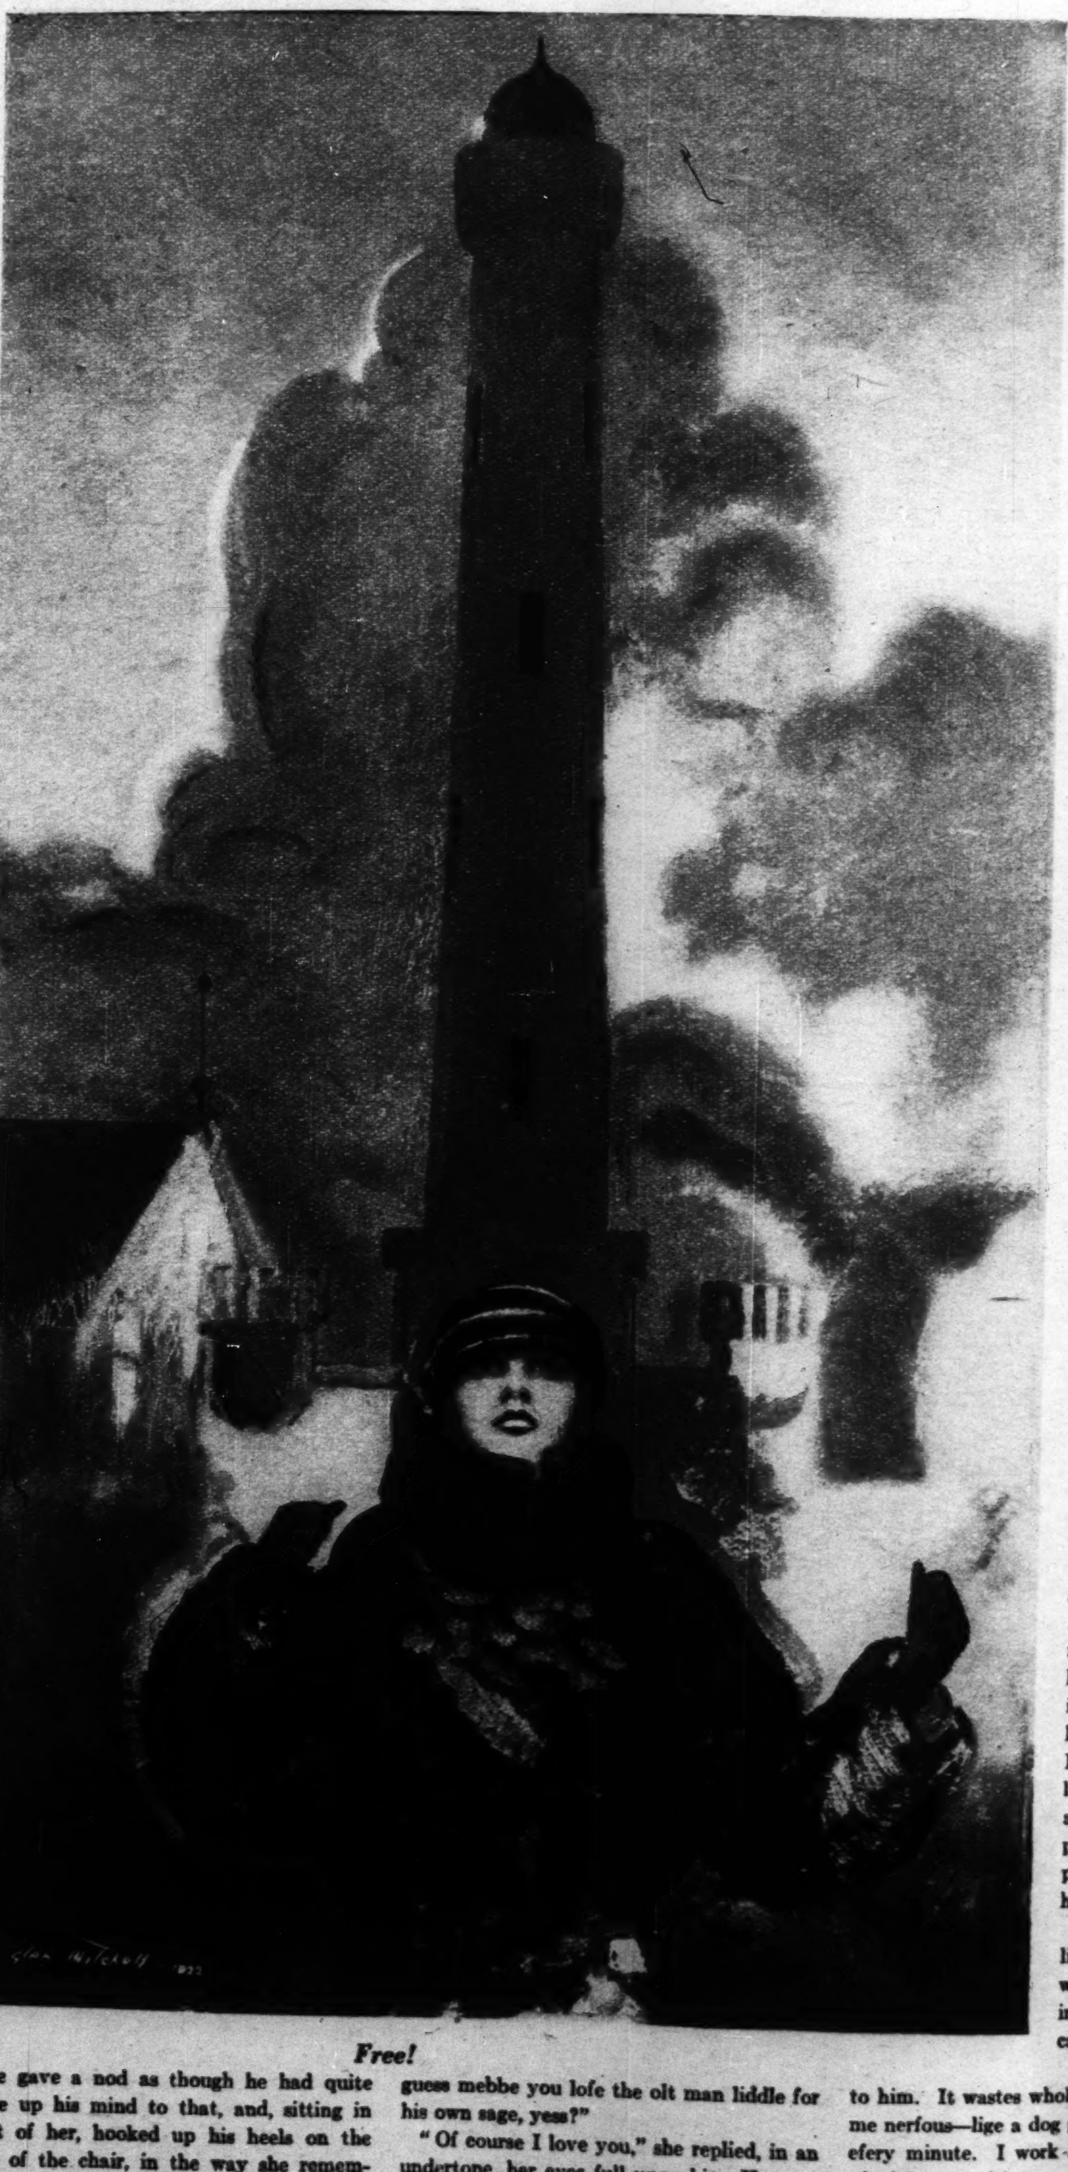
IT seemed to her the most pathetic question she had ever heard; and the sweet lilt in her voice came from the heart as she replied, "Yes, indeed, you have a friend! A good friend! If there's anything—you wish different, you must tell me. Is there anything—you wish different?"

Again for a moment his woebegone eyes examined her face, as though making it out anew. His thin hand went up to stroke the beard that was not there, so the fingers raked his hollow cheeks. With a kind of tragic whimsicalness, he remarked:

"When you gome oud here I am looging down and thinking mebbe it's bedder I go ofer, yess?" He made it a sort of question, as though provisionally submitting the point for her opinion.

She laughed, low and fondly, as though that were a sort of intimate little joke between them, and tucked her hand under his arm, saying, "That wouldn't do at all! Come inside and tell me about it." For when he put that tentative sort of question, she knew that something was very wrong. It called up her protective emotion for this little man. She spread sheltering wings.

The numb chill in his mind melting, he let her lead him into the roof room. "Whatever is wrong, you must tell me," she said, in a sort of intimate hush. "I'm going to be your friend."



Free!

He gave a nod as though he had quite made up his mind to that, and, sitting in front of her, hooked up his heels on the rung of the chair, in the way she remembered, clapping his little hands on the upthrust knees. He used to sit that way in their talks at Slow River.

"I tell you all aboud it," he announced. "Only you I tell, nobody else; because I guess mebbe you lofe the olt man liddle for his own sage, yess?"

"Of course I love you," she replied, in an undertone, her eyes full upon his. He considered that, almost impersonally, it seemed, and nodded:

"I belief so. Nobody else gares any more aboud him than an olt shoe. Gurlin, Grom, Harwood—they say he iss an olt mutt, a kind of idiot that got a twist in his prain that we get a great invention oud of. We get that invention oud lige you get peas oud of a pod and throw the pod away. That is what they all think."

BECAUSE he was not complaining but merely stating a fact—quite impersonally—Elizabeth's throat tightened.

"I tell you all aboud it," he went on. "That be good for my soul, yess? I ged all the lies oud of my system for once." With that whimsical, poignantly humorous touch which she knew aforetime, he added, "My goodness, that be some job—gedding all the lies oud my system. That tage some time."

"We can have hours," she assured him offhand. At any rate Nat had said that he would be engaged for an hour.

He deliberated, trying to marshal many facts; and tapped his capacious forehead with a meager finger.

"I had this invention in my prain. I could do it. I was sure of thad. But there was Gurlin, all while lige a fly buzz in your ear. He has his foolish, pig head ideas — his big elephant camera." He stretched his small arms to indicate the dimensions. "Half dozen lenses to tage one picture on top the other, for colors, and all such contrivances. It iss absurd, but that man got it stuck in his pig head. He goes insisting I worg about his foolish ideas. Me! I can't spend all my life to argue with him and ged called a plockhead for my pains. I haf to humor him."

She realized how little resistance he would offer to the irascible, stubborn camera maker.

"I pretend to listen to him. It wastes whole lot time. It [illegible] me nerfous—lige a dog gome barging at you efery minute. I work along my own ideas whad I can and humor Gurlin. Then Grom comes in—Grom."

ad a man! He iss smard to fool dy else—and fool himself worst in the end, yess? He lies to eferybody. He gomes buzzing to me aboud Gurlin. He says Gurlin will swindle me oud the invention—shuck oud the peas and throw away the pod. Well, I don'd lige that so much. I don'd lige Gurlin at all. So all the while Grom is buzzing to me—buzz, buzz! Why should I mage great invention and turn it ofer to Gurlin, when Gurlin hass only two decent ideas to begin with and I really worg it all oud myself? Grom, he get me a big fortune for my invention. All while buzz, buzz."

THE ROOM
THE ROOF

WITH perfect candor he explained, "Certainly, I know I'm big fool aboud business. I sign some kind contract with Gurlin and it says I don't get nothing. Grom finds that contract in the vault and reads it to me. Smard, lige that, Grom is. Well, I listen to Grom. I don'd lige get kicked oud with nothing after my invention is finished. I haf that invention finished then, in my prain. So we go to Harwood. Grom arranges that. He says we will show him some still pictures that I mage awhile back for experiment purpose. Those pictures are no good at all for motion pictures. But Grom says we got to ged him interested; he knows nothing aboud photography and lide; we show him those still pictures lige you show child a rattle; we got to get him interested. So smard Grom says.

"One of those pictures is stereoscopic—deep, round, lige you see photographic views in a stereoscope. Eggscept for experiment purpose it is just a swindle. If you ged eggsactly the right focus—put your chair in eggsactly the right spot—then you get that stereoscope effect. Mofe your chair liddle and you lose it. But Grom says that's the way to handle a lawyer—show him a rattle.

"So we begin with lying. But Harwood, my goodness! he don'd gare anything aboud liddle lying! Grom shows him my contract with Gurlin that he stole oud of the vault, and tears it up before Harwood's eyes, and Harwood is satisfied. He don'd gare so long he gods the invention. Then I go up to Slow River."

He rubbed his cheek and nodded.

"I cannod tell you aboud that because you would not understand. Nobody could understand without much study. He tell Harwood we get motion pictures in fresh, natural colors and the stereoscope effect. Thad mages it hard—so many galgulations; so much experiment. I haf it in my prain—the ride idea—but to worg it out tage long time. I mage six lenses. It must all be in the lens. You catch the rays there; you solf the problem there. Grom, he worg, too. I gif him credit. He has good prain on one side his head. The other side is all lies. He worgs, too. He understands quide a bid. I gif him credit for that.

"But he don'd haf the patience. He cannod wait. I gif him some credit, but he was nod a man of science. He don'd gare aboud idea and inventions, not a rap. He don't gare to mage a new idea gome true any more than Gurlin and Harwood. All he gares is the money. So he don'd haf patience. He can'd wait. Gomes July and Grom starts buzzing again. He says it tage hundred years—no man can worg it oud in a lifetime. He says Harwood is gedding restless and preddy soon he throw us oud unless we show him something; and then where we be with nobody to back us and buy our grub while we worg? He begins buzzing again; he says we god to show Harwood something or he throw us oud.

"Then he says if we mage this invention probably Harwood cheat us oud of it, same's he wanted us to cheat Gurlin. Harwood's a smard lawyer; he got plenty money; what can we do against him? He shuck oud the peas and throw away the pod. So Grom is always buzzing. Me? I want just peace and quiet to worg oud my invention in. But, my goodness! what peace do I haf with Grom always buzzing?"

He drew his fingers down his cheek and gave her an odd, sidelong glance, as though he would rather have covered up what was to follow.

"So, gomes long July and I led Grom starts some more shenanigans. I don'd worg at it myself—much—but I show him how. . . . Yes, I help him some. He is going to mage a fake picture to fool Harwood with. He takes motion pictures—a scene on the river and a scene in the woods—couple hundred feet of film. Then he treats the film . . . . That tegnigal process, now, it tage long while to eggsplain and probably you can'd understand anyhow. You mide say he painds the film. Call it painding the film. My goodness, that's some job! If you mage regular motion picture that way, probably it tage you couple years. He use only three colors, you see—mages simple scenes.

"Grom says he finish up this fake picture and show it to Harwood and he shage Harwood down for three, four hundred thousand dollars and then we go away somewhere and tage all the time we wand to finish up the invention. Of course, I know Grom don'd care anything aboud the invention then. He don'd belief in it any more. He wants to cheat Harwood—shage him down, that's what he calls it. He says, 'I trim him to the bone.' That's always Grom's ideas aboud eferybody—shage 'em down and trim 'em to the bone. He's quide a genius that way. Thad's kind of stuff he's always got in his head—'trim 'em to the bone.'

"YOU see whad a fine mess of lies it is. We cheat Gurlin, then we cheat Harwood, who helped us to cheat Gurlin, and then I guess mebbe Grom cheat me, yess? I don'd lige to ged so much mixed up in lies lige that. I can't hardly remember which lie is on top and which is under. No; I don'd lige that. I told Grom I don'd lige it. But then I don'd care about Harwood either. He cheats, too. All he cares aboud is the money. Anybody can haf all the pods that's lying around—cheat pods and all the rest—just so he geds the peas. I don'd care much if Grom shages Harwood down. But I can'd worg out a hard invention and lie all while, too. I ain'd got time to do both. Grom is all while buzzing, you see. Me? I just want peace and quiet to worg in. If Grom will ged me some money, so I can buy liddle grub and few tools and some pieces of glass—and then led me alone—he can do whad he liges with Harwood.

"So Grom's going to shage down Harwood and gif me some money and I'm going away. And Grom's going to tell Harwood I haf gone away because I'm sick and want to rest. That's fine humor, because that's the same kind of lie he cheated Gurlin with—tolt him I was sick and gone away to rest. Grom, he got great sense of humor lige that. He ged a hearty laugh oud of cheating Harwood with same kind of lie he cheated Gurlin with. I guess mebbe Grom should have been wriding funny articles for newspapers, yess?

"So I go away, and Grom thinks up another funny joke. Anyway, he tells me so. I go away, you see, and then Grom meets me up in Valley City and gifes me only five hundred dollars, because, he says, Harwood ain'd shage down as much as he eggspected. And he tells me this other funny joke. He tells me he told Harwood he killed me—gracked my head with a bottle and buried me in a trunk in the coal bin. Grom considers that fery humorous. I tolt you aboud Gurlin's big, foolish camera. Well, Grom stole that oud the vauld same time he stole the contract. He says, 'The olt lobster thinks it's worth a million dollars and some day I sell it back to him for hundred thousand. Or, anyway,' he says, 'it mages him crazy when he finds it stolen.' Maging Gurlin crazy amuses Grom fery much, too.

"So he steals that big camera and tages it up to Slow River in an olt trunk. Then after Gurlin and young Whiteside gome into the factory, that day when Peder Green chased 'em oud again, Grom thinks mebbe they find the trunk, and he buries it in the coal bin. I suppose that's whad gifes him the idea for that funny joke aboud telling Harwood he's killed me and buried me in the coal bin."

Bess thought: "So Curlin's camera was what Nat found in that trunk—and hid and lied about! And Krom had told him Steinman was dead and buried there." But the little inventor was going on with his confession:

"And Grom says he tolt Harwood that in order to find out how big a grook Harwood iss. He shows him the picture first and then tells him he gracked me ofer the head. If Harwood hands him ofer for murder he will lose the invention, so Harwood geeps his mouth shut. Thad's what Grom tells me that night up in Valley City when he gifs me fife hundred dollars. Mebbe it's true. But I don'd care so much aboud that funny joke of being gracked on head and buried in a coal bin. That's fery humorous for Grom, but it ain'd humorous for me. I don'd lige to be alone in the dark with Grom after that."

HE seemed to submit a point, candidly, for her consideration: "Mebbe that's all Grom wants, yess? Mebbe he tells me that to mage me scared of him, same's I'm scared of Gurlin, so I keep oud the way and let him do as he liges. Anyhow I'm good and scared of Grom after that. I admid it. All I can do is invent; I ain'd a hero. I guess mebbe Grom wants me to be afraid of him, yess?"

"Probably," she said, since he seemed to expect an answer.

"Yess, I think so. So I went away; but, my goodness, I can'd go away from that invention. An olt nutt, yess? I haf to think aboud that all while. I wand couple those lenses. So I haf to come back and try to ged 'em." He gave an affirmative little nod. "That's true lige I told the goroner. I haf to gome back for those lenses. So I sneag up here—kind of nutty old ghost, haunting the shob. I'm preddy nerfous, I assure you. So I fix bid of metal in the door. If anybody gomes in it falls down and I hear it. And you gome in with the safe man, lige I tolt the goroner. That's true. And Grom comes in and runs at me, shouding, 'I'm going throw you off the roof.'"

A claw-like hand went up to his cheek again. "I don'd know how that happened eggsactly. I pull oud the pistol and shood. That doctor says I shot twice. Mebbe I did. And Grom falls ofer dead. He would have fallen ride on top me only I jump oud the way. I guess he iss dead." He seemed to be sinking back into a depth of woe from which his hollow eyes looked out at Elizabeth.

"I guess he iss dead. Then some kind of crazy notions whirl round in my head. Nobody sees it. I think mebbe it pass for suicide—just some kind crazy notions whirling round in my head—all goming topsy-turvy, withoud any time to think. I run ofer to the typewriter there and write some kind liddle will and stick it in his pocket." For a moment he seemed, very woefully, to be considering the subject from an impersonal, scientific point of view. "I dunno where I ged that idea. It just gomes topsy-turvy. I write that kind of liddle will and stick it in his pocket."

He paused and cleared his throat, regarding her with that odd sidelong glance; then nodded, "So I lide oud. But last nide I read in the newspaper that Gurlin and young Whideside are in the room with Grom when he is killed. I haf to think aboud that. I don'd sleep much. Grom is a big fool and a big grook. I don'd lige Grom. Bud me? Cerdainly I god no right to kill him. I'm big fool and big grook myself. Cerdainly I god no right to kill him. Hiss blood is on my hands. I don'd lige Gurlin, either; but he shouldn't be locked up for that—and young Whideside, too, who iss a decend man. I don'd sleep much.

"But I god that same kind cowardice lige I have aboud Gurlin and Grom. Cerdainly, I ain'd a hero. I wand fery much to safe my own neck, too! So I think, preddy soon, 'Harwood is smard lawyer with a big pull; he geds me oud of this. I tell him I hand ofer the invention, then. He ged a man oud of anything for that invention.' That's whad I think. Gome eight o'clock I find oud where the detective office iss and go there and say I shot Grom, and I wand see Mr. Harwood. I tell 'em something aboud that shooting in self-defense, and say I want see Mr. Harwood ride away. So they send for Harwood and I tell him I got that invention all ride now, and I shod Grom in self-defense and he must ged me out of it. . . .

"He asks me some questions about the invention, and is satisfied I've god it; and then he says he ged me oud that shooting all ride; and he tells me what to say, and says he tell the others whad to say, and fix it all up, so I be free. Which he does, mebbe."

He looked over at her with a woeful earnestness and asked, "What you think aboud that? You think I'm all oud of that shooting for geeps?"

THE ROOM
THE ROOF

"O, yes!" she assured him. "I'm sure of that. After the coroner's verdict, nothing more will be done—I mean——" She stooped a little toward him and said, low, "This is the truth about it? The shooting happened just as you said?"

He nodded. "It is the truth. The shooting happened just that way."

"Then I'm sure that's the end of it," she replied, with relief.

He again regarded her questioningly: "Harwood, now—he can'd go back on that—haf 'em do it ofer again?"

"O, no; he couldn't do that," she affirmed.

He considered that a moment, and remarked, "Well, anyhow, if he goes back, I can go back, too, and mage it kind of hot for him, mebbe. Because he knows all the while Gurlin and Whideside didn't do that shooting."

SHE was wordless for a moment; and then heard herself—like another person—asking, "Why do you say that?"

"Because he gomes in, you see," he explained. "I shoot and I lide out, as I tolt the goroner; but I don'd lide out ride away because I can't. I wrote that kind of fool liddle will and stuck it in his pocket, and I'm going to lide oud, I guess; but it's all topsy-turvy whirling round in my head. I ain'd seen those lenses that I want. But Grom gomes in, you see, with his black bag. He drops that on the floor when he rushes at me. It's whirling round in my head; but I think mebbe those lenses are in that bag. I'm going to open it, but then I hear somebody at head of the stairs because Grom has left the door open, so I run and hide in the darg room there, where I hid before, when you and the safe man gome in. I got a place, squatting down under the bench behind a box. I show you if you lige."

She shook her head.

"No; you don't need to see it," he went on. "It's a place under the bench, squatting down. That's Harwood that gomes in, you see. In half a minute he pulls open the darg room door and looks in. He can'd see me for it's darg there and I'm squatting down under the bench. But I can see him plain as day. He's got Grom's black bag in his hand. You can easy see how it is: He gomes in and there's Grom dead on the floor and his black bag and there's nobody in sight. But Harwood gomes ofer and loogs in the darg room and thinks there's nobody there, either. He must think the man that shot Grom has run away. So he carries off that black bag. But he knows Gurlin and Whideside ain'd there yet.

"Well, I know Harwood brings the police in few minutes and they find me sure, so it's now or nefer. In minute I peeg oud that red glass and he ain'd in the room, so I know he iss run down stairs, and I god to take desperate chance or I be caught sure. So I lide oud, down the stairs; and sure enough I ged away all ride.

"That's the way it seems to me in my foolishness—that I ged away all ride. But I ain'd got away at all. Gomes along Gurlin and Whideside being locked up, so I god to go to the detectives. Then gomes along Harwood and I god to tell him I haf the invention finished so he geds me oud that shooting. Then gomes along Professor Somebody or Other that Harwood's going to haf worg at the patents with me. I'm supposed to be waiding for that Professor Somebody or Other now. So if you start lying it iss just one lie top another until they reach to the moon. My system is so full of lies that I guess if I'm dead and Harwood gomes in the room I haf to sit up in my coffin and tell him couple more lies."

He seemed again to sink back into his woe, like a body gradually settling down in water. He gave a long sigh and slowly nodded at her:

"That's what I pay for my sins. Once, I had this invention in my prain. Now I nefer ged it. I know that. Half hour ago, before you gome in, it go grack in my prain lige you break a stick in two, and I see for sure, lige daylight, that I nefer get it now. It is gone." He held up his two empty little hands, and slowly nodded again: "That's what I pay for my sins. It is worn oud here." He tapped his forehead.

She was bending forward, breathless: "You mean you haven't got the invention?"

"I god nothing," he replied. "I got five, six dollars' worth glass. That's all. Grom he's got fine fake pictures, worth mebbe ten dollars. That's all. The rest is nothing. Unless Professor Somebody or Other is big blockhead ignoramus he tells Harwood the lenses are no good. Once I could have done it. Now I nefer get it. It is gone. I guess mebbe Harwood be preddy mad when he finds that oud; but I don'd gare so much aboud that. He cheats, too. I was preddy much afraid he lock me up with those police again for the shooting; but you think he can'd do that?" he asked.

"He can't do that!" she affirmed.

"Well—cerdainly I ain'd a hero. I don'd want to be locked up. Otherwise I don'd gare so much aboud Harwood. And that's the whole mess of lies from beginning to end. I tell it all to you, for the good of my soul—and because mebbe you love the olt man a liddle."

Her eyes suddenly grew misty. She stooped forward and put her hand on his, saying, "I do love you. I am going to be your friend. Harwood shall not harm you. He shall give you some money. You can go away. Perhaps your invention will come back."

He shook his head. "It nefer gomes back to me. I am too olt; I haf tolt too many lies and shed Grom's blood. To somebody else it gome, but not to me. What gomes to me iss you love me liddle. Such an olt nutt and liar as I am can be grateful for that."

GOING down stairs she braced herself for the coming ordeal; but the tangled skein fairly unwound of itself; what she thought would be very hard proved easy. She had been in her cabinet only a few minutes when Harwood came bustling in from the conference in Mr. Martindale's room—alert and handsome and smiling; wound up for the triumphal last act of the drama.

"I've heard from Kersten," he told her, as he came in—a bouyant, nervous tension in his face. "He'll be here in half an hour." He gave a decisive, triumphant little nod. "Twenty-four hours now, and we'll have this thing finished!"

A sheaf of papers brought from the conference was in his hand, his face shone—certainly a very handsome, engaging, distinguished man!

She had been understanding him more and more; now she apprehended him completely: a dazzling show window, with a sorry, bedraggled stock of commonplace goods behind it; a sort of sawdust man, beautifully varnished. She apprehended that many men held him in good natured contempt, as a "four flusher," avid of notoriety as any actress; engaging in all sorts of activities for the purpose of keeping his name in the newspapers; owing his position to marriage; a greedy little boy in a candy shop, whose restless contriving, manipulating, and self-advertising mostly ended in futility. She had no anger, but felt sorry for him. So she stood up before him and spoke low and kind:

"It's all no good, Nat. The invention is worthless. Steinman has just been telling me the truth about it."

He was staring at her in an incredulous paralysis—which seemed somehow to scrape off the varnish and expose the dummy underneath. She put her hand on his arm and spoke lower—fairly crooning:

"Come in; I'll tell you about it." He let her lead him into his room and shut the door.

"Those pictures Krom showed us were faked. He painted the film or treated it some way. You get the stereoscopic effect only when you sit in a certain spot. They were just fooling you. There is no invention. I know Steinman is telling the truth now. Kersten will say so."

Harwood wetted his lips and sat down, dully, on a corner of his long, shiny desk, with the massy silver candlesticks on it, his hand still mechanically holding the sheaf of papers.

"I'm not angry, Nat. I feel only kind. You had Krom's black bag down here yesterday. I saw it when I came in. Steinman hid in the dark room after the shot. He saw you take the bag. You knew that Krom was shot before Curlin and Whiteside came into the roof room. Curlin's camera was in that trunk at Slow River." She was still speaking low and softly. "I'm telling you because you must see it is impossible for you and me to go on together. And there's no need now. You don't want me now, Nat. I'd be no help, but only a hindrance to you."

HE made a gesture of protest.

"No," she went on, low, "I'd only be in your way now. Perhaps I wouldn't have told you about the black bag if the invention had been genuine. For you might have wanted to hold me to my promise then. But without the invention you'll need money—a lot of money. I can't give you that. You must go back to Mrs. Belknap."

He sprang up, his face drawn, and cried, "You're throwing me over because I haven't won! Letitia Belknap was right, then, when she said it was money you wanted—not me! You're throwing me over!" It was the most discourteous, and the cruelest, speech he had ever made. But she knew he was greatly excited.

"No, that's not it," she persisted, gently. "But I can't help you now. I'd only be in your way. You must have money—a great deal of it. You've put a great deal of money into this affair, and it's gone wrong. Where does that leave you?"

"I don't believe it's gone wrong," he muttered—with no great conviction, for, in fact, the state of his affairs, if the invention had gone wrong, presented a picture that appalled him.

"Yes; it's gone wrong," she repeated. "You can't be happy without money, Nat. I know you now. I don't feel unkind, but I know you need money more than you need me. You must go back to Mrs. Belknap."

"You're throwing me over!" he cried again.

She smiled a little, sagely, and replied, "Well, let it go that way if you wish. I'm going now. Good-by."

He could not bear that. All he had felt before—of an enchanting miracle that had come to him in middle life and could never come over again—twisted his heart. He stammered entreaties; "No, Bessie! It isn't fair! If this fails I'll find something else. There'll be money enough. . . ."

But she proposed to finish it and murmured back, just above a whisper: "Krom's black bag, Nat. You let two men be accused of murder. Curlin's camera in the trunk. We can't go on. . . . By and by you'll be glad that we didn't."

It was pitiful when he dropped back on the desk, his face drawn, staring helplessly at her.

"Good-by!" she murmured, with kindness and pity, and hastened out. In her cabinet she hurried, picking up a few personal things with trembling fingers, and fled. Even in the elevator her heart raced. Only when she was out on the street, in the throng, did she feel that she was really free. Then, in glad relief, she gave a little laugh. . . .

Free! She felt a deep conviction that she owed Nat nothing; he would go back to Mrs. Belknap, with her money, and be far happier than she could have made him without money. . . . Free!

After a little she remembered Steinman and thought, "In two or three days I'll write Nat a letter saying he must give him a thousand dollars or so. He'll do it; he's not in the least mean that way." . . . Free!

SHE was walking to her hotel, and presently paused to look down the long perspective of Michigan boulevard, the city's proudest street. On her first day in Chicago that same perspective had fluttered her heart. She had dreamed of magic wands and the kingdoms of the earth. She laughed softly to herself now. . . . Free!

But free only for new ties and bonds, for as she turned to resume her course to the hotel the blood that sang in her veins said, "Where are you now, Robert Whiteside?" . . . He was going to call her up that evening. He had no money that she knew of, no wands, or kingdoms of earth; far from a house on Lake Shore drive, probably he'd be lucky if he could manage a small flat on an undistinguished street. All the same her blood sang, "Come courting, Robert Whiteside. I'm ready."

In a Chicago newspaper, which belatedly reached them in Montana, they read an announcement of the engagement of Letitia Belknap and Nathaniel Harwood. Which struck them as a huge and precious joke.

JOY TO THE WORLD !

LEATRICE JOY has that intangible and wholly desirable something known as charm. She can act. She can drive a car so wildly and so surely that while you gasp with fright, you pat yourself kindly on the back and tell yourself not to worry. She isn't afraid to wear unattractive and unbecoming clothes. And she looks like the last word when she's allowed to. Do you wonder that she's popular?

"Thanks, Tribune, for helping Mama find Scamp for me!"

WHEN Scamp strayed from home Marguerite was wild with grief. But it didn't take long to locate the pup. The long arm of a Tribune Want Ad reached forth, and Scamp was restored. (Marguerite's mother was telephoning The Tribune to tell them not to run the Want Ad any more—when Marguerite came through in such fine style with the heading for this page!)

Thrilling as this was for the baby, it wasn't new to the household. Marguerite's mother has used Tribune Want Ads in many ways: She never, for instance, keeps outworn furs, dresses, frocks—or furniture that has been replaced by newer pieces—she turns them into cash with Tribune Want Ads! The cook, Maria, who has become such an essential part of the establishment, came to them through Tribune Want Ads. Barter & Exchange and many other classifications have been often utilized in this household.

Tribune Want Ads are really wonderful little money makers! Every family can find use for them. They do away with much effort and expense—they save and make money for many thousands of people every day of the year! And Tribune Want Advertisers are making sure beforehand of what their advertising will do for them by using Want Ads that are adequately worded and sufficiently explanatory. Nearly thirty thousand requests have been received for the booklet "Wording a Want Ad to make it pay." It's free! Send for your copy now!

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

POOR NICK, POOR THING!

BY WM. DONAHEY.

It was a mighty lucky thing for Nick, the squirrel, that the Cook and Gogo happened to walk through the big woods. Had they gone around the woods, as they first thought of doing, they never would have found their friend, and that might have been the last of him—poor Nick! Gogo and the Cook had gone out for a walk, in spite of the fact that it was a mighty cold day. They were well bundled up, and as long as they kept walking they did not mind the cold. It was fun tramping through the soft snow, and presently the little fellows found themselves near the big woods.

"Let's go back through the woods," suggested the Cook.

"Why fo' you-all want to go through de woods?" asked the little colored Teenie Weenie. "De walkin' is plenty hard right out heah in de open, without climbin' ovah all dem sticks and leaves in de woods. I vote fo' to go home de same way we-all came."

"Ah, come on!" cried the Cook, and he set off for the path through the woods.

There was nothing to do but follow, and the colored Teenie Weenie grumbled a good deal as he shuffled along in the Cook's trail. The two Teenie Weenies walked for some time in silence, but suddenly the Cook stopped and bent over a trail that crossed their path.

"Whistling cherries!" exclaimed the Cook. "Look at this!"

The fresh tracks of a squirrel showed plainly, and among the footprints was a trail of blood.

"Land sakes!" cried Gogo, staring at the trail with wide eyes. "What fo' you-all make out of dis?"

"Looks as though a squirrel has been injured," answered the Cook. "We'll follow the tracks and see where they lead."

The little chaps hadn't far to go, for only a short way ahead they came across a squirrel lying in the snow.

"Why—wh—why, it's Nick!" gasped the Cook, bending over the squirrel. "What's the matter, Nick?"

"Shot," faintly answered the squirrel. "Hunter shot me. Was in a tree. Hunter shot me. I lay still in tree until hunter went away. Then came down and started for home, and I—I—I must have fainted."

"Go for help, Gogo! Run!" cried the Cook. "Bring the Doctor, quick!"

"Yas, sah. I's on my way," answered the little colored chap, and he seemed fairly to fly over the snow in the direction of the Teenie Weenie village.

There was a bad wound in the squirrel's neck, and the Cook did everything he could to stop the flow of blood.

In the shortest time Gogo returned with most of the Teenie Weenies. The Doctor soon gave the squirrel first aid, and then ordered the little people to move their injured friend.

"He can't lie here," said the Doctor. "He's a badly injured squirrel, and he must be carried to some place where he can be sheltered."

Soon the Teenie Weenies brought up some string, axes, and an old handkerchief. They then cut long poles, and next they made a sort of hammock to which they carefully lifted the injured squirrel. When Nick was comfortable the little men lifted the hammock to their shoulders and carried him to a hollow tree, where he was put into a good bed of soft moss and leaves.

Poor Nick was a mighty sick squirrel for many days, and if it hadn't been for the kind-hearted little Teenie Weenies it's hard to tell what might have happened. They fed him on hickory nut broth, and when he was stronger they gave him richer food, walnut and butternut meats. Little by little he grew stronger and stronger, until finally he was quite himself again, except for his whiskers, which had fallen out, due to the high fever he had had.

A sensitive skin should be cleansed this special way

"Dust is a harmful irritant to a sensitive skin"

Is your skin exceptionally sensitive and easily irritated?

This irritation may be due to dust; dust is a harmful irritant to a sensitive skin, and is often the real cause of common skin disorders.

Use the following simple treatment for a sensitive skin—you will find that it is the best method of correcting its tendency to become rough and painful on the least occasion:

EACH night before retiring dip a soft wash-cloth in warm water and hold it to your face.

Now make a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and dip your cloth up and down in it until the cloth is "fluffy" with the soft white lather.

Rub this lathered cloth gently over your skin until the pores are thoroughly cleansed. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm, then with clear, cool water and dry carefully.

On your face, the skin is more liable to disturbances than on other parts of your body. For this reason, the soap which you use daily on your face should be of the best quality obtainable.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

to have beautiful, soft hands

NO need to hide them or feel embarrassed when they're in use if they are soft, smooth, pretty hands.

Use lemons—rub the hands with half a lemon, night and morning, if the skin is dry, rough, red or cracked.

Note the transformation in a few days.

Lemon juice seems to affect most hands as no other agent can.

It's Nature's lotion, a whitener which millions use today to insure youthful looking hands.

Why not take advantage of it? See how it removes stains. Don't apply only to rough hands, but also to pretty hands for their protection after exposure to hard usage.

Begin now to use this method daily. Keep a half lemon handy in a saucer by the sink or wash bowl.

The richest juice, best for the hands, comes from California Sunkist Lemons. Be sure to get this kind. All first-class dealers sell them.

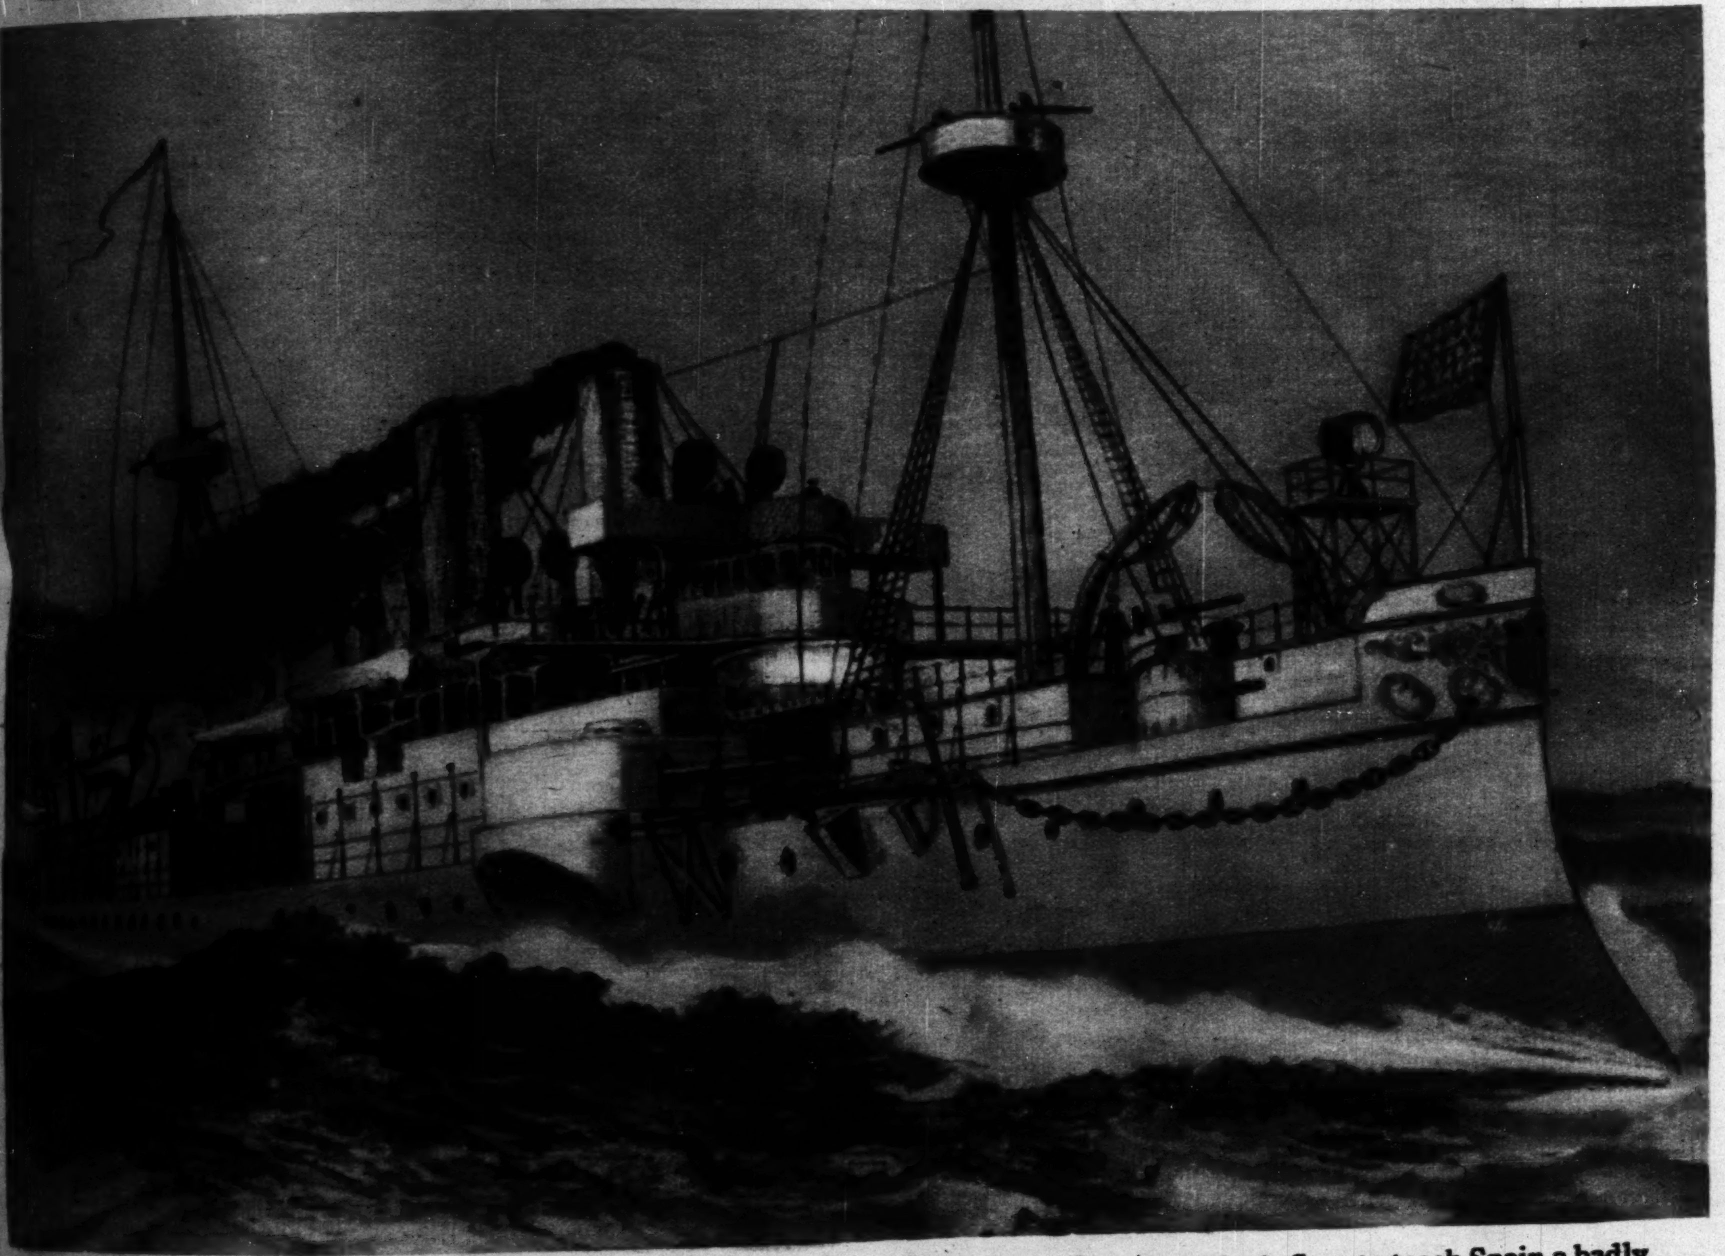
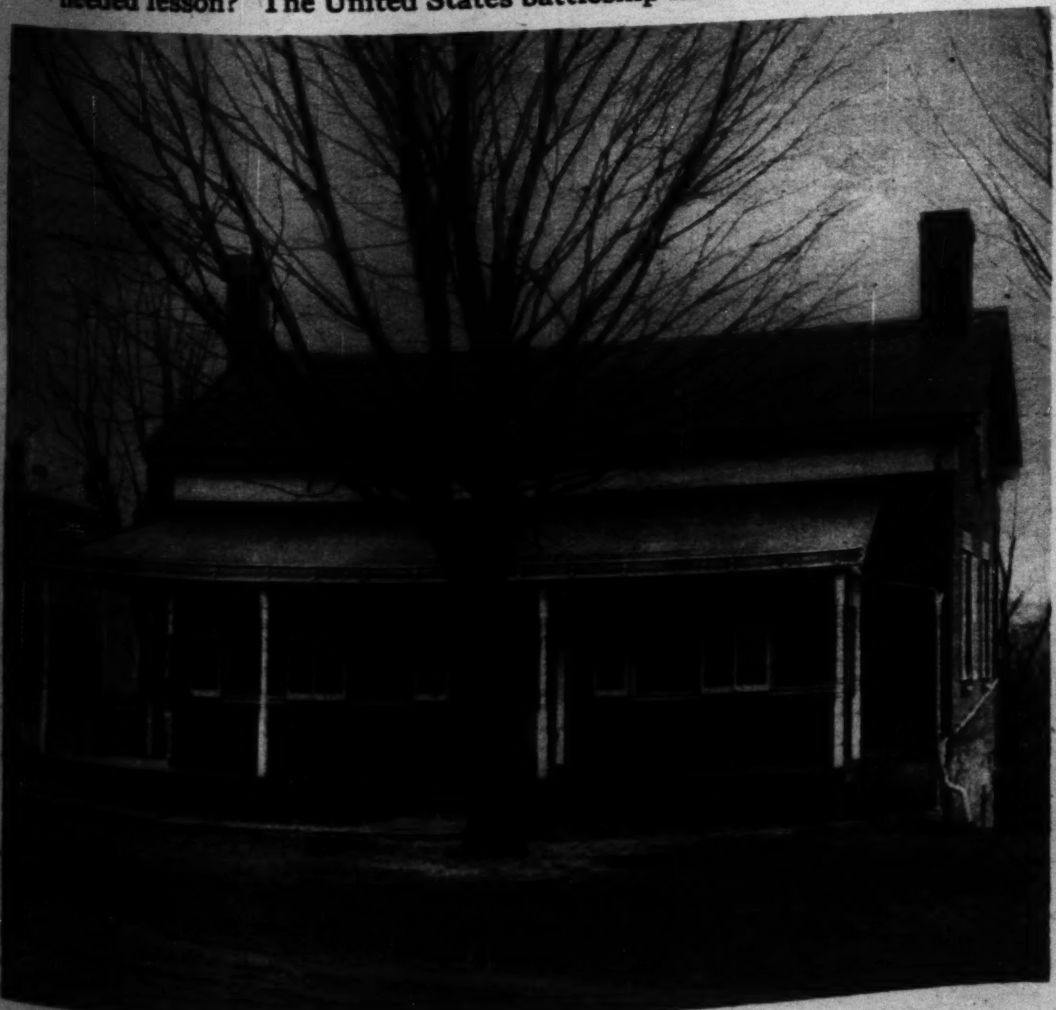
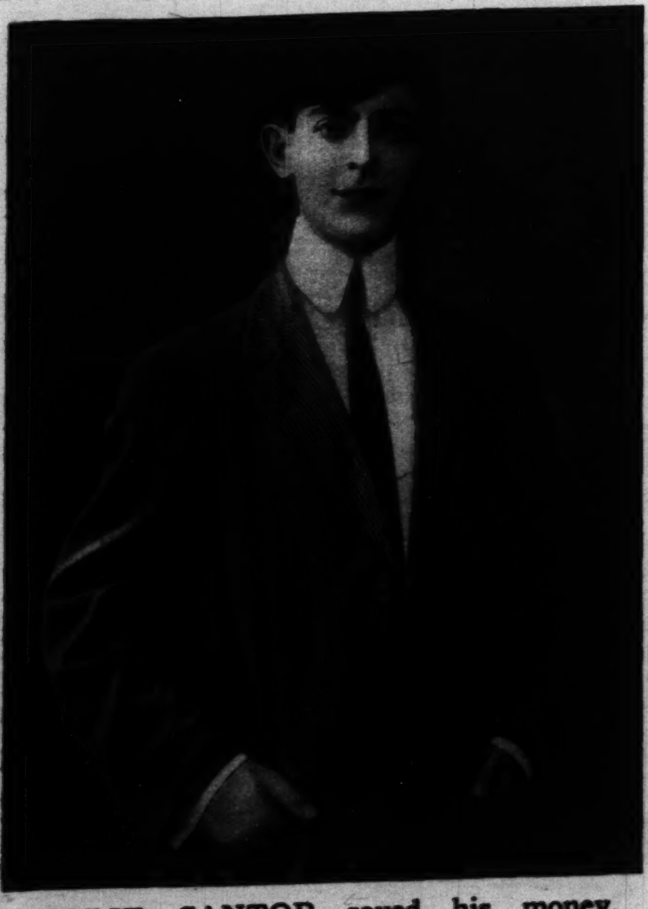
DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN----



REMEMBER THE MAINE! thundered across the whole United States and spurred Uncle Sam to teach Spain a badly needed lesson? The United States battleship Maine was sunk in Havana harbor twenty-five years ago, on Feb. 25, 1898.



THOMAS A. EDISON was unheard of? The wizard inventor was born on Feb. 11, 1847, in this little brick house on the crest of a knoll just outside the village of Milan, O.



EDDIE CANTOR saved his money, bought his first stage outfit, and had his picture taken in it so the Bowery managers would give him a job? That was in 1909, this is the picture, and he got the job. Snappy clothes they were, even if they didn't fit.

A 10-minute talk on Physiology which may make you ten years younger

It is a practically universal law of Nature that any muscle or organ which is not exercised regularly, sooner or later gives trouble. Yet we neglect the very ones on which health and life depend!

NINETEEN years ago Metchnikoff, famous scientist at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, startled the medical world with his announcement that in the human colon lay the secret of life and health.

His famous paper 19 years ago startled the medical world

The colon, or large intestine, is a hollow tube about four feet long, equipped with rings of muscles like a set of clamps. By contracting one after the other, these muscles force the contents of the tube along.

The colon is never empty. Into it drains the waste which the body must get rid of—dead cells, poisonous acids, waste from food which the body cannot use.

How the body removes this waste

The muscles of the colon must keep all this waste moving—otherwise it decays and generates deadly poisons which soak through into the blood and flood your whole system.

What this does to the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does to the muscles of your intestine—gives them normal, healthy exercise

Premature age, loss of vigor and vitality, skin and stomach troubles are the result. And as the body grows weaker, the way is left open for serious and even fatal disease.

That is why constipation is so dangerous. That is why the first thing your doctor wants to know—no matter what you consult him for—is: are these muscles acting regularly—freeing you of the poisons that gather in your system?

Why is Constipation so prevalent today?

The reason is simple. We inherited our bodies from ancestors who ate an abundance of the raw foods of the forest. Such foods created a bulk which gave the muscles of the intestine plenty of work to do, exercising them regularly and constantly. Today our civilization demands more delicate foods—marvellous in variety and in taste—but leaving the muscles of the intestine with too little work to do. This makes them weak and flabby—just like the muscles of your arm without exercise.

Drugs only increase the trouble

Drugs and cathartics will make the muscles act, it is true, but they do it by nervous irritation. That is not exercise. Each time it happens, it leaves the muscles weaker than before.

The only way to relieve constipation permanently is by giving these muscles natural, healthy exercise.

You can take your choice: either treacherous drugs which only make matters worse, or natural exercise of the intestinal muscles as nature intended! Either a losing battle with poisons that sap your vitality and cloud your brain—or the joy of vigorous lasting health!

The simple food that is restoring health to thousands

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them, and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Gently, regularly, they respond—easily and naturally the waste is moved along and out of your system!

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It must be eaten regularly to secure lasting results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk, or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

Appetite and energy restored—Yeast is the richest known source of Vitamin-B, on which health and vigor so largely depend. It is inexpensive and easily available. Men and women troubled with lack of appetite and energy, or faulty digestion, have found that these troubles disappear when they eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly. By helping to "tone up" the whole system and at the same time keeping it free from poisons, Fleischmann's Yeast enables you to eat more, and to get more benefit from the food you eat.

Skin and complexion cleared—Skin troubles are often danger flags of lowered vitality—generally associated with constipation. Fleischmann's Yeast is now established as a food which corrects the basic cause of many disorders of the skin.

That ruddy glow of health, that freedom from such unhealthy skin conditions comes only from perfect health within. Fleischmann's Yeast rids you of these disorders by increasing the number of white corpuscles in the blood and keeping stomach and intestines in a natural, healthy state.

HIGH SURTAXE SHRINK WH INCOMES GR

First of a series of six disp revenue problems.

BY WILLIAM HARD

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.–
ial.]—The problem of tax exe curities, federal and local, is rec today at Washington as bei foremost and most immediate American governmental proble only from the standpoint of t but also from the standpoint general prosperity of the whole try for all classes of people, ri poor.

In these dispatches this week
give an account of this probl it appears to the government investors and to taxpayers and being handled by congress.

The first feature of it is one goes far beyond the field of tax e securities and covers the whol

This feature is the astonishing of the rich from the surtaxes congress has placed upon the comes.

High Surtaxes Shrink.

I was told today by Mr. S.
bert Jr., who is Mr. Mellon's in command in the treasury ment, that the revenue of the tates government for the ye from the surtaxes of 25 per c over would not exceed $100,000, is from those surtaxes that c expected expressly to derive en sums of money. They are to nishing only a very small pr indeed of our total governme eral revenue.

Our total annual federal gov tal revenue nowadays is about 000,000. The surtaxes of 25 and over are therefore produc about 3 per cent of it. The imagines that the big bulk of den of supporting the federal ment has been shifted to the v

Declines to One-Half.

The surtaxes used to begin that level the surtax is 1 per

65 per cent. Taking all the together, from lowest to high calculating the revenue whi have produced for the federal ment we arrive at the followin ishing and alarming facts:

In the year 1919 these surta
duced $800,000,000. In the y they produced $590,000,000. In 1921 they produced only $450,00
Now the lowering of the

Therefore the decline in the from surtaxes from 1919 to 1 not be attributed to the new legislation. Nor can it be a to any notable decline in gene perity and in the taxable in taxpayers.

Figures are available from 1920 on taxable income rep

In 1916 this taxable income ported by all federal income t put together—was approxima billion dollars. In 1920 it wa had quadrupled.

Taxpayers Show Gain.

The total taxable income of has been going up. The from the surtaxes has bee sharply down.

This becomes painfully cle consider the taxable incomes to the federal government by ers having incomes of more th a year. The apparent d poverty of these taxpayers first sight seem to deserve a thetic tear. In 1916 they themselves as having been ab quire during that year a tota
—among them all—of appro
one billion dollars. In 1920 come had shrunk to approxima quarter of one billion dollars.
In other words, while the come of all federal income t had been multiplied by four, come of the taxpayers having of more than $300,000 a year divided by four. While the had been quadrupled, t had been quartered.
